Much interest has been aroused by the performance by Miss Maud Hildyard and company of the above-named drama, and good houses have been the rule throughout the week. The chief brunt of the work falls on the shoulders of Miss Hildyard, whose impersonation of Lola Selby is remarkable for a quite unusual degree of power and brilliance. Rarely indeed is it one's good fortune to see the more or less conventional adventuress of melodrama played in the perfectly human and natural, but none the less effective, style adopted by Miss Hildyard, whose expression of sardonic humour and fierce contempt for things in general lend to the character a reality which in less capable hands it might easily lack. Another clever piece of acting comes from Mr. Charles Vivian, whose Guy Rogan is one of the most self-possessed and really admirable stage villains that we have seen for a long time. Mr. Herbert Sidney makes the by no means large part of Richard Wilson stand out by his carefully-thought-out characterisation of the bluff Colonial, who, like everyone else, becomes a tool in Lola's hands. Mr. Bernard Copping cleverly doubles the parts of Sir Henry Merton and Jack Merton, and makes the most of the fine chance afforded him in the mad scene. Miss Doris Digby gives a sympathetic rendering of Molly Merton, and infuses a good deal of sweetness into a somewhat characterless rôle. Mr. A. C. Hardie submits a strong impersonation of James Selby, and Mr. Herbert Evelyn does as well as can be expected in view of the small chance afforded him as Captain Harry Lambert. The low comedy element in the play is liberally catered for, and the efforts of Miss Isa Bellington as Selina and Mr. Willie Scott as Bill Brass in this direction are greeted with hearty and continuous laughter.

THE TERRISS.

On Monday, April 30,
the Drama, in Five Acts, by T. Craven, entitled
"THE STOWAWAY."

The members of the talented stock company, who have been doing such good work at this theatre for a long time past, are this week rendering an excellent account of themselves in the well-known drama The Stowaway. Mr. Ashley Page, the popular leading man, gives an admirable reading of the part of Tom Ingliss, and the strong regard in which the audience hold him is shown by the cheers which greet his every appearance. Mr. John Sargent, an actor of considerable versatility, gives an excellent character-sketch of the waif Dicky Dials, and he extracts much fun out of the part, especially in Act III. Mr. C. J. Collins gives a powerful impersonation of the villainous Charles Etherington; and Mr. Johnny Chippendale makes the utmost of his few opportunities as the dude Percy Ewart. Mr. H. J. Barrett is excellent as Paul Ingliss. The two rogues, Job Hickey and Sandy Prowse, are well represented by Messrs. C. A. Chandler and E. Morgan respectively. Miss Maud Harris gives another of her pleasing and pathetic representations of child life as the newsboy Chucky, and also sings a good song; Miss Marion Denvil acts with her usual charm and deep feeling as Althea Dale; Miss Mattie Everett is good as Jeffrys; and Miss Georgie De Lara plays sympathetically as the unfortunate Florence Etherington. The scenery and effects are excellent.

THE BRIXTON.

On Monday, April 30,
the Drama, in Five Acts,
by Henry Pettitt and Sir Augustus Harris, entitled
"HUMAN NATURE."

Although this drama has been before the public for twenty years, that it has not lost the ability to attract a large audience is apparent by the crowded house that witnessed it on Monday. Mr. Frank Harding, who is responsible for the production, has engaged a good all-round company. Mr. Albany Ward, as Captain Temple, is a fine example of the British soldier, playing with tact and discretion a most exacting part; a polished and smooth-tongued villain is the Paul de Vigne of Mr. Frank Harding, and he has an excellent accomplice in Matthew Hawker, who is smartly played by Mr. Charles Langley. Stephen Mardyke, an insignificant part, is brought into prominence by the capable rendering of it by Mr. Orlando Daly. Warm praise must be given to Mr. Charles Dodsworth; for a really clever study of Joe Lampkin; Mr. Lytton Grey causes much laughter as Horatio Spofkins, who occasionally breaks forth into poetry; and he is ably seconded in his efforts by Miss Marie Wright, who presents a humorous portrait of Maggie Wilkins. Miss Agnes Imlay as Nellie Temple has a part that suits her admirably, and which she invests with the necessary amount of pathos, eliciting the sympathy of her audience. A pathetic performance of the waif Dick is presented by Miss Irene Ross, her death scene in the last act moving many to tears. Frank, Temple's child, is naturally played by Miss Dorie Mason. The character of Cora is a rather arduous one, but Miss Leah Marlborough is equal to the occasion, and is quite successful in the part. The rôle of Mrs. Lampkin is ably undertaken by Mrs. Stanislaus Calhaem; Miss Cissy Farrell is good as the kind-hearted Mrs. Lulworth. The minor chaarcters are in capable hands. The drama is well mounted, the spectacular effects being worthy of special mention.

GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, April 30,
the Play, in Five Acts, by W. G. Wills, entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

The well-known historical play by W. G. Wills, founded on the episode of the divorce of Napoleon and Josephine, is drawing good houses to the Fulham. The rôle of the unhappy Empress is finely played by Miss Edith Cole, who is supported by a capital company. Her rendering of the part has lost none of its delicacy and refinement, and none of its tragic power. She invests the earlier scenes with Napoleon with great charm, and later, when his star is on the wane, she is very successful in portraying the tender and loyal affection which—as represented by the playwright—she still feels towards the husband of her youth. In the fine scene at Malmaison, when Josephine is visited by Marie Louise at Napoleon's command, Miss Cole is afforded good opportunity of showing power and dignity, and she certainly rises to the occasion admirably. Mr. Frank Lister's impersonation of Napoleon is one of great merit. In make-up, appearance, and manner he succeeds in creating a vivid impression of that most remarkable man. Mr. Joynsen-Powell contributes a careful study of the arch-diplomatist Talleyrand, and Mr. St. George Frere and Mr. George Howard as Marshals Murat and Augereau both make stately figures in their handsome uniforms, the latter also showing a pleasant sense of humour. Mr. T. P. Haynes is eminently amusing in his study of the inn-keeper Grimaud, as is also Mr. George Hudson as Bob Royal, a Jack Tar of the period. As the Marquis de Beaumont Mr. G. W. Cockburn displays considerable dramatic power; and Mr. F. Powell as Dr. Corvisart and Mr. P. H. Vernon as Lord Keith fill their parts satisfactorily. The part of Marie Louise is in the hands of Miss Elizabeth Watson, who makes the most of her opportunities. The light comedy of Miss Clara Earle as Stephanie de Beauharnias is bright and natural, and little Miss Marion Ryder is a charming representative of the little King of Rome. Other good studies are those of Miss Irma Foldi as Blanche d'Hervas, Miss Joan Vaughan as Angelique de Varennes, Miss Helena Meadows as Mother Lomas, Miss E. Wilsden as Jeanne la Terrene, and Miss Loyale Frere as the Governess. The play is excellently mounted, the uniforms and dresses being rich and splendid, and the scenery, by W. T. Hemsley, of the best.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, April 30, the Drama, in Five Acts, by George Sims and Henry Pettitt, entitled
"IN THE RANKS."

A revival of the popular Adelphi drama In the Ranks, by a company under the direction of Mr. John M. East, is provided for the patrons of the Alexandra this week. As Ned Drayton, Mr. Horace Hunter plays with considerable vigour and power, and manages to secure a fair amount of sympathy for this deeply-wronged hero. As Gideon Blake, Mr. Alfred Harding is duly sinister in appearance and truculent in manner. Mr. Teddy Coleman has the humour of the piece in his safe keeping, and Joe Buzzard, as presented by him, is a prime favourite. Mr. Talbot Homewood is successful as Captain Holcroft, and the hop-picker is well played by Mr. J. P. Dryden. Miss Lily Hammersley is a pathetic Ruth Herrick, and Barbara Herrick is capably presented by Miss Agnes Paulton. As Mrs. Timmins and Mrs. Buzzard, Misses Johnstone and Blanche Stanley respectively do well. The performances of the parts played by Messrs. Harris, George Traverner, E. Godfrey, and Harry Bristowe are deserving of a word of praise. There are many other parts played, with varying degrees of success.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, April 30,
the Musical Comedy, entitled
"THE GIRL FROM KAY'S."

Although comedy, drama, tragedy, and other forms of stage plays all receive a fair measure of appreciation in Kingston-on-Thames, musical comedy and comic opera have always been the greatest favourites with playgoers in the riverside town; and Mr. Peter Davey, the astute manager, knowing the wishes of his patrons, has arranged for production at the County of practically all the "good things" that have of late achieved success in the West End. The attraction this week, The Girl From Kay's, which is being presented by a strong company captained by Mr. George Dance, was welcomed on Monday night by a full house. Miss Beatrice Poole, in the title-rôle, has won a host of friends by her charming and engaging acting; Miss Emily Taylor as Nora Chalmers and Miss Mabel Dent as the maid Ellen also have achieved success in their respective parts. A most capable performance is that of Mr. J. S. Durant, who plays Harry Gordon, and Mr. Reginald Grey scores well in the part of the Hon. Percy Fitzthistle. The low comedy element is admirably sustained by Mr. H. C. Barry as Max Hoggenheimer, and by Mr. Tom Seymour as the porter at the Flacton Hotel. There are a most capable chorus, and an augmented orchestra under the ægis of Mr. Arthur L. Spittle.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, April 30, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Arthur Shirley, entitled
"THE BOOM OF BIG BEN."

After a long interval the above drama has returned to the Grand, Messrs. Knight and Denham's company being responsible for the production. Mr. Shirley, as a dramatist, is a name to conjure with, and in making this adaptation he has displayed his usual skill, the play always being interesting, and at times really powerful—particularly so in the last scene of the third act. Much interest centred round the appearance of Mr. F. Powell. Mr. Powell is, of course, known throughout the provinces as Jagon and Simonnet in The Grip of Iron. He is a clever actor, and presented a most interesting portrait of Captain Galloway, showing artistic restraint in that character. Mr. Harry Scott as Gilbert Galloway gave an excellent performance, using a good delivery with effective results. Mr. George Denham as Battleby, the "good angel" of the piece, submitted a clever reading; Mr. Stanley Bedwell as Siegenberg played the rôle in the conventional way, and gained the usual reception from the cheaper portions of the theatre; Mr. John Brittain as Prebble supplied the welcome comedy relief with great success; and Mr. Harry Agar Lyons as Dunby Whisk was responsible for an amusing study of a man about town. Miss Nellie Fletcher as Marjorie Galloway was quite excellent, scoring most unmistakably with a sympathetic performance; Miss Hilda Baynton as the daughter was also entitled to warm praise for a clever assumption; Miss Mildred Cottell as Olive Lovell contributed a satisfactory rendering of a certain type of lady, her death scene being skilfully enacted. Meedames F. Strickland, C. Hayes, Gwynne Spencer, and D. Denn, and Messrs. L. Howe, G. Child, and Henry Villiers were satisfactory in minor parts. The mounting and dressing of the play were on a very complete scale, and the incidental music by Mr. C. Howard Cole was of value to the production.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, April 30,
for the first time in London, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Nita Rae, entitled
"HER LOST SELF."

Wilfred Daventry ....MR. PERCY CARNE WARAM
Norman Esmond .....MR. CHAS. KEAN
Paul Kimberley .....MR. ADRIAN LOVETT
Victor Elsworth .....MR. FRED LILLYWHITE
Abraham Cohen .....MR. L. W. HALFPENNY
Tom Flyaway .....MR. HORACE BUCKLEY
Carlisle Montmorency ..MR. DEVERE LAWRENCE
Chief Warder .....MR. WALTER SEVEN
Snooks .....MASTER JOHNNIE JOHNSON
Dorothy, Lucille .....MISS DORA HAMMERSLEY
Rachael Cohen .....MRS. EDMUND LYONS
Bridget Mahone .....MISS NELL INGRAM
Dorothy Daventry .....MISS MIN JOHNSON
Wardress .....MME. STONY FLINT
Philippine Marcel .....MISS FRANCES DELAVAL

Crime and the camera are again associated in the new melodrama Her Lost Self, which was originally produced at the Prince's Theatre, Portsmouth, on Dec. 18, and this week reaches the metropolitan area. The plot of the piece is a little complicated, but the tangled threads are skilfully gathered up to form several striking situations. The large audience on Monday were completely engrossed in the piece, and plenty of brisk humour had the effect of arousing hearty laughter. The lady to whom the title of the play has special reference is Philippine Marcel, who some time before the rising of the curtain had deserted her husband, Paul Kimberley, in favour of his artist friend Norman Esmond. The act so affects Paul that he loses his reason, and wanders about the country seeking his spouse. Meanwhile Esmond has transferred his affections to the virtuous wife of Wilfred Daventry, who scornfully resents his importunities; but circumstances combine to make her husband think Mrs. Daventry is faithless, and in a fit of fury he throttles her and leaves her for dead. The young wife, however, has only fainted, and Philippine, who has grown jealous of Mrs. Daventry, consummates the tragedy by stabbing her to death. At this moment the demented husband of Philippine appears at the door with a camera which he has found, and unconsciously takes a snap-shot of the terrible deed.

The plate remains undeveloped for nine years, a period which elapses between the first two acts, during which Wilfred Daventry, flying from the consequences of his guilt, has taken refuge in America, where he becomes a millionaire. He returns under an assumed name, and meets his little daughter, now grown to womanhood, at a garden party given by Philippine's father, a disreputable Jew, whose speciality is the arranging of marriages. Wilfred is moved to reveal his identity to his daughter, who is horrified to learn from her father's lips that it was he who murdered her mother. The statement is overheard by Philippine, who immediately gives Wilfred in charge; but the tables are turned by the unscrupulous Norman Esmond, who has secured from Paul the photograph recording the murder of Mrs. Daventry, and produces it as proof of Philippine's guilt.

The wretched woman is next seen in the condemned cell in a female prison, where she is awaiting death. She is deserted by her betrayer Esmond, but her forgiving husband, now restored to reason but broken in health, comes to see her, and eagerly accepts Philippine's suggestion that she shall change clothes with him and thus effect her escape. The ruse is successful, and Philippine gets away, but the police are quickly upon her track, and the hunted woman, to escape her pursuers, plunges into a river. She is thought to be drowned, but eventually turns up in the studio of Norman Esmond, who takes her for an apparition. He attempts to strangle her, and imagines he has succeeded; but the woman recovers sufficiently to stab her assailant to death, and then turns the knife upon herself. With the forces of evil thus removed there is no bar to the happiness of Wilfred Daventry and his daughter, who has found a husband in a virtuous young friend of the villain.

The representation of the piece is of a more than usually arduous nature, but it is just to say that the exponents of the various parts acquitted themselves with the greatest credit. Miss Frances Delaval, who heads the company, played the revengeful Philippine in a hard, uncompromising manner that particularly suited the rôle. She was ferocious and passionate as became the part, but there were times when the laughter of the audience was compelled by the grim humour it contained. Mr. Percy Carne Waram gave a resolute and earnest portrayal of the character of the jealous husband, Wilfred Daventry, cleverly working up the poignant situation at the end of the first act. His appearance after his long exile was well in keeping with the character, and the quiet emphasis with which he acted was very telling. Miss Dora Hammersley was a bright and sunny exponent of the dual rôle of Mrs. Daventry in the first act and the daughter Dorothy in the later divisions of the piece, and though she has twice to simulate the agonies of death and to undergo considerable violence, she managed to preserve a charm of manner and a prepossessing appearance which made the part captivating. A pathetic impersonation of the unfortunate Paul Kimberley was given by Mr. Adrian Lovett, whose appearance and delivery were quite in consonance with the part, and won general sympathy. Mr. Chas. Kean, who played the unscrupulous Norman Esmond, had not to portray the customary attributes of the villain, as, beyond his lustful propensities, he seemed to be an ordinary member of society. This view of the character was happily realised by Mr. Kean, whose sang-froid and polished style added greatly to the effect. The fun of the piece was sustained in a large degree by Mr. L. W. Halfpenny, who as Abraham Cohen imparted to the rôle of the conventional stage Jew a flavour of originality. He played the part on broad comedy lines, and exacted a heavy tribute of laughter, a fair share of which was due to the efforts of Mrs. Edmund Lyons, who played the expansive Mrs. Cohen with quaint sprightliness. Mr. Horace Buckley also contributed to the merriment of the evening by his genial assumption of a "tiger" named Tom Flyaway, who sings duets with his sweetheart Bridget Mahone, a young lady vivaciously represented by Miss Nell Ingram. Mr. Fred Lillywhite as Victor Elsworth, alluded to in the programme as "an honest Englishman," quite realised the description by his sincere and gallant bearing and refined style. Miss Min Johnson acted with touching sentiment and rare naturalness as little Dorothy Daventry, the child of the first act, and tiny Carrie Johnson, described as the "smallest comedienne in the world," contributed specialities, which included an imitation of Mr. Harry Lauder in "Stop yer tickling, Jock," and an impersonation of an Irishwoman in a song remarkably like one that used to be sung by the late Pat Feeney.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, April 30,
the Musical Comedy, entitled
"THE EARL AND THE GIRL."

This week musical comedy is again the attraction, and Mr. William Greet's principal company is paying a return visit in the above popular musical piece. Crowded houses have testified that the popularity of The Earl and the Girl is in no way diminished. Mr. Percy E. Wright looks hand some as the Hon. Crewe Boodle, and sings capitally, scoring well with his military song, "Here come the Grenadiers"; Dick Wargrave has a sprightly representative in Mr. Percy Carr, who possesses a pleasant voice, and uses it to great advantage in "The Cosy Corner Girl" and "The Mediterranean." Miss Aimee Gray sings sweetly, and makes a girlish little Elphin Haye, her song "In Zanzibar" being much appreciated; Miss Florence Imeson is a fascinating Daisy Fallowfield, and sings "Sammy" with the most successful results; Mr. William Stephens causes roars of laughter by his quaint and natural acting as Jim Cheese, the dog trainer, and soon becomes a great favourite with his audience; his sweetheart, Liza Shoddam, is excellently played by Miss Dot Carey, the "coster" accent being capitally assumed. Downham, the American solicitor, and Talk, a Jewish lawyer, are well-considered character-sketches in the clever hands of Mr. Will Hindson and Mr. J. C. Graves respectively. Mr. George H. Curzon makes a fire-eating Bunker Bliss, and the landlord of the Fallowfield Arms has an appropriate representative in Mr. Fred W. Puttrick. Miss Gladys Fontaine looks the part of Mrs. Shimmering Black to the life, and acts with much spirit. Miss Helen Langton makes a stately Miss Virginia Bliss. There is a large and exceptionally well-trained chorus. The orchestra is under the able direction of Mr. Evelyn Baker. The scenery and effects are beyond reproach.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, April 30,
the Drama, in Five Acts,
by Geo. R. Sims and Arthur Shirley, entitled
"TWO LITTLE VAGABONDS."

Great success attended the presentation of the above touching drama at the Standard last Monday. The reception the piece gained was enthusiastic in the extreme. The scenes were all excellent specimens of brush-work, and the staging left nothing to be desired. The part of George Thornton was admirably portrayed by Mr. William D. Fazan. He made a careful contrast between the tenderness of the loving husband and the harshness that later possesses Thornton. Mr. Sidney Vautier scores a success as Captain Darville; Mr. Dunstan Haye does all that is possible with the part of John Scarth; a capital piece of acting is contributed by Mr. John F. Traynor as Bill Muggins, alias "The Gaffer." He works extremely hard throughout the play, and is well received. He is admirably assisted by Mr. Frank Gordon as Dido Burke and Mr. Fred Archer as the Cough Drop. An intensely pathetic and life-like portrayal of Marion Thornton is supplied by Miss Valerie Crespin, who plays with considerable feeling and is greatly appreciated. Miss F. Russell Spiers does full justice to the rôle of Barbara Scarth, playing throughout with much skill; Miss Muriel Clay is a highly satisfactory Sister Randall; and Miss Marie Pritchard takes advantage of every opportunity offered as Biddy Mullins. The two little vagabonds are most capably represented. As Dick Miss D. Rosslyn Vayne plays with life and vigour, and as Wally Miss May Hollom touches the hearts of all with a performance of exceptional ability.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, April 30, the Grand Opera, in Four Acts, by Meyerbeer, entitled
"LES HUGUENOTS."

The members of the Moody-Manners Opera Company are giving the patrons of the pretty Notting Hill Gate theatre a welcome chance of hearing them in their varied répertoire. The performances of this, the first week of their stay, comprise the operas Les Huguenots, Eugene Onegin, Tannhäuser, The Marriage of Figaro, Carmen, and Eugene Onegin at to-day's matinée and Maritana in the evening. The melodious music and tragic story of Les Huguenots received ample justice at the hands of the capital company appearing therein, and the augmented orchestra under the direction of Herr Richard Eckhold, and it was well mounted and staged, whilst the chorus are excellently drilled and stage-managed. Mr. Joseph O'Mara sings admirably as Raoul, and also acts well in the somewhat unsympathetic rôle of the young Huguenot leader; especially good is his song of defiance in Act III. and passionate outburst of love in the last act. The fifth act, showing the death of Raoul and Valentine in the streets of Paris, is wisely omitted. Mme. De Vere is in fine voice as Valentine, and sings the difficult music allotted to her quite unexceptionably. Miss Kate Anderson creates a very pleasing impression both by her singing and acting as Marguerite de Valois; Mr. William Dever is a handsome and sweet-voiced Count de Nevers; Mr. Charles Magrath is a dignified and impressive Count St. Bris; and Mr. Charles Manners wins great applause by reason of his splendid singing and distinction of manner as the staunch and robust Huguenot Marcelle. Other minor parts are efficiently rendered by Messrs. G. Lumb, V. Brodo, H. B. Rendle, and others, nor must we forget the highly creditable rendering of the part of the page Urbano by Miss E. Alvord.

THE ELLEN TERRY CELEBRATIONS.

The dominant note in the performance at His Majesty's on the 27th ult. was struck on the appearance of Miss Ellen Terry, who for that night played Mistress Page in The Merry Wives of Windsor, in celebration of her jubilee on the stage. Cheer after cheer rang out when the well-beloved actress, radiant with smiles, appeared before the footlights, and the enthusiasm was continued at high pressure throughout the evening. The popular actress was the life of the performance, and enraptured the audience by her charm and gaiety. Mr. Beerbohm Tree entered fully into the spirit of the evening, playing Falstaff with added zest, and contributing in all possible ways to the special significance of the occasion.

The event of the evening came at the end of the play, when a little epilogue, written in verse by Mr. Louis N. Parker, was delivered, to the accompaniment of continuous applause. Its text was as follows:—

MR. TREE: Stop, mistress, stop! Our Will has had his way,
But now you're in my house, and I can say
What Shakespeare never thought of in his play.
Stand here, dear sister-artist, Britain's pride,
The Genius of her stage personified,
Queenlike, pathetic, tragic, tender, merry—
O rare, O sweet, O wondrous Ellen Terry!
For us, your comrades, who unresting give
Our toil to make the plays of Shakespeare live,
What can we do, but bow before the art
Which probes even Shakespeare to his very heart,
And summons to our half-bewildered ken
Ophelia, Juliet, Portia, Imogen,
Beatrice, Katharine, or, with thoughts of death,
The conscience-stricken Queen of grim Macbeth?
Nor in the glittering catalogue let not
The dreams of later authors be forgot:
Ibsen, Dubourg, Wills, Barrie, Bernard Shaw—
You make the bricks as they supply the straw.
Jack Falstaff thrills behind his monstrous mask,
Watching how greatly you achieve your task,
And feels the fragrance that about you clings
From all the roses of your fifty Springs.
Roll, Drums! and flourish, Trumpets! Let the cheers
Many a long day re-echo in your ears!
But, through their clamour, may my whisper move you:
We praise you; we admire you; and—we love you!
[A ticket is sounded and the people cheer.]
[Miss Ellen Terry stands in pretty bewilderment and confusion.]

MISS TERRY: O, Mr. Tree—I—I cannot find a word——
[A dove flies down, bearing a document. A fairy takes the document from the dove's neck and hands it to Miss Terry.]
A FAIRY: Here, Ellen Terry—from a little bird.
MISS TERRY (greatly relieved): Ah—! Thank you!—
Can I trust myself to read?
You know how much indulgence I must need—!
[She reads from the document.]
I want to thank you—all of you—I see
Through tear-dimmed eyes, your love envelop me,
Wrap me as 'twere within a shining cloud,
And I am very humble—very proud—
I want to say—I want to say—alas!
These written words are but as sounding brass
And tinkling cymbals, for at such a time
Silence were better than a puny rhyme.
[To Mr. Tree.]
Shake hands!—I thank you!—Phrases have I none.
I pray you leave me here awhile alone.
[Manager's Stage Direction.—Mr. Tree kisses her hand ceremoniously (as though endeavouring to hide a life-long love), and at a motion from him the others bow and curtsey to her. Then all file out silently, leaving her alone with the audience.]

The stage direction was not followed strictly to the letter, for Mr. Tree had another duty to perform, and that was to introduce a deputation from the Playgoers' Club, headed by Mr. B. W. Findon, who read the following address:—

"For the first time in the history of the Playgoers' Club we find ourselves in the position of being able to publicly make known our appreciation of a great artist.

"The life of the Playgoers' Club is practically co-existent with the brightest days of the Lyceum, that wonderful page in the annals of the English stage of the Victorian Era. With that period is indelibly associated the name of Ellen Terry.

"Even as we dwell lovingly on the memories of such famous actresses as Nell Gwynne, Kitty Clive, Mrs. Bracegirdle, and Peg Woffington, so will future generations take pride in the traditions which will cling around the name and reputation of Ellen Terry.

"You, Miss Terry, stand to-day as the natural and artistic emblem of all that is most captivating in English stage art. Your many and signal triumphs as an actress rightfully claim our profoundest admiration; but, in addition to that, you have won our love as a woman.

"Our tribute to-night is the tribute that men pay to the ideal.

"To us, you are a typical representative of the dramatic art of your period, the veritable Queen of Comedy, the most gracious personality it has been our privilege to encounter.

"The casket which we present to-night we ask you to accept as the souvenir of an affection that neither gold nor silver is adequate to express, and we want you to realise that within its limited circumference there rest the hearts of a myriad playgoers."

The inscription on the casket runs: "A token of affection and esteem from the members of the Playgoers' Club to Miss Ellen Terry, on the celebration of her Jubilee, April 28, 1906."

Miss Terry's reply was to the following effect:—

"When I knew the Playgoers' Club designed to present me with a casket, I naturally reflected upon what I could say in returning thanks for such a distinction. I took down my Shakespeare—always my good genius—and at once I thought of the Casket Scene in The Merchant of Venice. The speech over the silver casket has not been spoken since the Bancroft revival of the play at the old Prince of Wales's; and what was the motto of the silver casket? 'Who chooseth me shall have as much as he deserves.' There I saw what was the significance of your gift—it was a prize for good conduct and regular attendance! But indeed you have not 'used me according to my deserts, but ods bodikins, man, much better!' I know that it had been your intention to honour Henry Irving and myself in this year of our common jubilee. That intention has been frustrated, and now I have to receive your gift alone. But I know, and it greatly enhances the value of your gift, that your love and admiration for him is enshrined along with your tribute to me in this casket.".

The house grew still more enthusiastic at Miss Terry's speech, and, after much more cheering, "Auld Lang Syne" was sung by all on the stage, and by many among the audience. Afterwards the curtain descended, but Miss Terry's admirers still clamoured for her, and she had to appear once more before the audience reluctantly dispersed.

The continuation of the festival was made on Saturday, the actual date of the jubilee, when similar demonstrations of public regard took place. In the afternoon the Adelphi Theatre was packed to its utmost, and Miss Terry's entry in the small part of Francesca the nun was the signal for applause that stopped the progress of the play. The lines Miss Terry had to deliver are as follows:—

ISAB.: And have you nuns no farther privileges?
FRAN.: Are not these large enough?
ISAB.: Yes, truly: I speak not as desiring more;
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the sisterhood, the votarists of St. Clare.
LUCIO (within): Ho! Peace be in this place!
ISAB.: Who's that which calls?
FRAN.: It is a man's voice. Gentle Isabella,
Turn you the key, and know his business of him;
You may, I may not; you are yet unsworn.
When you have vow'd, you must not speak with men
But in the presence of the prioress:
Then, if you speak, you must not show your face;
Or, if you show your face, you must not speak.
He calls again; I pray you, answer him. [Exit.

The enthusiasm of the audience was intense, and, when the curtain had fallen, the famous actress was frantically recalled, and Miss Terry at length came forward and said:—"This afternoon I am in the theatre where I acted when I was a girl in a play by Shakespeare. He was my first playwright. Fifty years ago to-day I spoke his lines for the first time, and on my stage birthday what nicer treat could I give myself than a nice Shakespeare part—although a very tiny one? Thank you, thank you. Those two little words must express the thousand things I feel."

The Court Theatre was the scene of the festivities in the evening, when there was another popular outburst of enthusiasm. Here, as at the other two theatres, the applause was of the most demonstrative character, and Miss Terry's performance of Lady Cicely Waynflete in Captain Brassbound's Conversion was greeted with continuous cheering. At the close the stage was a mass of blooms, which came from all parts of the house, when Miss Terry, in acknowledgement of the irresistible recalls, came forward and said:—"I did not expect to be asked for a speech to-night, as this is not my official stage birthday; but it would be very ungracious of me not to thank you for having remembered that this is the real day of my jubilee, and for having given me this testimony of your goodwill, and, I should like to say, your affection. Thank you, thank you; good night must be said, but I am very sorry for it, because you all have such nice faces. Good night." In her closing sentence, "you have such a nice face," Miss Terry was referring to a phrase which she has to say frequently as Lady Waynflete.

The cheering still continuing, the curtain rose once more, revealing Miss Terry with the floral shields of her jubilee held before her.

The souvenir programme presented to the audience had on the front page a facsimile of an autograph message from Miss Terry, running as follows:—"This (Saturday) evening, the 28th of April, 1906, is the 50th anniversary of my first appearance upon any stage. On April 28th, 1856, I played the part of the young Prince Mamillius in A Winter's Tale at the Princess's Theatre.—ELLEN TERRY."

An address of congratulation, bearing their corporate seal, has been sent to Miss Ellen Terry by the trustees and guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace, at Stratford-on-Avon, in commemoration of her fiftieth year on the stage. The address was as follows:—

Shakespeare's Birthplace, Stratford-upon-Avon,
April 23, 1906.

To Miss Ellen Terry, on the jubilee of her first appearance on the stage:—

MADAM,—On behalf of the trustees and guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace, we desire to join in the congratulations which our countrymen and countrywomen are offering you on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of your appearance on the stage.

It was in the rôle of Mamillius, in The Winter's Tale, that you, while yet a child, gave the first proof of your devotion to Shakespeare, and of your splendid power as interpreter of his work in the theatre.

The noble promise of early days has been most richly fulfilled in more recent years, and your renderings of a wide range of Shakespeare's greatest characters have helped conspicuously to enlarge the ranks of the poet's lovers.

As trustees, in the nation's behalf, of Shakespeare's Birthplace, and of other houses and gardens associated with his life in his native town, it is our duty to encourage the due payment of all honour to Shakespeare's great memory. In you we recognise an ally whose service in the cause of Shakespeare merits a nation's gratitude.

Born in Shakespeare's own county of Warwick, you have especially won the hearts of those living amid the scenes which were familiar to Shakespeare during his lifetime, while the practical interest you have shown in the national memorials of the poet in his native town accentuates the satisfaction with which we view the celebration of your jubilee.

Wishing you all happiness and prosperity, we have the honour to be, in behalf of the trustees and guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace,

(Signed) SIDNEY LEE,
Chairman of the Executive Committee.
RICHARD SAVAGE,
Secretary and Librarian.

Miss Ellen Terry has sent the following letter in reply:—

215, King's-road, Chelsea, April 28, 1906.

DEAR MR. LEE,—I have no words to express my pride and delight in this address of congratulation from the trustees and guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace. "It is an honour I dreamed not of," and one that to me must stand as high above all others as Shakespeare stands above all other poets.

If in my fifty years' work upon the stage I have done anything in the cause of Shakespeare, he has done everything for me. No dramatist before or since has ever given us players such opportunities, nor suggested to us such high, brilliant, and varied ways of exercising our art. Every part of Shakespeare has been to me a liberal education.

It was a happy omen for me that I was born in his native Warwickshire—happier still for me that I made my first appearance in The Winter's Tale, and since then hardly a year has gone by without my acting in a Shakespeare play.

To my intimate association with Shakespeare I owe much of my happiness. When in the future I summon to the "sessions of sweet silent thought" the many happy remembrances of my fiftieth stage birthday, there will come first in the train of affection and honour this message from Shakespeare's town.—Yours sincerely,

ELLEN TERRY.

FOR THE AUTHOR'S GOOD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—With regard to Mr. Arthur Bourchier's statement that "no play has ever made for the good of its author," &c., which you describe in your interesting editorial of March 31 as "a somewhat sweeping one," quoting the financial success of East Lynne to disprove Mr. Bourchier's contention, I beg to say that it appears to me that Mr. Bourchier did not mean "good" in the form of money, but "good" in the sense of esteem of right-minded people. In this Mr. Bourchier is, I believe, right.—Yours faithfully,

BERTRAM MILLAR.

MR. LAWRENCE DERRICK and Miss Marian Brereton, the well-known musical and dramatic entertainers, were so successful at Victoria Pier, Blackpool (where they appeared on Good Friday and during Easter week), that they received an offer from their manager to prolong their engagement right through the summer season, which, however, they were unable to accept.

THEATRICALS IN INDIA.

CHAT WITH MR. F. W. MILLIS.

(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

Mr. F. W. Millis, the well-known ventriloquist and entertainer who, some eighteen months ago, commenced a tour through Australia and New Zealand under the management of Mr. Harry Rickards, and who, in conjunction with Mr. Emile Lazern, subsequently took out a company to India, returned to this country a few days ago. Mr. Millis has not much to say in favour of India from the theatrical point of view.

"Well, Mr. Millis, what are the places in India where you make huge fortunes?"

"I wouldn't like to say that a company of artists could make a fortune at all in that country. In any case, there are only two towns worth mentioning, and those are Calcutta and Bombay."

"And what did you do there?"

"We had a high-class music-hall show. We collected a company of good artists, there being ten of us, including Mr. Lazern and myself. At Allahabad seven of us got the fever, and only three were able to appear, but they gave a full performance just the same at the Station Theatre."

"Any recommendations to make to other artists who may contemplate a tour in India?"

"I advise all performers to keep away from India. It is rightly called the Graveyard of the East, and a graveyard it is, for more professionals have been buried there than in any other country visited in the same short period. You meet cases of bubonic plague, leprosy, cholera, and smallpox every day. I have seen at Cawnpore over 200 dead bodies huddled together."

"Tell me something about the conditions of living and of travelling in India."

"In the first place, let me tell you that you carry your own bedding, and when you arrive at a dak bungalow or travellers' resting-house, erected by the Government for the convenience of travellers—there being no hotels—you are charged extortionate prices for the accommodation. Sometimes there is an insufficient number of beds—which, by the way, only consist of frames, and you lay on ropes—so that you chance having to sleep on the floor. You have plenty of company during the night, as your body supplies a sort of happy hunting-ground for rats and other animals, while jackals sing at your door."

"And your treatment by the natives?"

"I have never yet come across a native Indian that was not a liar and a thief. I recollect I had a treasure of a boy servant, who not merely contented himself with robbing me, but stole knives, forks, spoons, and other articles from the hotels where we put up. You could not hope to get the best of these people. Let me give you another instance of how ready they are to cheat. Mrs. Millis bought some skins which she was assured were chinchillas. When we got to London we found, to our disgust, that they had once kept some rabbits warm, and had been doctored to resemble chinchilla skins."

"Did you find the fakirs as mysterious and wonderful a set of people as we in England have been led to imagine?"

"We heard a lot of tales from travellers about the way in which they can throw a rope in the air and climb up it, but we never saw it done. Their tricks appeared to me to be very simple. Some of them asked Mr. Lazern to teach them some tricks. We got into 'the hang' of their celebrated mango trick the very first time we saw it."

"And so far as the whites were concerned?"

"India is the greatest land of snobs in the whole world. Your officer who commands our white troops, although he hasn't half the brains of the man who commands the native soldiers, holds the latter officer in the utmost contempt. The man commanding black troops looks down on the Civil servant, the Civil servant looks down on the shop-keeper, who in turn looks down on the clerk; and, as for the theatrical, he is regarded as a pariah."

"A new theatre is about to be erected in Bombay, and a company has been formed for that purpose. The old playhouse, which is run by a native, and bears the name of the Novelty Theatre, is a dilapidated building, consisting of an old shed with an iron roof. The seating in this none-too-inviting establishment is most uncomfortable, and the whole house reeks of an exceedingly unsavoury smell. In Calcutta there is a theatre—the Royal, under the proprietorship of Mr. A. A. Stephen—which is a credit to the town, and is the only theatre worth speaking of in India."

"Generally speaking, in India what do you consider an average night's receipts?"

"£10 is a good house. You see, we have to play half-price to the military, and frequently it happens that one's visitors are entirely soldiers Sometimes the highest ticket is a rupee. The 'tommies' get up to all manner of tricks to pass in free. Even the private soldiers regard us artists with contempt, as they do not believe that good people will go to India.

"India," continued Mr. Millis, "has been pictured as the land of beautiful palms and lovely ladies. I found it all dust, rocks, swamps, and bad smells."

"And you don't feel inclined to return immediately?"

"'Quoth the raven'—you know the rest. I am at present busily engaged devising a new act for the halls. It will be a ventriloquial show without any figures, and I think it will be found to be entertaining."

MR. EDITOR.—SIR,—In your notice of the sketch, My Highland Laddie, at the Surrey, owing to a mistake of the printers, the wrong name was put opposite the part of Flora McDonald. The character was played, both at the Lyceum and the Surrey, by yours faithfully, HELENE FORBST, 50, Elsham-road, Kensington, W., April 29.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

It is some three or four years since Mr. Harvey produced here John Rutherford's enormous success The Breed of the Treshams, and now he has again favoured Novocastrians by presenting for the first time Messrs. B. M. Dix and E. G. Sutherland's—who, by the way, now prove to be the authors of the play just mentioned—latest effort. Boy O'Carroll; or, The Rapparee Trooper, is a comedy in four acts, and the action takes place about the year 1640, in the Midland Counties, on the outskirts of King Charles's army. The opening act is the Royalist camp, near Ripston-under-Wye, where we meet Brian O'Carroll, a high-spirited young Irishman, who is serving in the King's Army, attended by his horse-boy, Paudheen. O'Carroll is in love with a young, fascinating Irish widow, Lady Honoria Vere, who, however, does not reciprocate his passion, being enamoured of a stolid English officer, Captain Hebblethwaite, stationed in the same camp. Lettice Yarrington is the next character we are introduced to. She comes to the camp, chaperoned by her maid, Win-the fight-Bubb. Lettice has written a letter to her cousin, Walter Morrison, asking him to take her off on some silly lover's escapade, and Morrison is showing this letter in a boastful manner to a brother officer when O'Carroll intervenes, and snatches the letter away from them. He is immediately challenged to fight a duel, but ere this event can take place he is sent off by Captain Vere to take dispatches to Upper Lowcombe.

Brian has evidently mistaken Upper Lowcombe for Lower Upcombe, for in the latter place, which is the scene of Act II., we find him and his horse-boy in the clutches of the enemy, under the command of a blustering old Puritan, one Major Yarrington. Brian is searched, and upon him is found the letter from Lettice Yarrington, the Major's ward, to Mollison. Promptly putting the worst construction on the missive, Yarrington determines that Brian shall marry Lettice immediately, and while the bonds of matrimony are being tied Paudheen manages to escape, and runs off to Lady Honoria for help to save his master. After the marriage ceremony Brian is sent to London, en route for the Barbadoes, and here terminates Act. II.

On the road to London, however, he is lodged for the night at Armitage Manor, where Lady Honoria happens to be staying. In the meantime Captain Hebblethwaite has also fallen into the enemy's hands, and he is put in the same room as O'Carroll and handcuffed to him. Lady Honoria contrives to effect the escape of both prisoners, and it is in this act that O'Carroll learns that her ladyship is in love with Hebblethwaite.

Brian turns up in the fourth act at Marbrook Hall, only to find that Major Yarrington has recaptured Hebblethwaite, also Lady Honoria and Paudheen, the Major having bluffed them into the belief that the house was surrounded by his troops. However, Brian plays the same game, and in turn the Major's party are taken prisoners. A temporary armistice is arranged, the finale seeing Lady Honoria engaged to John Hebblethwaite, and Brian O'Carroll actually finds that he is falling in love with his own wife.

Brian O'Carroll should assuredly take a prominent place in Mr. Harvey's extensive and varied répertoire. Into the character of the Irish hero Mr. Harvey entered heart and soul, and the adventures and escapades of the devil-may-care "bhoy," were followed with the utmost interest. The actor, indeed, may be congratulated on achieving a remarkable and well-deserved success. A well-drawn character is Major Yarrington, as played by Mr. C. J. Cameron, who scored a striking personal success. Mr. Thalberg Corbett handled the part of Captain Hebblethwaite with considerable tact and skill; and Mr. Albert E. Raynor glided easily through the rôle of Captain Vere. We have nothing but praise to award to Miss N. de Silva as Paudheen. Her assumption of this somewhat striking character was life-like and natural, being also at times intensely droll. Miss Kate Rorke was more charming than ever as Lady Honoria, and has seldom been seen to better advantage. Miss Maud Rivers was dainty and winsome as Lettice Yarrington; and Miss Grace Hampton, as the buxom and buoyant Win-the-fight-Bubb won cordial recognition. Smaller but none the less important parts were capably filled by Messrs. George Cooke, Leonard Craske, Reeve Denbigh, and Miss Bessie Elder.

The scenery and costumes were on an elaborate scale, the former being by the well-known artist Mr. G. Dobson, who did such excellent work in Mr. Harvey's Hamlet production. At the finish Mr. Harvey came forward, and thanked the audience for the cordiality of the welcome accorded the play. To his company, to Mr. Teale Lingham, and to the staff of the theatre he also expressed his indebtedness for their invaluable assistance. There were also loud cries for the authors, but Messrs. Dix and Sutherland had to leave the theatre before the conclusion of the piece.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

Shakespeare has been holding powerful sway at the Kennington Theatre this week, and Mr. Esmonde Bramley's well-trained company deserve every credit for the earnestness displayed in the presentation of works of our great playwright. On Monday Richard III., with Mr. Cyril Este as that craven king and Miss Millie Ford as Lady Anne was given with great success. On Tuesday The Merchant of Venice was billed. Mr. David Beattie was at his best as Shylock, giving a studious and earnest reading of the malignant Jew, his delivery being distinct and powerful. Mr. Cyril Este was thoroughly well suited in the part of Bassanio, showing to especial advantage in the casket scene. The Antonio of Mr. Owen Chambers was a carefully thought out characterisation. Mr. Baliol Holloway gave a pleasant reading of Gratiano; Mr. A. L. Evans was sufficiently poetical and passionate as Lorenzo, his excellent voice proving useful in the two songs which fell to his lot. Mr. Philip Gordon did well as Young Gobbo, and caused not a little amusement; the Prince of Morocco found a good exponent in Mr. Frederick Scarth; Mr. Charles Doyle spoke well as the Duke of Venice; the parts of Salarino and Solanio were safely entrusted to Messrs. Stanley Farbridge and Leonard Cheetham; and the small parts of Tubal and Old Gobbo were creditably sustained by Mr. E. Sisson and Mr. G. Edward Dunstan. Miss Millie Ford won great praise for her meritorious rendering of Portia; Miss Ruth Nightingale was an ideal Jessica; and Miss Maud Garth took advantage of all her opportunities as Nerissa. The incidental music and songs were well rendered under the able baton of Mr. J. H Wilson.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"LA VIEILLESSE DE DON JUAN."

Comedy, in Three Acts, in verse, by M. Mounet Sully, produced at the Odéon, on April 27.

Isabelle .....MLLE. DUX
Inès .....MLLE. LÉLY
Céphise .....MLLE. REBECCA FÉLIX

Don José .....M. CANDÉ
Catalinon .....M. JANVIER
Fabien .....M. SEVERIN

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, MAY 3.—Molière, and after him others, have shown us the popular figure of Don Juan, but never otherwise than as the dashing, fascinating cavalier, the seducer of women. What induced M. Mounet-Sully to tamper with this hero of fiction and parade him, old and repentant? It was a mistaken idea, and the work proved disappointing. In the piece, Don Juan is fifty years old. Betrayed by his last mistress, he has fought a duel, and has been carried dangerously wounded to the house of Don José, the husband of Isabelle. He is nursed there by his friends, who read him a few moral lectures. They have a young daughter, Inès, brought up in a convent, and engaged to Fabien. The moment she sees Don Juan, whose fame has reached her, she loses her heart to him. But the knight will not pluck the flower that offers itself to him. He thinks of her youth and innocence, and tells her of the crimes and misdeeds he has committed. All to no purpose. Inès loves him because he is handsome, brave, and says pretty things. Then Fabien, Inès' fiancé, becomes jealous, challenges Don Juan, but is no match for the expert swordsman, who knocks the weapon out of his hand. Brave and generous Don Juan advises Inès to marry Fabien, knowing full well that he himself is too old to wed a young girl. Moreover, his wife Elvira is still alive. But when he learns that this lady, whom he treated so ill, has departed this life, all his passion for Inès breaks loose. The girl is still free; and for the first time in his life he knows what love is, but it is too late. And sooner than see Inès belong to somebody else he poisons himself—an unsatisfactory end to an unsatisfactory piece. M. Mounet-Sully, having had to play the principal part in a work from his own pen, was very nervous, but, otherwise impersonated the elderly Don Juan in a masterly manner. Mlle. Dux, whom we were glad to welcome once more on the boards of the Odéon, displayed all her refinement and tact in the rôle of Isabelle. Unstinted praise is also due to Mlle. Lély, Mlle. Rebecca Félix, M. Candé, and M. Janvier.

"LA PATTE D'OIE."

Play, in Three Acts, by MM. René Péter and Robert Danceney,

Produced at the Theatre des Arts on April 27.

Cathérine Arnaud .....MLLE. SUZANNE MUNTE
Blanche .....MLLE. PARYS
Mlle. de Chantreuil .....MLLE. BOYER
Odette Arnaud .....MLLE. J. DE LAGNY

Didier .....M. MUFFAT
Le Docteur Couvières .....M. MANGUIN
Jacques de Mondrignon .....M. A. RENEY

IT wanted a certain amount of pluck on MM. René Péter and Danceney's part to show a monstrous situation like the one in their new piece, La Patte d'Oie. We certainly were not prepared for it, when, in the opening act, we made the acquaintance of François de Chantreuil, a widower, whose daughter, Blanche, he handed over to the care of his sister, who took charge of her education. François is a man about town, and, when the story begins, the official protector of Cathérine Arnaud, a flighty actress, In fact, his amusements take up so much of his time that he never finds a moment to see his daughter; and probably might have gone on ignoring her if Jacques de Mondrignon had not taken him away from his beloved Paris. Jacques is engaged to Blanche, and he has come to fetch François for their wedding. In the ensuing act Blanche and Jacques have been married six months, and François is staying with them in the country. He has broken off with Cathérine, and has no desire to return to Paris. He, the mundane, has given up all his pleasures to devote himself to his daughter, whom he overwhelms with attentions. But Jacques is not satisfied. He not only is getting tired of his father-in-law, but he is afraid the latter will impart to Blanche his extravagant tastes and his love of pleasure. As François makes no preparations to go away, Jacques proposes to his wife to start on a long journey through Italy, and Blanche, who adores her husband, is delighted with the plan. When François hears of this he is overcome with grief and jealousy, and he discovers to his terror that his love for his child is not altogether paternal. No sooner does this truth dawn upon him than he flies terror-stricken to Paris, back to Cathérine, and dies of brain fever. The terrible secret has killed him. The authors acquitted themselves well of a difficult task, but they hit upon an unpleasant subject; and the work also suffered from an indifferent interpretation. M. Maury was hardly at his best in the part of François; and the other exponents seemed to act in a half-hearted fashion.

AT the Nouveau-Théâtre we had a curious performance, that of Le Clown, a collaboration of a millionaire and an ex-tenor. The millionaire was Count Isaac Camondo, and the ex-tenor M. Victor Capoul, responsible for the libretto. The latter gentleman certainly made no great brain effort. The story plays in a circus at the Neuilly Fair. Maxim, a clown, loves Zéphirine, a lady acrobat. Unfortunately Zéphirine has lost her heart to Auguste, a worthless creature, who, out of jealousy, tampers with one of the ropes of the apparatus on which Maxim has to perform, and the poor clown is killed. To this childish story Count Camondo has written some graceful music, which denotes a certain talent on the amateur composer's part. But if the production was not particularly brilliant, the same cannot be said of the cast nor of the audience. Maxim was impersonated by M. Rousselière; Auguste by M. Renaud; and M. Barbezan by the great singer Delmas, from the Opéra, who looked very strange as a proprietor of a second-rate circus. The rôle of Zéphirine was sung by Mlle. Farrar; and Mlle. Margyl and Mlle. Mérentié completed this really splendid cast. As to the audience, the boxes, stalls, and dress-circle were ablaze with diamonds; and even on a gala night at the Opéra we never saw a finer array of beautiful women and costly toilettes. Count Camondo spent his money royally, and he had some satisfaction for it. Le Clown, however, is not likely to go down to posterity.

AT the Opéra-Comique M. Carré has started the rehearsals of La Revanche d'Iris, by M. Paul Ferrier, music by M. Edmond Diet. The principal rôles will be sung by Mlle. Tiphaine and M. Delvoye.

THE Ambigu have postponed the production of their new piece Roule-Ta-Bosse to next week. In the meantime La Goualeuse will remain on the bill.

"DOROTHY O' THE HALL," at the New Theatre, now begins at 8.25, instead of 8.15, as heretofore.

MR. EDITOR.—SIR,—In last week's Era your Accrington correspondent allotted the part of Rev. Edward Gray, in Life's Sweetest Sins, to Mr. Charles Sewell. The part was played, and has been for the past thirty-nine weeks, by yours faithfully, CLEM HORLOCK, Rotunda Theatre, Liverpool, April 29, '06.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

The Queen's gift to Miss Ellen Terry on the occasion of her jubilee took the form of a diamond pendant, which was accompanied by a card, bearing in Her Majesty's handwriting the words: "For Ellen Terry, on her jubilee.—With best wishes from Alexandra." A message from the Princess Royal ran as follows: "Dear Miss Terry,—I hope that you will accept this little remembrance on this interesting occasion, with my very best wishes.—Believe me, yours sincerely, Louise, Princess Royal."

The drama at the Royal Academy is represented by Mr. Richard Jack's portrait of Miss Mabel Love, seated, and fully facing the spectator. She wears a whitish-grey dress with a rose in the bosom. The likeness is excellent. Mr. Steven Spurrier shows us Mr. Lionel Brough in a furnished interior, the expression of the favourite comedian being cleverly caught.—Visitors to the New Gallery will notice four noteworthy theatrical exhibits. A little to the left, as one enters the circular hall, is a beautifully-sculptured bust of Mr. Seymour Hicks, the work of Mr. Albert Toft. In one of the rooms to the right is a portrait of Miss Genevieve Ward, by Mr. Hugh Rivière, a young artist—a son of a celebrated father—Mr. Briton Rivière. It depicts the veteran actress seated in an old-fashioned armchair, looking out at the spectator, her right hand resting upon a table, grasping a partly-opened book. The face wears an expression of sweet serenity. Miss Ward is attired in a purple silk dress, with lace fichus, and a black bonnet with purple feathers. Mr. Rivière's work is admirable in colour and tone. There is also in the exhibition a portrait of Miss Constance Collier, by Sir Philip Burne-Jones. Miss Collier is standing in a position which affords a striking profile, and is attired in a pretty blue velvet tea-gown, with a bunch of red roses at the breast. Her hands are clasped behind her back. Sir Philip has made a very pleasing study of the clever actress. Another likeness of Miss Collier is by Mr. Byam Shaw, and represents the lady in a purple velvet cloak trimmed with ermine, and holding a bouquet of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal will appear as a stockbroker and his wife respectively in A Tight Corner, the light comedy by Herbert Swears, which is to be produced at the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth, on Wednesday. One scene suffices for the action of the play, which takes place in a flat in Mount-street, Berkeley-square. The short cast will be completed by Mr. Ernest Hendrie, Mr. Metcalfe Wood, Mr. F. Chas. Pool, Miss Jessie Moore, and Miss Marie Lohr.

We are glad to announce that £200 has now been received for the purchase of an Actors' Bed at the Sussex Seaside Convalescent Home in memory of the late Mrs. Nye Chart. The bed is in the gift of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, and applications concerning it should be made to Mr. C. I. Coltson at the Fund office. The profession are to be congratulated on having secured the prviilege of the use of this bed for the next twelve years for any poor actor or actress who needs rest, good living, and the benefits of a stay at the seaside. The Era thanks the contributors to the Nye Chart Fund, and also the Committee of the Actors' Benevolent Fund for their munificent donations.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree on Saturday completed the magnificent pageant of plays produced at His Majesty's in honour of Shakespeare's birthday, with Julius Cæsar, in which he enacted Mark Antony with the force, dignity, and elocutionary grace which has made the part one of the most notable in his artistic répertoire. Loud calls were given at the end of the play, and in response Mr. Tree came forward and said:—"Our Shakespearean Festival again for a second year has proved a great and encouraging success. Indeed, I think this week is a conclusive answer to those diligent pessimists who are always bewailing the decadence of the drama. It required, as you may imagine, some little courage to suspend the run of a successful play to give this week of Shakespearean revivals; but your enthusiasm has made me realise how justified I was in doing this.

"The result of our six days' work," continued Mr. Tree, "arduous as you may imagine it has been to all concerned, has been again so decisive that I have determined to make this festival an annual feature of the theatre. Next year, indeed, I hope to be able to enlarge its scope. Before that time I fully anticipate presenting other Shakespearean plays, which have not yet been given at this theatre. Lovers of Shakespeare will be glad to know that the entire autumn season will be given up to his plays. As you already know, during my absence on tour, Miss Ellen Terry—whose jubilee it was our delight to celebrate here—will appear in A Winter's Tale, and I expect also to produce Macbeth and Anthony and Cleopatra, and probably shall revive for a short run Henry IV. (Part I.), in which Mr. Basil Gill made so excellent a success the other day as Harry Percy. In conclusion, may I say that your generous encouragement in this Shakespearean Festival has fully recompensed my colleagues, my stage-managers, and myself, for the work that this week has naturally meant to us?"

We regret to record the death of Mr. James Harrington, assistant stage manager of Drury Lane Theatre, who died as the result of an accident on the 25th ult., at the age of twenty-two. At the inquest it was shown that the deceased was walking home through Duke-street on the 23rd ult., when some water was thrown from an upper window. Harrington, who was an active young man, immediately endeavoured to climb up the front of the house in order to reach the window from which he imagined the water had come. He fell on to the stone steps and was found there at 6.30 on the following morning by a cabman, who took him to Charing Cross Hospital, where he succumbed to his injuries. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

The funeral took place on Saturday, the interment being made at Kensal Rise Cemetery. The body had been removed on the previous day from the mortuary, and rested all night at the theatre, surrounded by a large number of wreaths and floral offerings sent by the friends of the deceased. The funeral procession comprised the floral-laden hearse, four mourning coaches, and a number of private broughams. Mr. Harrington started life as a seller of evening newspapers outside Drury Lane Theatre. Attracting the attention of Mr. Glover, the well-known musical conductor, he eventually employed the bright newspaper lad as his valet. Shortly afterwards he became "call-boy," and eventually assistant stage-manager at the Lane. Mr. Harrington, who had taught himself French, German, and shorthand, was also a musician of some ability.

Mr. Martin Harvey has, in Boy O'Carroll, added another success to a brilliant repertory of favourite plays. When produced at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle, on Friday of last week, in the presence of the largest audience, with a single exception, which that theatre has ever known, the play was received with whole-hearted delight, and on the occasion of the second performance at the Court Theatre, Liverpool, on Tuesday, the playgoers of that town were found emulating the enthusiasm of their Newcastle brethren. The new play, of which a full account appears in another column, will be given shortly at the Imperial, where Mr. Harvey begins a four weeks' season on the 19th inst.

The special celebration of Miss Ellen Terry's jubilee will take place at Drury Lane, by kind permission of Mr. Arthur Collins and his co-directors, on or about Tuesday, June 12. Mr. Arthur W. Pinero is the chairman of the committee, which includes Mr. George Alexander, Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, the Hon. Stephen Coleridge, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Alfred Courtenay, Mr. Henry Dana, Mr. Frederick Harrison, Mr. Sidney Smith, Mr. Bram Stoker, Mr. J. E. Vedrenne, and Sir Charles Wyndham. Mr. Acton Bond is the hon. secretary, and Mr. Austin Brereton has undertaken the duties of hon. press manager. Particulars of the programme and prices of admission will be announced shortly, and all applications for seats by letter will be treated in order of priority.

Miss Terry expresses her regret that she is unable to give individual thanks to the many kind friends who have congratulated her on her stage jubilee. The famous actress hopes that they will accept this general, but no less heartfelt, recognition of their remembrances.

Miss Marion Terry, freed from her engagement at the Lyric by the impending withdrawal of Mauricette, has been enabled to accept Mr. Tree's offer to create the part of Madame de Florac in the forthcoming production of Colonel Newcome at His Majesty's. Mauricette will remain at the Lyric up to and including Saturday next.

Mrs. H. T. Craven, widow of the late celebrated dramatist and mother of Tom Craven, attains on Wednesday the venerable age of seventy-nine. Mrs. H. T. Craven (under her maiden name of Eliza Nelson) was in the 'sixties widely known as the successful actress and vocalist. She played in her time with Macready, appearing at the famous tragedian's farewell benefit. She supported the great Little Robson at the Olympia, and tells many excellent stories of that eccentric genius. She was the original Annie White in Craven's masterpiece, Milky White, and, indeed, she created many important parts in her famous husband's plays.

Mrs. Craven is the daughter of the song-writer, Sidney Nelson, who composed "Mary of Argyle," "The Pilot," "Madoline," "The flag that braved a thousand years," and hundreds of other pieces, many of which are cherished as standard works, but only brought the gifted composer about a guinea apiece. What would the copyright of such works be worth nowadays? Indeed, how many people remember the poor composer's name—Sidney Nelson? Such is the reward of a life's work! Mrs. H. T. Craven is residing at Brighton, but a few yards from an old fellow-worker, the universally beloved J. L. Toole. They frequently meet, and chat pleasantly of the good old days when they played in stock pieces together.

In the gallery of the Royal Society of British Artists, Suffolk-street, Pall Mall East, there is a picture which has a theatrical interest. It is a water-colour painting of the late Sir Henry Irving's funeral, the artist being Mr. Louis Weirter. Those who were present in the Abbey on that memorable occasion will be inclined to congratulate Mr. Weirter upon his effort. He has treated his subject in a broad way, and truthfully gives us the impression of the general aspect of gloom which, it will be remembered, seemed to take possession of that part of the sacred edifice in which the burial service was held. The first object that catches the eye in the picture is the purple plush-covered catafalque which bore the coffin. The six huge candles are there, one at each corner and in the centre of the sides, their faint glimmering tending to make the scene more weird. Even in the almost all-enveloping mist, long rays of light are seen streaming from the handsomely painted glass of the overhead circular window on to the coffin, accentuating the mystery of the whole scene. In the immediate background a reverent crowd of men and women are seated facing the catafalque, while to the left the surpliced choir is slowly wending its way into the chapel through the cloisters, the massive pillars combining beautiful architecture with stately, if not grim, dignity.

"Shakespeare Sunday" was celebrated this week at Stratford-on-Avon with all the old-time formalities. At the commemoration service in the parish church the mayor and corporation attended in state, with the borough magistrates and representatives of various public bodies, including the Shakespeare's birthplace trustees and the governors of the Memorial Association. The annual Shakespeare sermon was preached by the Rev. Canon Tetley, who said there was no possible room for doubt as to Shakespeare's personal grounding in moral and spiritual truth, in "the unerring justice of God, the inconceivable preciousness of every human soul." They could consider, for example, his deep-set sense of conscience, and of its office as a law-giver and a judge. If Shakespeare plumbed the depths of human character, and thereby revealed to his fellow-men themselves, their failings and their faults, it was so that sympathy should be enlisted with the good, and the evil stand forth in all its odious and undisguised reality. Vice was in every form repulsive; virtue, whatever its cost, was the one thing desirable. The clear draught of the poet's work should render inestimable service to an age that regarded him with a reawakened interest.

A tribute to Sir Henry Irving was paid by the preacher, who, at the close, said:—"You will remember that in his Becket, Lord Tennyson gives as the last words of the murdered Primate, as before the altar of St. Benedict he was struck by the assassin's sword, 'In manus tuos—in manus tuos.' In such sort would I conclude to-day. Those who have met together on this historic ground, in commemoration of a great man's achievements, will soon be dispersed, in manifold directions, far and near. Whatever may befall us in the way wherein we go—'In manus tuos, Domino' we commend you, brethren beloved, till you pass 'where beyond these voices there is peace,' till there break upon your ears 'that celestial harmony you go to.'"

"Brigadier Gerard" has broadened into an immense success, and the crowds which are drawn to the Imperial supply an added instance of Mr. Lewis Waller's irresistible personality. The superlative excellence of his performance of the intrepid officer enthralls an audience already prepossessed in his favour by many former artistic treats, and the satisfaction of the house is constantly expressed by cheers and repeated recalls. Miss Evelyn Millard's charming rendering of the Comtesse de Roquelaure aids the attractiveness of Mr. Arthur Conan Doyle's piece, and the talented actors and actresses engaged in the representation combine to make an ideal performance which should not on any account be missed.

"Brigadier Gerard" will be transferred to the Lyric on the 14th inst., thus necessitating the withdrawal of Mauricette. Mr. H. B. Irving will nevertheless still appear at the Lyric, playing in the matinées of Othello, which Mr. Lewis Waller will give during the present season.

Mr. F. W. Purcell who has had the exceptional experience of holding never less than one dramatic licence for over twenty-eight years, concluded on Saturday his management of the Marlborough Theatre, which he erected and opened on October 5, 1903, and is about to take a well-earned rest at Folkestone. It is hardly to be anticipated that such an enterprising manager as Mr. Purcell has proved himself to be will be long before finding a new field for his indefatigable energies.

Mr. Charles Frohman is on a trip to Paris to arrange for the appearance there of a leading English actor in a production of Parisian make. Mr. Frohman also contemplates a special season of English and American artists, including the appearances of Mr. William Gillette in Sherlock Holmes, and Miss Edna May in The Belle of Mayfair.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell will begin her London season at the Criterion with The Whirlwind, the translation by Mr. Harry Melville of Henry Bernstein's play, La Rafale. The piece will be preceded by the first act of Mr. W. L. Courtney's Undine. Mrs. Campbell has also in contemplation the production of a new romantic costume play by Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, and several revivals, including Beyond Human Power.

The Duchess of Sutherland has now taken to "presenting." According to an announcement to hand, she will, on Wednesday evening, at the Grand Theatre, Hanley, appear herself, and "present" the Countess of Lathom and company in the late Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson's adaptation of Diplomacy, in aid of the Potteries Cripples' Guild. The cast will include the Hon. William Goschen and several other honourables. Popular prices will rule, the gallery being 4d. and the pit 8d., while a seat in the orchestra stalls is to be obtained for 4s.

The pupils of the Moody-Manners Academy of Music on tour will give a private invitation performance of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, on Sunday, at the Coronet Theatre. The performance is the outcome of Mr. Manners' scheme of teaching young singers how to act, and a good deal of attention is being paid to this side of the pupils' art in the Moody-Manners Academy. On this occasion the pupils are to be assisted by Mr. Charles Magrath, Mr. Thomas Stewart, Mr. Chas. Moppett, and Mr. Chapman Huston. Mr. Cuthbert Hawley has composed special music for the production, including the setting of the songs, and will conduct the orchestra.

Owing to the indisposition of Mr. Welch the part of Lord Cyril Garston in The New Clown at Terry's Theatre was played by Mr. John W. Deverell on Thursday, Friday, and at both performances on Saturday last week.—Mr. Wilfred Noy Blumberg, of Mr. Wentworth Croke's Christian company, finding his name a little too cumbersome for professional purposes, will in future be known as Mr. Wilfred Noy.

Important alterations have just been completed at the Pavilion Theatre, Herne Bay, of which Mr. Horace G. Banks is the manager. The stage has been enlarged, and new stock scenery provided. The seating has been renewed, and electric lighting installed throughout, while the comfort of the audience is further secured by an electric fan, which keeps the auditorium perfectly cool. Among other improvements is that of the addition of a balcony, by means of which the money capacity of the house is greatly increased. Bookings for the forthcoming season are now in process of arrangement.

Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer was presented on the stage of the Opera House, Wakefield, on the 25th ult., by Mrs. Sherwood and family, with an embossed silver mirror, as a souvenir of her production of Hamlet on the Shakespeare Festival evening. Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer, in acknowledging the beautiful gift, thanked Messrs. Sherwood for the magnificent manner in which they had staged Shakespeare's masterpiece. The performance was under the patronage and presence of the Lady Catherine Milnes-Gaskell.

A fatal panic was the result of a slight outbreak of fire in the Olympia Theatre, Barcelona, caused by an electrical short circuit on Sunday. One of the spectators was killed and ten seriously injured, while many others were more or less bruised

Mr. Charles Caffrey, who will shortly conclude a very successful engagement of eighteen months with Mr. Cyril Maude's company in Beauty and the Barge, has obtained from Mr. Herbert Darnley the sole rights of Mr. Wix of Wickham, the successful musical comedy, which has not been played in England since the late Dan Leno had to relinquish it, owing to his sudden illness. The piece is at the present time doing excellent business in America. Mr. Charles Caffrey anticipates touring it next autumn, and will himself enact the title-rôle, supported by a strong company. The scenery and costumes will be entirely new, and the whole production under the personal supervision of the author.

Mr. O. Silverstone, the manager of The Swiss Express company, which is this week playing at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, has received the following testimonial to the healing qualities of the popular play: "Dear Sir,—Some years ago I was suffering from quinsy, and could only open my mouth a quarter of an inch. I went to see The Swiss Express, and laughed so heartily that the swelling subsided, and before I left the theatre I was quite well. I thought this might interest you, and I wonder if your company still has this wonderfully amusing and laughable effect.—Yours truly, M. C., Queen's-square, Blackpool, April 30, 1906."

Mr. F. R. Benson commenced on Monday the second week of the Shakespearean Festival at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, the historical plays of Shakespeare constituting the programme. Mr. William Haviland, who is taking part in the productions, has been associated with Mr. Benson on two previous occasions. They were both playing parts in the late Sir Henry Irving's revival of Romeo and Juliet at the Lyceum Theatre many years ago, and in 1901, when Mr. Benson sent his second Shakespearean company on tour, Mrs. F. R. Benson and Mr. Haviland played the leading parts.

Mr. Otho Stuart's production of The Lonely Millionaires, a comedy in three acts by Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, is fixed for Tuesday, May 15. The full cast consists of Mr. Oscar Asche, Miss Lily Brayton, Miss Frances Wetherall, Mr. Herbert Grimwood, Miss Lottie Venne, Mr. Alfred Brydone, Mr. Charles Rock, Mr. Gayer Mackay, Mr. Matheson Lang, and Miss Annie Schletter.

"Olf and the Little Maid," a new one-act play by M. E. Francis (Mrs. Francis Blundell), will be put on in front of The Man from Blankley's at the Haymarket on Tuesday. The scene is a dairy on a farm in Dorset, and the piece will be represented by Mr. P. L. Julian, Mr. Sydney Valentine, Miss Mona Harrison, Miss Ruth Maitland, and Miss Dorothy Minto. On the same evening The Man from Blankley's will reach its fiftieth performance.

Mr. Murray Herriot, general-manager of the Brixton Theatre, has been appointed to the management of the Marlborough, Holloway, with which Mr. Ernest Stevens has become associated. On Saturday last, after the final fall of the curtain on Sweet Lavender, Mr. Herriot was presented with a massive 18ct. gold signet ring, on which was inscribed, "From the Brixton Theatre Staff, with best wishes, April 28, 1906." The presentation was made by Mr. R. W. Allum, the assistant-manager, in the presence of the whole of the staff. Mr. Herriot, in returning thanks, said he could not have done so much at Brixton had it not been for the loyalty of the staff, who had lightened his duties in many ways. He would always wear their handsome present, which would ever remind him of the many good friends he had in Brixton.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held last Tuesday, when there were present:—Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Mr. A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Mesdames Maud Milton and Kate Phillips, and Messrs. Cecil Barth, Clarence Blakiston, Acton Bond, Burton Cooke, A. E. George, Arthur Holmes-Gore, Quinton McPherson, M. R. Morand, Walter Russell, Algernon Syms, Hubert Willis, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary). The hon. solicitors reported they had obtained settlement of a member's claim for damages for breach of agreement. Cecil Kinnard was nominated for election. A question as to the alteration of the present method of conducting the proceedings preliminary to the election of members of the Council was again under discussion, and ultimately a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. A. E. Drinkwater, Arthur Holmes-Gore, and Quinton McPherson, was formed, to which committee was referred the questions involving the alterations of the articles of association rendered necessary if the method now in vogue were changed. The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was given. Arbitrators were appointed in a matter referred to the Joint Arbitration Board.

A meeting of the Finance and General Purposes Committee of the Association was held, there being present—Messrs. A. E. Drinkwater (in the chair), A. E. George, Arthur Holmes-Gore, M. R. Morand, C. Aubrey Smith, Hubert Willis, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary). Several questions of routine were discussed, and the Secretary received instructions.

Miss Lena Ashwell will on Saturday next replace The Bond of Ninon, at the Savoy, with a new play, called The Shulamite, the scene of which is laid in the Transvaal. It is in three acts, and has been adapted by Messrs. Claude Askew and Edward Knoblauch from the novel of the same name. Only six characters are contained in the cast, which, in addition to Miss Ashwell, will consist of Mr. Henry Ainley, Mr. Norman McKinnel, Mr. Eugene Mayeur, Miss Beryl Mercer, and Miss Elsie Chester. The Bond of Ninon will be withdrawn on Thursday.

"His House in Order" reached its hundredth performance on Tuesday, when, to celebrate the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander invited upwards of a hundred friends to supper at the St. James's Theatre after the performance. Eight round tables were grouped upon the stage, which was pleasingly decorated with blooms, and a band played at the back of the dress circle. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander and Mr. Pinero received many congratulations upon the success which the clever piece has attained.

The sudden illness of Mrs. Minna Hocker, who was to sustain the principal part in Das Blumenboot, which the German company were producing this evening at the Great Queen-street Theatre, has compelled Herr Andresen to withdraw this play, and Sudermann's Sodoms Ende will be substituted at both the afternoon and evening performances. The present German season will conclude on Saturday with two performances (afternoon and evening) for the benefit of Herr Andresen, when Ibsen's Rosmersholm will be played.

Miss Jean Grace Crocker, who made her début as a reciter at the Æolian Hall this week, possesses an unmistakable Boston accent, a fairly good répertoire, and the art of dressing effectively on the platform. She said her little pieces—"Aunty Doleful's" skill with the knitting needles being her best bit of business—in a beautiful gown of white chiffon over white silk, embroidered with wreaths, flecked with silver, and chiefly to be admired for the filmy angel sleeves, cleverly arranged to give the appearance of small wings that fluttered with every movement.

Miss Laura Hansen is paying a flying visit to Jersey, having been asked by Mr. Allan Wilkie to act for him for the first three nights of his opening week. Miss Hansen will play Fiordelisa in The Fool's Revenge, for which a prologue has been written to strengthen the part. Her appearance in the prologue as the ill-fated wife and mother will involve an effective death scene, and, later in the play as Fiordelisa, Miss Hansen will be enabled to repeat the success already gained in Australia, and last autumn in the provinces with the Allan Wilkie répertoire company.

Madame Kate Flinn's afternoon concert on May 15 at Steinway Hall promises to be highly successful. Of her many pupils, a veritable "garden of girls," she has selected five of the very best to appear. Mrs. Cecil Raleigh and Mrs. Clement Scott will recite. Mr. Louis Bradfield and Mr. Sydney Jarvis will represent—not counting the accompanists—"mere man" on the programme. And Madame Flinn herself is going to sing. The forthcoming concert, the first she has given for nearly four years, was the great topic of conversation at the popular teacher's monthly "At Home" this week, and, judging by the interest it awakened, there is every prospect of the hall being decorated on the 15th with that welcome announcement—"House Full."

Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee, who has just concluded his engagement as Horace Parker in A Message from Mars, has been retained to create the part of Horace in Mr. Ganthony's sequel play, The Thunderbolt, at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, next week.

The Actors' Orphanage Fête this year will again take place at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park. The date fixed is Friday, July 6, and the Committee are arranging several novel features. Mr. Cyril Maude will be concerned in the production of an "original" play, the three acts of which will be written by a different author. Captain Robert Marshall will set the lead, and the theme will be taken up in the second act by Mr. J. M. Barrie; but the name of the dramatist who is ready to undertake the third has not yet appeared. Each act is limited to four minutes, and as the killing-off of the characters is debarred, the task awaiting the writer of the last act would seem sufficient to appal the most intrepid wielder of the playwright's pen.

Miss Letty Paxton, to whose serious illness we referred last week, is now out of danger, and is, we are glad to say, progressing favourably.

The Marlborough Theatre, Holloway, opened on Monday, under the auspices of the Marlborough Theatre Company, Ltd., which has a list of well-known names on the directorate, all of whom are actively engaged in theatrical management. They consist of Messrs. J. B. Mulholland (chairman), Fred. Fredericks, Fred Karno, S. F. Davidson, Henry Julius Walther, R. C. Buchanan, and Ernest Stevens, the two last-named being managing-directors. Mr. J. Murray Herriot is the new business-manager. The directors have already engaged some of the leading companies to present in rapid succession all the latest West End attractions.

Mr. Clarence Sounes has decided to revise the admission prices at the Prince's Theatre, Poplar, starting from Monday next, when Miss Lilian Dundas will appear in East Lynne. This production will be followed by Peggy Machree, The Christian, and other important pieces. With such powerful attractions, a beautiful theatre, and prices arranged to suit all pockets, the people of Poplar are more fortunate than those in many of the other suburbs.

Mr. Edward Compton, who is appearing at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, this week, had an enthusiastic call after the second act of David Garrick, and in response said:—"I don't think we ought to allow this evening to conclude without offering our sincere congratulations to Mrs. Gunn on entering to-night, as it were, into her own again, and wishing her every possible measure of success in her sole responsible direction of the Gaiety Theatre. The name of Gunn is so well known in Dublin, and is linked to your beautiful city with so many memorable and delightful associations, that no words of mine are needed to commend so well-known and popular a lady to you; but at least I may be permitted to prophesy that you will treat her with that kindness and sympathy and appreciation which you always so abundantly bestow on public servants gallantly trying to do their duty, and that I may assure her from you to be of good heart as she and the Gaiety Theatre may confidently count on your generous support in the future as in the past, for I know that you are, all of you, her very good friends and well-wishers."

Mr. Alexander Loftus succeeded in his case against Mr. Ernest Carpenter, of the Grand Theatre, Brighton. Mr. Loftus sued for £105 for breach of contract, which sum Mr. Justice Kennedy awarded him, with costs. Mr. Carpenter paid the amount into Court, but has appealed from the decision.

Mr. Robert Forsyth, who controlled with so much success the band-stand concerts at Clacton for the past six seasons, terminated his lease with the Council last month, the municipal authorities having decided to furnish the concerts in future themselves. This season he is running the pier and band-stand at Bognor, and also one of the most popular band-stands on the East Coast.

"Raffles," which is to be Mr. Charles Frohman's next enterprise, is being energetically rehearsed at the Comedy. The production is fixed for Thursday next.

Mr. C. W. Somerset's Human Hearts company opened at the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, on Monday last to a large and enthusiastic audience. The play instantly caught the favour of the public, and, being brilliantly acted throughout, secured a great success, the business increasing nightly.

The Easter term of the Academy of Dramatic Art opened on Saturday. The gold medal and judges' prize were presented by Mr. John Hare in the presence of all the students to Miss Mary Barton and Mr. Robert Atkins respectively, who, on account of the excellence of their past work, have also been awarded by the council free tuition for three terms. Mr. Tree has promised to give an additional annual prize. Mr. James Fernandez and Mr. Lyall Swete have joined the staff of the academy, and during this term certain classes will be taken by Mr. John Hare, Mr. George Alexander, and Lady Bancroft.

At Mr. William Bailey's West London Theatre on Monday the attraction will be a new version by J. F. Brandon of Oliver Twist. On Thursday evening the annual benefit of Mr. James Sinclair, the popular acting-manager, will take place, when, in addition to Oliver Twist, the élite of the dramatic and variety professions will appear.

Mr. Robert Minster, who will be remembered by his good work at Drury Lane and lately in the leading part in Old Heidelberg, has been engaged by M. Russell Rosse to support Miss Muriel Godfrey-Turner in the principal leading rôles of the repertory which the lady will be playing in the principal provincial towns. The pieces will include The School for Scandal, She Stoops to Conquer, Lady of Lyons, Marriage of Convenience, and La Dame aux Camelias.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Edward Christian Silverthorne, a gentleman for many years associated with the firm of Messrs. Rothschild, and a well-known figure in amateur musical and dramatic circles, in which he was known under the popular sobriquet of "Teddy Silverthorne." He was greatly interested in the Royal General Theatrical Fund, and was a prime mover in the organisation of the great benefit to the late Miss Nellie Farren, held at Drury Lane Theatre, in March, 1898. Mr. Silverthorne, who died suddenly at Catford on Tuesday, was buried yesterday (Friday) at Ladywell.

Mr. Arthur Rodney has recently concluded an engagement with Mr. Mark Blow's Under Two Flags and A Sailor's Sweetheart companies as acting-manager, and has returned from Scotland in the best of health. He is now busily engaged in booking two musical attractions for the autumn, and has several important dates under consideration.

At the Liverpool Court of Bankruptcy on Monday, the public examination of Mr. Percy Boucher, an actor recently holding an appointment at the Theatre Royal, Breck-road, Liverpool, as comedian and provider of entertainment, and now engaged there as principal comedian at a salary of £3 a week, took place. The bankrupt, whose liabilities are returned at £509, with no assets, stated that he was formerly a clerk in London, and in 1887, when hardly twenty years of age, he joined the theatrical profession. In August, 1890, he became manager and proprietor of a melodrama entitled When Rogues Fall Out, and with this he travelled for about two years, appearing in Liverpool and Birkenhead, and some other places with successful results, but in others at a loss. He had met with difficulty, however, in obtaining consecutive bookings at theatres in towns with a population not large enough to maintain a theatre, and through this cause, and the division of profits with others interested financially in the production of the play, he had lost money.

After that, and up to June, 1903, he acted in various towns on salary, and in June of that year he took a licensed public-house in Great Yarmouth, known as "Barnby's Old House." This was a small business, and, after holding it less than a year, he relinquished it, having in the meantime made "just a living" out of it. He left no liabilities there. In 1904 he returned to London, and got an engagement at a music-hall, and he continued in the Metropolis, acting in various companies, until the end of 1904, when he went to Liverpool to the Theatre Royal, Breck-road. While on tour with When Rogues Fall Out he latterly kept no books, as he got disheartened. The examination was adjourned to May 21, in order mainly that the Official Receiver might investigate further the bankrupt's interest in When Rogues Fall Out.

Signor Caruso, who is fast recovering from the shock he sustained in San Francisco, is expected to arrive soon in London to sing at the Opera. The eminent tenor's voice is in no way injured. Signor Caruso has an effective method of establishing his identity, which on at least one important occasion has been called into question. He visited a bank, and the cautious manager was dissatisfied with the tenor's assertions that he was Signor Enrico Caruso. So, to convince him, Caruso forthwith burst into song, and the amazed bank manager hastened to apologise for having doubted the singer's word.

Mr. Willie Clarkson will supply all the costumes, armour, swords, horse-trappings, &c., as well as the ship for "crossing the line," at the forthcoming Royal Military Tournament at Olympia.

MISS ELLEN TERRY.

Ellen Terry, whose remarkably successful stage career has extended over the period of half-a-century, was born on Feb. 27, 1848. Her father, Benjamin Terry, was in his early days connected with the Edinburgh stage; but it was while her parents were fulfilling an engagement at Coventry that their daughter Ellen was born. While he was in Edinburgh Benjamin Terry attracted the attention of Charles Kean, and eventually he obtained an engagement at the London Princess's Theatre, where the experienced actor not only played many parts, but became assistant stage-manager to Kean. When the famous series of Shakespearean revivals demanded the appearance of clever children, what was more natural than a conference between Kean and his trusted lieutenant, and the recommendation by the fond father of the engagement of his gifted little daughters, Kate and Ellen? Their services were secured, and at a very early period of their lives they began to make stage history.

It was on April 28, 1856, that Ellen Terry made her first appearance on the stage, at the Princess's Theatre, as Mamillius in The Winter's Tale. On the following Oct. 15 she played Puck in A Midsummer Night's Dream; on Dec. 26, 1857, the fairy Golden Star in The White Cat pantomime; on April 5, 1858, Karl in Faust and Marguerite; on Oct. 18, Prince Arthur in King John; on Nov. 17, Fleance in Macbeth; and on Dec. 28 of the same year the Genius of the Jewels in the pantomime of The King of the Castle. As poor little Mamillius, cursed with a jealous yet respected father, and wondering what the troubles could be that existed between him and his unhappy, deeply-wronged mother, she must have been very sweet. The Times of May 1, 1856, remarks: "Miss Ellen Terry plays the boy Mamillius with a vivacious precocity that proves her a worthy relative of her sister Miss Kate." According to her own account of that memorable night—Queen Victoria, Prince Albert, and the Princess Royal were present—she wept bitter tears because the audience laughed when she fell over the rather ridiculous toy cart with which Mamillius was ordered to "go play." She has called it her "first dramatic failure," and she felt at the moment that her "career as an actress was ruined for ever."

Ellen Terry has happier recollections of Puck than of Mamillius, and no wonder, for the part, although trying, is a delightful one. During the two hundred and fifty nights of the performance of A Midsummer Night's Dream at the Princess's (a marvellous run for those days) she "revelled in the impish unreason of 'the sprite,'" and since then she has ever felt the charm of parts "where imagination can have free play, and there is no occasion to observe too closely the cold, hard rules of conventionality, and the fetters of dry-as-dust realism."

Another Princess's experience was her appearance as a diminutive "tiger" page boy in a forgotten farce by Edmund Yates, entitled If the Cap Fits, and she confesses to the infinite pride she took in her pair of miniature and rather tight-fitting top-boots. Here again, though in a different way to her Shakespearean representations, success was secured.

Charles Kean's memorable management of the Princess's Theatre came to an end in 1859, and with it terminated the engagement of the Terry family. But the youthful fame of Kate and Ellen was well established, and under the direction of their father a "Drawing-Room Entertainment" was given at the Royal Colosseum, Regent's Park, the whole of the programme being carried out by the clever sisters. It proved so attractive that it ran for thirty nights, and the Terrys toured with this entertainment for two years.

Coming back to London, Ellen Terry secured an engagement at the Royalty Theatre, which had just passed into the hands of a Madame Albina de Rhona, an attractive Parisian actress and danseuse, who had boldly resolved to try her luck as an English manageress. In an adaptation of Eugene Sue's grim romance, Atar-Gull Ellen Terry played the part of a young girl named Clementine, who appeared in one appalling scene with a live serpent coiled about her neck and body.

Into this horrible situation, and the opportunity it afforded her, the still childish Ellen Terry put her whole heart, and outscreamed all actresses, whether young or old. It was not one long scream and then collapse. As her terror and agony seemed to increase, shriek succeeded shriek—a shriek for deliverance—a shriek of bodily anguish—and a shriek of hopeless despair. No doubt the effect was startling, and unquestionably it thrilled her audiences. It was all wonderfully done, and the fear of the wretched girl was depicted with almost painful fidelity. But the ridiculous, misplaced, and sensational play made the situation an absurd one.

The engagement at the Royalty was only a stop-gap, and at its termination the wise Mr. Ben Terry took his daughter "to school" in one of the famous stock companies that then existed in all the large provincial towns. It was in the early 'sixties that Ellen and Kate were engaged by James Henry Chute as members of his stock company, the younger sister being then "a girl of fourteen of tall figure, with a round, dimpled, laughing, mischievous face, a pair of merry, saucy grey eyes, and an aureole of golden hair, which she wore, in the words of a modern ditty, 'hanging down her back.'" Ellen soon became a great favourite in Bristol, her popularity being largely due to her performances in two of the Brough brothers' burlesques, Endymion and Perseus and Andromeda.

One of the company thus writes: "If I had to describe her acting in those days, I should say its chief characteristic was a vivacious sauciness. Her voice already had some of the rich sympathetic quality which has since been one of her most distinctive charms. Although only in the first flush of a joyous girlhood, she was yet familiar enough with the stage to be absolutely at home on it, and in such complete touch with her audiences that she could afford to discard the serious spirit altogether, even when the situation demanded a less frivolous mood. That she made these little subordinate parts in the burlesques not only dominate the stage at the time, but also caused them to live in the memory all these years, is evidence enough of the compelling force and infection of her irrepressible mirthfulness."

In April, 1862, the old Bath Theatre was destroyed by fire, but within a year was rebuilt by James Henry Chute, and on March 4, 1863, Ellen Terry appeared here as Titania in A Midsummer Night's Dream.

In the year 1863 the late E. A. Sothern produced at the Haymarket Theatre an adaptation from the French play, La Joie de la Maison, entitled The Little Treasure. Ellen Terry had played the part of the sweet young girl, Gertrude, in Bristol; her growing fame had reached London, and she was engaged to represent this important character at the Haymarket. Her success was instantaneous, and Mr. E. L. Blanchard, who was for so many years a valued member of the staff of this journal, wrote a most flattering notice of the young actress, testifying to her "vivacity and intelligence" and the "joyous spirit and deep feeling with which she imbued the impersonation." In due course she supported Sothern as Georgina in Our American Cousin, and during her stay at the Haymarket she played Julia in The Rivals to the Faulkland of Howe, the Sir Anthony Absolute of Chippendale, the Captain Absolute of William Farren, the Bob Acres of Buckstone, and the Mrs. Malaprop of Mrs. Chippendale. In Much Ado About Nothing she appeared as Hero to the Beatrice of Louisa Angell, and when that lady appeared as Letitia Hardy in The Belle's Stratagem, Ellen Terry was the Lady Touchwood. Let it not be forgotten that her own bewitching Letitia was destined to be one of the most attractive of her comedy impersonations at the Lyceum.

In the June of 1863 E. L. Blanchard records her appearance at the Princess's Theatre, and her performance of Desdemona to the Othello of Walter Montgomery; but not long after this, to the intense regret of those who were carefully watching the rapid progress of her artistic career, she temporarily left the stage.

However, in 1866, at the age of eighteen, she appeared at the Olympia Theatre, playing Helen to her sister Kate's Julia in The Hunchback. This was a special occasion; but in the following year she, to the great delight of the public, entered once more on a regular engagement. This was at the Queen's Theatre, in Long-acre, and it came at the right time. In the August of 1867 playgoers had mourned for the loss of their beloved Kate Terry. In the following October Ellen Terry was at hand to take her place in their hearts. In the previous June she had acted at the Holborn Theatre in a short-lived play by Tom Taylor, entitled The Antipodes; or, Ups and Downs of Life, but the piece gave little or no chance to the performers.

It was at the Queen's Theatre, Long-acre, that the new laurels were to be won. When Ellen Terry joined the company at this now defunct playhouse its fortunes were controlled by Alfred Wigan, with Charles Reade for an ally. Reade's drama, The Double Marriage, founded on his novel "White Lies," was produced at the Queen's on Oct. 24, 1867, with Ellen Terry and Fanny Addison as the heroines. It was in this play that Lionel Brough made his début on the London stage. The Double Marriage did not attract, and soon gave way to a revival of Still Waters Run Deep, in which Ellen Terry played to admiration the by no means easy character of Mrs. Mildmay. On Dec. 26 a very interesting event took place. Garrick's one-act excision from The Taming of the Shrew, dubbed Katherine and Petruchio, was revived, and in it Ellen Terry played for the first time with Henry Irving. In her "Stray Memories," Miss Terry has thus recorded the impression made upon her by Henry Irving in those early days:

"From the first," she says, "I noticed that Mr. Irving worked more concentratedly than all the other actors put together, and the most important lesson of my working life I learnt from him, that to do one's work well one must work continually, live a life of constant self-denial for that purpose, and, in short, keep one's nose upon the grindstone. It is a lesson one had better learn early in stage life, I think, for the bright, glorious, healthy career of an actor is but brief at the best."

At the close of her brief engagement at the Queen's Ellen Terry again retired from the stage, and seven years elapsed before she reappeared behind the footlights. During this period she became the wife of Mr. Charles Wardell, who adopted the name of Charles Kelly when, retiring from his position as an officer in a first-class cavalry regiment, he followed his inclinations and took to the stage. In parts of what may be called a stolid type Charles Kelly had, in his day, no rival, and his successes were many.

In the early days of 1874 London theatre-lovers were considerably puzzled as to who an "eminent actress" could be who, "after a long period of retirement," was announced to appear at the Queen's Theatre as the herone of Charles Reade's drama, The Wandering Heir, following Mrs. John Wood in the part of Philippa Chester. Until almost the last moment the secret of the vague announcement was well kept, and then, to the general joy, it was discovered that the "dark lady" was Ellen Terry. Her success was complete; and from that date to the present the clever and esteemed actress has remained faithful to the stage. When his tenancy of the Queen's Theatre came to an end Charles Reade took his plays and his loyal little company over Westminster Bridge to "Astley's" of immortal memory, and there Ellen Terry distinguished herself not only as Philippa Chester, but as Susan Merton in the famous Never Too Late to Mend.

It was in 1875 that the Bancrofts revived at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, in Tottenham-street, The Merchant of Venice with remarkably artistic scenic effects. Charles Coghlan was the Shylock, and in Ellen Terry was found an ideal Portia. This engagement proved to be in some ways the most eventful episode in her stage career. Though heavily handicapped by being associated with an insipid Shylock, the Portia was a never-to-be-forgotten triumph. It at once became apparent that we had amongst us an actress who could play the heroines of Shakespeare in a manner that would vie with her great predecessors in the parts, and that she would endow them with new graces and sweet fancies of her own. Since the night when Ellen Terry first played Portia it has never lost its hold upon the public or its influence upon our stage.

Other notable Shakespearean creations were to follow. To the general regret we have not seen Ellen Terry's Rosalind or Miranda, but she has triumphed as Viola and Imogen, and (though she did not satisfy everyone in the part) has proved that her physical and artistic resources were equal to the portrayal of the passion and sorrow of Juliet. She has shone as Beatrice, Cordelia, Desdemona, Lady Anne, and Ophelia; she had astonished us and excited our admiration as Queen Katherine and Lady Macbeth, and has even made a great personal success as the determined Volumnia. Add to these the Mamillius, Puck, Prince Arthur, Katherine, and other parts of earlier days, and we see what a Shakespearean record has been made.

During her engagement at the Prince of Wales's Theatre she also appeared as Clara Douglas in Lord Lytton's comedy, Money; as Mabel Vane in Charles Reade and Tom Taylor's Masks and Faces; and as Blanche Haye in one of the many revivals of T. W. Robertson's Ours. In each of these characters her peculiar grace and distinction, coupled with tenderness, were apparent, but none of them offered her a chance worthy of her now fully-recognised power.

In 1876 Mr. John Hare secured the services of Ellen Terry, whose husband, Charles Kelly, was already serving under his banner, at the Court Theatre, in Sloane-square. Her first venture in her new home was as Kate Hungerford, the heroine in a comedy by Charles Coghlan, entitled Brothers, which failed to attract, and was speedily succeeded by a revival of the charming comedy, New Men and Old Acres, in which Ellen Terry played the part of Lilian Vavasour, which was created by Mrs. Kendal in the original production of the piece at the Haymarket Theatre. Early in 1877 a benefit performance was organised on behalf of Henry Compton, the veteran Haymarket comedian, and this was given at Drury Lane Theatre on March 1, when Ellen Terry appeared as Georgina Vesey in Lord Lytton's Money. On the production of the same author's posthumous play, The House of Darnley, at the Court Theatre, Miss Terry acted with great distinction as Lady Juliet, but the piece did not long hold the stage. She appeared for the first time as Lady Teazle in a performance of The School for Scandal, given at the Gaiety Theatre on June 20, 1877, for the benefit of Charles Lamb Kinney.

Mr. G. Wills's beautiful play Olivia was produced at the Court on March 30, 1878, and in the title-part Ellen Terry was the idolised heroine of a memorable evening. No wonder that this fascinating Olivia became the rage of the day. Her photographs went like wildfire; the milliners' windows were full of Olivia hats, caps, 'kerchiefs, and other items of feminine adornment; everywhere such dainty trifles were in evidence; and how many little Olivias were christened in 1878 it would be hard to say.

In the early autumn of 1878, before entering upon her all-important Lyceum engagement, Ellen Terry, accompanied by her husband, appeared in some of our leading provincial cities. Everywhere they were warmly welcomed, and the experiment proved so successful that even after her Lyceum duties seemed sufficient to engross all her time and attention, it was, during a period extending over two years, repeated. On the 1878 tour she relied chiefly on her former success as Lilian, in New Men and Old Acres, and her appearance in her sister Kate's original character of Dora, in the Tennyson-Reade play of that name. In the same year provincial theatre-goers also had the opportunity of seeing her as Iris in an adaptation by Alfred Thompson of La Revanche d'Iris, called All is Vanity. In 1879 the Terry-Kelly programme was augmented by the production of a version by Mrs. Comyns Carr of Frou Frou, entitled Butterfly, with Miss Terry in the name-part. On Sept. 3, at the Grand Theatre, Leeds, she appeared for the first time on any stage as Beatrice, and never was there an actress better fitted to represent the "pleasant-spirited" lady whose charms of face and figure are as irresistible as her verbal daggers. The curtain fell upon an unmistakable popular success which, according to the words of an eminent critic, "it wanted only practice and experience to convert into a paramount artistic victory."

It was indeed a momentous evening in the history of our stage when on Dec. 30, 1878, Ellen Terry first appeared at the Lyceum, playing Ophelia to the Hamlet of Henry Irving. It was no doubt a trying and anxious moment for her, but the true ring in the long and loud welcome which greeted her on the threshold of the home in which she was destined to do so much noble work must have gone to her heart, and assured her that all would be well. Her Ophelia was well described as tender, graceful, picturesque, and pathetic.

The next production at the Lyceum was The Lady of Lyons. Miss Terry had already appeared as Pauline at the Princess's Theatre, when she played it for a single performance to the Claude Melnotte of Charles Coghlan, and evoked pæans of praise from the critics, which were now repeated. Next came a revival of the stage version by W. G. Wills of Thomas Hood's The Dream of Eugene Aram, in which Miss Terry succeeded Isabel Bateman as Ruth Meadows. Again she followed the same actress as the pathetically-drawn Queen Henrietta Maria, in Wills's beautiful play, Charles I., which was given on June 27, 1879. At the end of this busy season, Miss Terry, on the occasion of her manager's benefit, played Lady Anne to his Gloucester in the first act of Richard III. On the following Nov. 1 was revived The Merchant of Venice, which, thanks to Ellen Terry's Portia and Henry Irving's Shylock, became one of the greatest of the long series of Lyceum triumphs.

In May, 1880, was presented Iolanthe, a version by W. G. Wills of Henrick Hertz's Danish play, King René's Daughter, finely acted by Ellen Terry and Irving. On Jan. 3, 1881, Lord Tennyson's two-act drama, The Cup—the "great little play," as Miss Terry called it—was produced, and another great victory was gained. Clement Scott considered her acting in this to have been one of the finest of her many inspirations. On April 16, 1881, The Cup was preceded by Mrs. Cowley's comedy, The Belle's Stratagem, in which Miss Terry played the part of Letitia Hardy with invincible vivacity and perfect grace, and in the costumes of a bygone period looked like a portrait by an old master come to life. For Irving's benefit at the end of the season she played Helen to his Modus in the comedy scenes from The Hunchback.

In the season of 1882 came the revival of Romeo and Juliet, and Miss Terry as the heroine, although the part did not suit her as well as other Shakespearean rôles she had played, increased rather than lessened her reputation with the public. On Oct. 11, 1882, Much Ado About Nothing was staged, and Ellen Terry again proved that the character of Beatrice suited her to perfection. In October, 1883, the Lyceum company sailed for New York, leaving a great gap in the English theatrical world.

We can give only a summary of the remainder of Miss Terry's brilliant performances at the Lyceum. In 1884 she appeared as Viola in the revival of Twelfth Night, and in the following year repeated her former triumph as Olivia in the play of that name. Her captivating Marguerite in Wills's adaptation of Faust deserves special mention. In 1886 she was the Peggy in the old farce of Raising the Wind; and the following year played Josephine in Byron's Werner at a special performance. Very charming was her Ellaline in The Amber Heart, produced in June, 1887; and on Dec. 29 the following year she first appeared as Lady Macbeth, her acting in this part filling everyone with wonder and admiration. She next appeared as Catherine Duval in a revival of the stirring drama, The Dead Heart (Sept. 29, 1889), and she was the Lucy Ashton in Ravenswood, produced in September, 1890. In the famous revival of Henry VIII. she represented Queen Katherine; and then, as Cordelia in King Lear, she rejoiced in a new and striking triumph. Her next original impersonation was that of Fair Rosamund in Tennyson's play Becket, followed by Guinevere in the same author's King Arthur. In the revival of Cymbeline in 1896 she was an ideal Imogen. Later, Ellen Terry was seen as Madame Sans-Gêne in the play of Edith, also as the Empress Catherine in Peter the Great, as Sylvia Wynford in The Medicine Man, as Clarice de Malucon in Robespierre, and as Volumnia in Coriolanus (April 15, 1901).

As long ago as 1879 Irving had announced his intention of appearing as the noble Roman in company with Ellen Terry as Volumnia. At that time a writer said:—"Some surprise may, perhaps, be felt at the circumstance that it is in contemplation to assign the character of Volumnia to Ellen Terry; but the part is by tradition and by reason of its intrinsic importance the lawful inheritance of the leading tragic actress of the company. It was one of Mrs. Siddons' famous impersonations, though it was complained she had not the good sense to follow Mrs. Woffington's example as to her face, and consequently was on the stage as off, Kemble's sister, not his mother."

When Mr. Tree revived The Merry Wives of Windsor at His Majesty's Theatre in June, 1902, Miss Terry's appearance in the rôle of Mistress Page was hailed with the heartiest expressions of delight. She sounded a note of infectious merriment from the time she read Falstaff's letter until the end, and her embodiment was instinct with her usual personal charm and irresistible gaiety of manner. Another memorable event was the appearance of Miss Terry and Mrs. Kendal as Mistress Page and Mistress Ford at His Majesty's; a fine painting of the two popular actresses in those characters by the Hon. John Collier being now on view at His Majesty's Theatre.

In the spring of 1903 Miss Terry opened for a season at the Imperial Theatre, appearing in The Vikings, a version in four acts of Henrik Ibsen's Warriors of Helgeland, and also in Much Ado About Nothing. Later she went on tour with The Good Hope, by Hermann Heijermans, translated by Christopher St. John, in which she appeared as Kniertje, the fisherman's widow. In 1904 she created the principal part in J. M. Barrie's Alice Sit-by-the-Fire at the Duke of York's.

Miss Terry's undoubted success in the part of Lady Cicely Waynflete in the revival at the Court Theatre of Mr. George Bernard Shaw's play, Captain Brassbound's Conversion, affords convincing evidence of the lasting vitality of her powers as an actress, and her quick perception of the salient points of a new character.

A summary of Ellen Terry's theatrical career would not be complete without a few lines concerning her visits to America. As already mentioned, Henry Irving and Miss Terry left England for the first time for New York on Oct. 11, 1883.

The following extract from an interview with Miss Terry immediately after her arrival is of more than passing interest: "Do you consider Charles I. will present you to a New York audience in one of your best characters?" "No, and I am not very fond of the part of Henrietta Maria either." "What are your favourite characters?" "Oh, I hardly know. I love nearly all I play; but I don't like to cry, and I cannot help it in Charles I. I like comedy best—Portia, Beatrice, and Letitia Hardy."

"Not only were the leading professional critics delighted with Miss Terry's acting. She had many flattering proofs of the pleasure which her performances had given to such representative men as Henry Ward Beecher and Oliver Wendell Holmes, and the literary and artistic societies of the cities in which she played vied with one another in doing her honour. The enthusiastic welcome which Ellen Terry received on her first visit to America has been repeated with the same cordiality on the occasions of her most recent visits.

There is no need to enlarge upon the sunny nature and sweet disposition of Ellen Terry, that, in the words of a distinguished contemporary actress, Miss Geneviève Ward, "prompts her to be generous, thoughtful, kind, and considerate to everyone." In conclusion, we cannot do better than quote a significant passage from her own "Stray Memories": "Why is it, I wonder, that pain is so deeply felt at the time, and that its memory fades so quickly, while joy flits by almost unperceived and yet leaves such deep traces behind? At least, that is my experience. It may not be so with most people. They may, perhaps, suffer deeply and remember lightly; enjoy strongly and forget quickly. If so, I pity them with all my heart. When I sit down to write it is not the sad recollections that come crowding before me; it is the bright, joyous moments which shape themselves most distinctly in my mind. 'Oh, what a light, frivolous nature you must have, then!' I hear some grave and reverend signior remark, if any such person ever deigns to read this flimsy chatter. Well, I am ready to plead guilty to the charge. I was made like that, and so Nature is to blame, not I."

The above record of Miss Terry's career is taken principally from the late T. Edgar Pemberton's well-written interesting book, "Ellen Terry and Her Sisters," published in 1902.

MISS ELLEN TERRY.

ANTOINETTE STERLING.

Miss Antoinette Sterling, by the pen of her appreciative biographer, Mr. Sterling Mackinlay, in the interesting book published and illustrated in such artistic style by Messrs. Hutchinson and Co., and entitled "Antoinette Sterling and Other Celebrities," gives some amusing reminiscences of the drama. In the chapter devoted to "Theatrical Thoughts," is the following:—

"When Forbes Robertson produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre The Moonlight Blossom, an episode took place which is worth recounting. The plot of the play was laid in China, and among other 'properties required was a gin-bottle, for use in a certain scene. After immense trouble, the invaluable Mr. Ian succeeded in obtaining a genuine one, such as was actually used in that country to hold this particular liquor. The casual observer, unstudied in the ways of the Heathen Chinee, would have imagined from its shape that it was simply a graceful vase, spiritual rather than spirituous in design.

If the bowl had been stronger
The tale had been longer, were the classic lines written concerning the Wise Men who went to sea in that very odd substitute for a boat. In the present case, if the bottle had been more gin-like in appearance,

The tale had been shorter.

"In fact, it would have resembled the Manx cat; there wouldn't have been any tale at all. However, as already stated, the vessel seemed to be that which it was not. When, therefore, during rehearsal one day it was brought on to the stage in triumph, Mrs. Patrick Campbell saw it, loved it, and with happy inspiration said, 'What a sweet vase! Why not have it placed on a table? It would give an opportunity for "business"; I might arrange some flowers in it during one of the scenes.'

"The 'vase' was forthwith annexed for this fresh purpose, and Mr. Ian had to go off to hunt up something else to take its place.

"So far, so good. For some nights all went well; the 'business' was introduced, the flowers were arranged in the 'vase,' and the public admired the effect, being no more learned in this particular branch of Chinese lore than Mrs. Campbell.

"But a day, or rather a night, of reckoning was at hand. The Chinese Ambassador and suite came to see The Moonlight Blossom. Throughout the performance the party sat entranced, and applauded vigorously upon the smallest provocation. When the curtain had fallen on the last act, the Imperial representative came round to congratulate the manager. In the most exalted of celestial phraseology, he expressed himself as being delighted with all that he had seen and heard. Then he stopped, looked a little doubtful, and added, 'One thing I did not understand. Why did the beautiful actress place those exquisite flowers in an empty gin-bottle?'

"The rest was silence; but at the next performance it was wisely decided to leave out the touching incident of adorning with floral tributes the vessel which had been dedicated to the specific use of Bacchus. The mention of this recalls the answer made by a boardschool child, who was asked to explain the meaning of 'demagogue,' and confused it with 'demijohn.' 'A demagogue is generally filled with beer or other liquor.'

"Had not Forbes Robertson devoted his principal attention to the drama, there is no doubt that he would have made a leading position among artists. Like Weedon Grossmith and many other actors, he displayed great talent in painting. At the age of sixteen he went to study at Hetherley's, with a view to entering the Academy Art Schools. His father, being so well known as an art critic, he himself naturally moved in artistic circles. Madox Brown took much interest in his work, as also did Rossetti, whose house in Chelsea he used often to visit, taking his drawings with him for criticism. He sat, moreover, for the figure of Love in Rossetti's picture of 'Dante's Dream.' He was very soon admitted to the Art Schools, and here his fellow students included Frank Dicksee, Waterhouse, Gilbert, and Thornycroft.

"Of the fine work of which Forbes Robertson is capable there are many examples. Among his portraits are those of Ellen Terry, Modjeska, and Mary Anderson; while one of his best pictures shows the church scene in Much Ado about Nothing, as produced at the Lyceum by Sir Henry Irving. It was through the influence of W. G. Wills that he made his first appearance on the stage in Marie Stuart, a play by the painter-dramatist, which was produced at the Princess's Theatre, with Mrs. Rouseby in the title part. From this he went out in a travelling company, of which Ellen Terry was a member. During these months, Charles Reade, the novelist and playwright, who was the organiser of the tour, gave him a commission to do a picture, since he was still keeping up his painting professionally.

"Forbes Robertson is one of the trio who have made Charterhouse the most successful among the public schools in providing the stage with prominent actors, the other two Carthusians being Cyril Maude and Fred Kerr. Eton College makes a good second with Arthur Bourchier and Charles Hawtrey.

"In his schooldays Bourchier spent the greater part of his pocket-money in buying toy theatres, on the diminutive stages of which would be enacted the most thrilling of bloodcurdling melodramas. During the holidays he would pass most of the time in getting up charades and plays. Any boys in the neighbourhood of Newbury who possessed a vestige of talent, or even displayed the faintest interest in the drama, were at once pressed to take part.

"Captain Bourchier had always wished his son to go into the Army. The latter, however, insisted that the drama was the career best suited to his tastes, so the Captain struck a bargain. 'Go to Oxford and take your degree; then, if you still wish it, you shall go on the stage.' 'Agreed,' said his son, and forthwith went up to Christ Church, where he duly graduated.

"The audiences at the Oxford Theatre were fairly rowdy. In the case of musical comedy the excitement increased steadily throughout the week. By the last evening it had worked up to such a pitch that it was difficult to hear any dialogue whatsoever, and the familiar songs were reinforced from the front of the house by an unpaid and unsolicited choir of what could scarcely be termed angel voices. Into such a wild state did the Saturday night 'rags' develop, that notice was eventually given by the authorities, in whose veins must have flowed the blood of 'ould Oireland,' to the effect that, unless the noise raised upon the final evenings were stopped, the companies would not be allowed to give any last performance at all, but would in future finish on the Friday evening.

"The Oxford audience must have been a trying one to face. The unfortunate 'small part' ladies and gentlemen, who had one, or, at most, two lines to utter, came off specially badly. In J. M. Barrie's delightful piece, The Professor's Love Story, which came up for a week, one of the scenes was laid in the meadows. During the act, a servant had to enter with a picnic-basket, and inquire, 'Where shall I lay the lunch, sir?' These words instantly captivated the fancy of those in front. A mighty roar went up from the assembled undergraduates, 'Bravo! Encore!' This went on for some minutes, and eventually, before the dialogue was allowed to continue, the unhappy man was obliged to repeat his poor little ewe-line three times, amid the most deafening applause."

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

FIFTY YEARS OF THE DRAMA.

Kind expressions from Authors and Managers.

SIR SQUIRE BANCROFT.

"I congratulate you on your 'Fifty Years of the Drama': the list must prove both interesting and useful to lovers of and workers for the stage."

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

"I think the new feature of The Era is most interesting and useful. A list of plays produced from 1850 to 1900 will certainly be of great service to a very large number of your readers."

MR. EDWARD TERRY.

"An admirable idea, and will prove a most valuable record."

MR. FRANK CURZON.

"Your list, I think, will be most useful for reference."

MRS. W. K. CLIFFORD.

"I think the list will be immensely useful."

MR. SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"Your list will be exceedingly useful. But, of course, there is no reason why old titles should not be used again. Indeed, some day we shall have to go back to them. Some of our modern titles, when they are not mere proper names with an adjective attached, display the desperation of the dramatist in too ludicrous a light. Such a title as 'The Importance of Being Earnest' amounts to a misdemeanour."

MR. ARTHUR W. PINERO.

"The list of plays produced during the last half-century is a most valuable record. The thanks of those interested in the theatre are due to The Era for this and many other enterprises."

MR. ALFRED SUTRO.

"The list you are compiling will be of very great benefit, and I am looking forward to the time when it shall be complete, and obtainable in pamphlet form."

MR. JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY.

"I have watched with the greatest interest the progress of your alphabetical list of the plays published during the last half of the nineteenth century. It is a most useful undertaking, and when it appears in volume form, it must prove of great value to all who are concerned with the drama."

MR. ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

"The list of plays will be very interesting and useful when published in complete form. The etiquette of the profession apparently still allows of novelists' titles being used by playwrights. Thus, The Master, which will appear in your list as a play by somebody else, is the name of a book of mine; while the new play, Noah's Ark, has the same title as a shorter story of mine."

MR. ARTHUR LAW.

"The publication in The Era of a list of plays produced during the fifty years, 1850-1900, is an excellent idea, and will be most useful to authors who may be in doubt as to their right to a certain title. When it is issued in book form I shall be very glad to possess a copy."

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

"Mr. Arthur Bourchier thinks the list very useful indeed."

MR. TOM GALLON.

"Your idea seems to me to be a most excellent one. Quite apart from the fact that there is always a difficulty in knowing what titles have been used, there very often arises the question of when and where a play was actually produced—a question difficult to be answered. Actors and authors should alike be grateful to The Era."

MR. LOUIS N. PARKER.

"I think your list of plays, produced between 1850 and 1900, will, like the other contents of your

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN,

The Royal Opera opened for the season on Thursday with every promise of a most brilliant season. The grand house was filled with a most distinguished audience, and everything, both on the stage and in front of the house, betokened that the syndicate would not fall short of the glorious traditions of the past. The star of Wagner was in the ascendant, for in place of a hackneyed opera to commence the season, that great work, Tristan und Isolde, opened the list of operas, and Dr. Richter, besides conducting two cycles of the Nibelungen Ring, also directed the performance of Tristan. Great changes are likely to take place in the operatic doings this year, for a revival of the ballet is contemplated, and several old operas are to be played under new conditions. For example, The Flying Dutchman is to be played in two acts, and the weird, unearthly appearance of the "phantom ship" is to be arranged after the pattern of the Munich performance which so greatly impressed the audience of that artistic city. Siegfried also is to be supplied with a brand new dragon, who will give the hero more trouble to kill him than hitherto. Tristan, taken from the old legend of Gottfried von Strasburg, follows the original pretty closely, the greatest change being the substitution of the false Knight Melot for the mischievous dwarf who warns King Mark of the meeting of the guilty lovers at night. The heroine was sustained by Frau Wittich with her customary force and expression, the intensity of her acting being a striking feature warmly recognised by the audience. Herr Burnan, the tenor originally announced, was unable to appear, and Herr Burger, from Berlin, a young tenor who has studied under M. Jean de Reszke, represented the hero with no little intelligence and with considerable vocal skill. If Herr Burger did not always reach the required standard, his average performance proved him to have the artistic qualities necessary to do full justice to the character in the future, when the excitement of a first appearance had been overcome. Mme. Kirkby Lunn made a first-rate Brangäne. Her by-play where Brangäne changes the poison for the love-philtre could hardly have been better. As the rugged but faithful retainer Kurwenal, Herr Braun succeeded; and Herr Knüpfer was dignified as King Mark. The National Anthem was given as usual. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught and her daughter, Princess Patricia, headed the brilliant audience, which comprised the chief representatives of rank and fashion at present in London.

FUJI-KO, a Japanese actress, will present in London this season a one-act "dream-play" of Japan, entitled The Love of a Geisha, and described as an embodied idea of the doctrine of Nirvana reduced to a popular form. Mystifying illusions have been executed by the Japanese artist Yoshio Markino, the music of Japan has been adapted by Paul Bevan, M.A., F.S.A., hon. treasurer of the Japan Society, and "animated epochs" by Mr. Charles Urban will also be supplied.

HERMANN SUDERMANN'S Johannisfeuer, translated by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Grein, will be produced by the Stage Society at the Scala Theatre on May 13. The play will be staged by Herr Hans Andresen, and the cast will include Messrs. Blake Adams, Leslie Faber, Athol Stewart, Fewlass Llewellyn, Miss Elsie Chester, Miss May Martyn, Miss Suzanne Sheldon, Mrs. Calhaem, Miss Inez Bensusan, and Miss Hope Mayne.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS IRENE ROSS.

Miss Irene Ross was educated in London and Germany, and then studied for the stage for a year under Miss Bateman (Mrs. Crowe), for whose kindness and help she will always be grateful.

Her first engagement was to play Stephanus in one of Mr. Ben Greet's companies. She acted this part in The Sign of the Cross for a year and a half. She was then re-engaged by Mr. Greet to play Micah Dow in The Little Minister for two tours. Her next engagement was under Hardie and Von S. Leer's management to play Wally in The Two Little Vagabonds. She remained three tours with this company. Then followed a short tour with Mrs. Constance Stuart, Miss Ross playing Milly in On an Island, and understudying in There's Many a Slip. Her next long engagement was for six months under Mr. W. H. Hallatt's management, during which period she played Tom Yorke in Two Little Sailor Boys.

After this came several short engagements under

MISS IRENE ROSS.

Mr. Gore Ouseley's management, the young actress playing Martha in David Copperfield; under Mr. Yate's management, the Urchin in One Summer's Day; and for the third consecutive year she played in pastorals with Miss Telleck's company, Phoebe in As You Like It, Myrine in Pygmalion and Galatea, Azéma in The Palace of Truth, &c. She has also played in pastorals under Mr. Ben Greet's and Mr. Arthur Applin's management.

In the autumn of 1904 Miss Ross was engaged by Mr. Lilford Arthur for the company supporting Mr. Charles Collette, when she played Birdikins in Jones's Jaunt. This engagement lasted over several months, and shortly after returning to town she was engaged by Mr. Allan Wilkie for the parts in his répertoire. Last autumn she appeared as Sam Willoughby in The Ticket-of-Leave Man, Henri in Belphegor, Pedro in Don Cæsar de Bazan, Little Willie in East Lynne, and parts in The Corsican Brothers and The Fool's Revenge.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

THE Sports Committee have much pleasure in announcing that Miss Irene Vanbrugh has kindly consented to present the prizes to successful competitors at the sports on Whit-Tuesday. At a meeting of the Committee on Thursday night it was decided that teams entering for the tug-of-war competition be weighed on the ground, as dressed to pull, and that a margin of 10lbs. in excess of the maximum weight of 60st. be allowed per team. Mr. J. White, captain of the Dublin team, has been appointed referee to this competition. Mr. White writes that the Empire Dublin team will not compete this year. From reports to hand there are indications of a much larger number of teams taking part than last year. It has been suggested to the Committee that the coach of the teams winning the first and second prize be awarded a medal similar to that presented to the members of the winning team, and it is likely this suggestion will be adopted, and full particulars of the sports, tickets for which will be issued next week, may be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

MR. CHARLES JESSON, secretary of the London branch of the Musicians' Union, has been adopted as the Labour candidate for the vacancy in the London County Council for the Division of Walworth, caused by the death of Mr. Russell Spokes. As the Rev. Canon Jephson has resigned, there is a contest for both seats in this division. Mr. Jesson has been adopted by the Southwark Trades and Labour Council, and has every prospect of being elected.

A MEETING of stage employees will be held in Leicester to-morrow (Sunday) evening, at 6.15 p.m., when Mr. William Johnson, general secretary of the National Association Theatrical Employees, will attend and give an address with a view of a branch of that Association being formed in the town.

MR. E. CAPEL, one of the oldest employees of the Alhambra Theatre, died on Saturday last as he was proceeding to his home in an omnibus after the performance. At the inquest the cause of death was stated to be heart failure. The deceased was sixty-eight years old.

THE entries for the annual Theatrical Sports, which take place at the Stamford Bridge Athletic Ground, Fulham-road, on Whit-Tuesday, June 5, close on the 19th inst. Among the many prizes that will be put up for competition will be the Four Miles' Cycling Championship Shield, presented by Sir Thomas Dewar, which before becoming the property of the winner has to be won three times in succession, and the Championship Trophy and medals presented by Mr. C. Aubrey-Smith for the Four Miles Relay Race, in which one man has to walk, one to run, and the other to cycle.

"THE LIGHT THAT FAILED," adapted from the English by Herr Max Behrend, has been successfully produced at the Mainzer Stadt Theatre, Mainz. Herr August Weigert, from Munich, gave an excellent performance of Dick Helder, and will play the part again in Vienna. Fräulein Flora acted sympathetically as Maisie, her conception of the part varying in many ways from the reading of Miss Gertrude Elliott. The translator of George Flemming's clever play, Herr Behrend, is well known to playgoers on this side of the Channel in connection with the German Theatre in London. For six years he was co-director with Herr Hans Andresen, and also supervised Old Heidelberg at the St. James's Theatre, and other important London productions.

"THE LITTLE CHERUB" has matured, and has now assumed the title of The Girl upon the Stage. Under this title Mr. George Edwardes will produce this evening at the Prince of Wales's Theatre what is practically a new piece with a new plot, founded upon the former play. The theatre has been closed for a week for the purposes of rehearsal, and the new music, scenery, and dresses will be supplied on the liberal scale with which the name of Mr. Edwardes is associated. The cast of principals has been strengthened by the addition of Miss Ruth Vincent and Mr. Lionel Mackinder.

MR. WILLIAM LOCKHART, the Towzer in Mr. Louis Calvert's company, was accorded a complimentary benefit at Her Majesty's Theatre, Carlisle, on the 27th ult. There was a large and enthusiastic audience, and Mr. Lockhart, on coming forward to make a speech at the end of the first act, was received with cheers. He alluded to the time, six years ago, when he was acting-manager of Her Majesty's Theatre, and said there had been great changes since then. The old theatre had been burned to the ground, and in its place they now had a handsome structure which compared favourably with any theatre in the North. He theatre was well filled, because upon that depended the class of engagements that could be secured.

AN IMPROVEMENT ON "OTHELLO."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Your leader on Mr. Harrison's article in the National Review contains the following:—"Does anyone suppose for a moment that if Othello had not been written, and it were now published, the play would not be tried on the stage almost immediately by some London manager?" Very curiously, from my own experience, I am, I believe, in a better position to answer this query than anybody else, since I wrote a play after Othello, and published it, sixteen years ago. Theatrical journals, to whom I sent out copies for reviews, said they did not notice plays unless performed on the stage; while the others, with the exception of one, evidently could not be bothered with the book, as is usual in such-like cases. As regards the managers, they paid no heed to it. I had sent a first edition of the story in print to Mr. Henry Irving, who wrote me on this occasion that had his hands not been so full he would have put the play through on his stage to see how it came out. I know that these were only civil words, and I did not expect to hear from him again when I published my completed and revised version of the drama. In after years I sent a copy to an actor-manager whose style, I fancied, the leading male part would well suit. He wrote me that he saw in the play the possibility "of a great success"; but he was going off to America.

The only satisfactory notice of my play was contained in a weekly review, in a short criticism, written, I understand, by Mr. Clement Scott, a gentleman I never met, but then the leading dramatic critic in London. He said that, aiming high, I had succeeded as far as it was possible, and that my play was an excellent piece of work. I had sent him a print of my first edition of the story, or, rather, his then employer, Mr. French, engaged in reading unacted plays; and Mr. Scott's written opinion was also in this instance highly favourable, "with profound admiration of the abilities of the author"; but there was no demand whatever for such plays, and not a single bidder in London would be found.

These efforts of mine arose out of an article I wrote in the National Review, November, 1885, on "Shakespeare as a Dramatic Model," calling upon authors to bestir themselves, and, studying Shakespeare's methods for high stage successes, place a few new pieces of higher order in the theatre. As Professor Saintsbury says, Shakespeare has produced actors, but no authors. And why? Because they have received no encouragement, but are smothered out of existence, without trial or even enquiry, just as Othello dealt with his Desdemona.

A word or two as to your selection of Othello as a play that would instantly commend itself to intelligent managers being a fresh work. I say it would not. Managers write that they cannot judge of the value of a stage-play in MS. or print; and they would instantly discover in Othello a want of theatrical display and the sympathetic features which the modern manager looks for. The whole business of the play is mental torture; no sympathy is really due to Othello himself, and our keen interests are centred in the demoniacal mind of Iago. It is a work of the highest genius, and better suited for the closet than the stage, unless with the greatest actors.

In the matter of my play, I took Othello for my model, as it is a play of jealousy; but of a woman's, not a man's. Othello played the woman in his ready apprehensions and impulsiveness; but when the character is a woman—in this case a princess—acted upon by circumstances and human villainy, the spectators' sympathies are most easily gained. I believe, too, that in my play there is relief from the close mental combat, and more theatrical display, than in Othello.—Yours faithfully,

WM. SPINK.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. Rex Sugden, the manager of the King's Theatre, Kirkcaldy, was, on the 27th ult., made the recipient of a purse of sovereigns, which had been subscribed to by most of the leading citizens in the town, as a mark of their appreciation. Regret was expressed that the occasion of the presentation meant that Kirkcaldy was to be deprived of one who had by unfailing courtesy and untiring interest in the theatre-going people of the town, endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact. Mr. Sugden, in reply, said that the kindness shown him, not only that night, but during his eighteen months' sojourn in the "Lang Toon" by everyone whom he met, was such that he felt any words of his were inadequate to express his feelings. Whilst thanking his friends for the many kindnesses he had received, he could assure them that he would ever look back on his residence in Kirkcaldy with the greatest pleasure.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

ELLEN TERRY AND "THE SEVENTIES."

The enthusiasm with which the playgoing public have expressed their affectionate loyalty to Miss ELLEN TERRY on the attainment of her Jubilee Year is due to various causes. There is a large proportion of the population which would be quite satisfied if Miss TERRY could be born again, and go on acting her old parts in her young style again and again. But for the educated and elderly patron of the drama Miss TERRY is less an idol of the stage than a pathetic memento of his lost youth. And the youth that is lost is all the more regrettable because of its unconscious simplicity, its high spirits, and its happy ignorance. Art in the Early Victorian period was essentially shallow, cheerful, and contented. Nowadays, people know too much to be happy. In the sixties and the early seventies people laughed, grew fat, and had large families with absolute faith that their brood would laugh and grow fat after them. Mr. Briggs, the Victorian type of John Bull, was fat, with round, apple-like cheeks; Jorrocks was a ruddy man-mountain. The "condition of the people" was far worse than it is at present, yet no one in easy circumstances seemed to bother about it. Education for the masses was heartily ridiculed; and illustrations were issued showing how each individual trade would be corrupted by instruction. Women, it was agreed, had no "rights"; the "under-dog" was ignored; people were not troubled with "nerves"; Mr. Pickwick got drunk in a wheelbarrow; and plays were written without any reference to problems and without any taint of pessimism.

How different is it nowadays we have only to realise by taking the typical leading actresses of the day, and noting their essential characters and the nature of the pieces in which they appear. Miss LENA ASHWELL, though she is now subduing herself to represent the coquettish heroine of a costume comedy, made the deepest impression in Mrs. Dane's Defence and Resurrection, and her natural "line" is that of bitter, agonised revolt and protest. Miss OLGA NETHERSOLE'S favourite part is Sapho, the heroine of a morbidly realistic novel written with the purpose of warning young men against illicit connections. Mrs. TREE is at present playing a politically-intriguing poisoneress in a drama of grim and distressful destiny; and Miss MARION TERRY has of late always been seen on the stage in desperate and despairing straits not unconnected with the subtle play of human passion and perversity. The fiat has gone forth—to be "in the movement" you must be more or less miserable.

It was not so in the early seventies. "Alas! what days were those, Parmenides!" How we admired Money; and how we worshipped Miss TERRY as Clara Douglas! How we applauded that speech of hers: "With my whole heart I say it; be happy, Alfred Evelyn!" (faints). Of what people thought and what the Press said of Miss TERRY the following is a sample: "The expression of her face during the reading of the will which gives fortune to Evelyn is supremely beautiful; her moan of anguish as she hears the proposal to Georgina is irresistibly touching; and the final reconciliation is intense in its blissful serenity." And then the writer went on to admire the exemplification of "womanly sacrifice"—one of the most deleterious qualities possible, as Mr. BERNARD SHAW and Dr. IBSEN have fully explained to us. As for The Lady of Lyons, we have not the heart to do more than refer to the poor piece. He "hates it, who would upon the rack of 'analytic criticism' stretch it out further."

And then there was Masks and Faces, with that absolutely artificial and impossible scene between the two women in the last act, which we all thought "werry capital" in those days and cried over heartily. And, bound up with all these reminiscences, is that of the gracious figure of Miss TERRY, with her simple, exquisite, affectionate art, her sweet voice, and her magnetic personality.

It was a curious sign of the times that on some occasions Miss TERRY was not considered Early Victorian enough. She was too much of an artist, too essentially human for the tinsel parts that she had to play. The critic of a leading daily, discussing her Pauline in '79, said: "It must be confessed that nature portrayed with so much truth is a little out of keeping with the somewhat artificial character of the play. The old and more emphasised style was unquestionably that which was in the mind of the author." In other words, BULWER-LYTTON had to be treated LYTTON-ally.

But the joy of playgoing in the seventies was that we did not realise our deficiencies. There was no Stage Society; and those dreadfully "searching" Frenchmen M. BRIEUX, M. DE CUREL, and M. BECQUE were happily unknown to us. At present, the stage is "struggling between two worlds, one dead, the other struggling to be born." We make an experimental dash into the analytic, then we have a revulsion of feeling for the merely interesting and picturesque—"when in doubt playing" SHAKESPEARE, who can be put to all uses. And here our memories are unmarred by "education," for Miss TERRY'S Ophelia and her Portia are exquisite recollections, as delightful to-day as they were in the unsophisticated seventies. Miss TERRY'S truly feminine charm, her wayward, winning ways, her nervous but not neurotic temperament, her bright, eupeptic, amiable individuality, her fine physical organisation, and her technical excellence are qualities which were commoner in the "seventies" than they are at present, and are growing rarer year by year.

"LITTLE MICHUS" AT DALY'S.

FIRST BIRTHDAY.

Two sweet little maids, "so very devoted, you seldom are likely to see," is a phrase that may aptly be quoted in writing of the success of The Little Michus at Daly's, and on their first anniversary, which was celebrated by a very large audience on Saturday last, Mr. George Edwardes may again be heartily congratulated on a production that gives us melody and hearty fun in a dainty setting, and which is presented by a cast that realises with loyal unanimity all the excellent qualities of M. André Messager's score, of MM. A. Vanloo and G. Duval's story, of Mr. Henry Hamilton's excellent dialogue, and of Mr. Percy Greenbank's neat and well-turned lyrics. The success on the first night (April 29, 1905) was great, immediate, and complete, and the ringing cheers which greeted M. André Messager when he took a special call on Saturday (the birthday celebration right) would seem to presage at least another year's run for the work. Not an opportunity has been lost during the twelve months' run of the piece to add to its distinguishing characteristics of gaiety and vim.

Mr. George Graves, who succeeeded Mr. Willie Edouin in the part of General des Ifs after The Little Michus had been running four months, is simply irresistible. From his very first entrance in the splendid salon scene one is keenly conscious of the comicality of the creation. The lame hero of Saragossa is indeed as droll a figure as we have seen for many a year, either in comedy or comic opera. Mr. Graves's cachet as a comedian is furnished by the uncontrollable laughter of the audiences which crowd Daly's night after night, and such a whimsical perception has he of his responsibilities that nothing could be more exhilarating than his realisation of the pompous General.

Mr. James Blakely may be felicitated on the fact that his talents as a comedian find congenial scope in such a fat part as that of Bagnolet. Mr. Blakely was recognised as a laughter-maker on the halls before he was secured for the theatres, and there is a spontaneity and freedom about his acting which make of his soldier servant a most amusing personage. Mr. Blakely has an excellent number in "The Regiment of Frocks and Frills," to which he does complete justice, being assisted by a cohort of "soldiers," whose most deadly artillery lies in their glances.

Mr. Robert Evett, looking the pink of military smartness, suggests admirably the romantic spirit of the young Captain Gaston Rigaud, who is so hardly hit by Cupid, and of course sings delightfully the pretty solo, "Life is a riddle indeed," which on the night of our visit had to be partly repeated in answer to an insistent encore.

Mr. W. Louis Bradfield, who still plays the part of Aristide Vert, the lovesick shopboy, evinces all those agreeable qualities as a light comedian which make of him such a favourite, and sings a new number, "The lad behind the counter," with rare spirit and dash.

Mr. Fred Emney's quiet methods are effective in realising the character of Pierre Michu, whose colloquy with the general concerning the bath gives rise to the loudest laughter heard during the evening. Mr. Emney never over-accentuates the peculiarities of the character he represents, but always keeps it within the legitimate limits of comedy, and his success is artistic and complete.

Miss Amy Augarde's support as Madame Michu is of considerable value to the representation. Miss Augarde in Madame's flirtation with the General realises that the boutiquière is not beyond the age of coquetry, though it is—as the General naïvely suggests—some time since she "nibbled the teething ring," and plays with considerable unction.

Miss Denise Orme is a sweet and winsome representative of Marie Blanche, and gives an impersonation full of girlish grace and maidenly reserve; and we may say exactly the same of Miss Alice Hatton as Blanche Marie, the real heiress of the General. Two of the prettiest numbers in the score are the duets, "Two little maids, so very devoted" and the vocal prayer to St. Valentine. Both are enchantingly rendered by these two young actresses, who so cleverly sound the note of sisterly solicitude. Miss Denise Orme's success is further emphasised in the solo, "I would like to be a grand lady," and in the last act she secures a positive triumph by her newest number, a song with violin obbligato, in the third act. It is a very rare occurrence to hear an actress sing and play her own violin obbligato. The only time we remember it being done was when Miss Pauline Joran made her début at Covent Garden as the boy Beppe in Mascagni's opera, L'Amico Fritz, in 1893.

Mr. Willie Warde, who has arranged the dances and the chorus business, is quite amusing as the market man; Miss Watt Tanner is a good-tempered and buxom market woman; Miss Alice Oppitz realises the agreeable nature of the responsibilities of Mlle. Herpin; Miss Elizabeth Firth sings well in her one solo as Madame du Tertre; Mr. Jack Thompson is a smart sergeant; Mr. Lester Morrah an effective corporal; and Mr. Norman Greene a duly magnificent footman. Mlle. Adeline Genée, whose stay is all too short, dances divinely as Mlle. St. Cyr.

It would be difficult to over-praise the early summer beauty of Mr. Joseph Harker's school-garden in the first act, or the magnificence of his salon at General des Ifs' in the second. Mr. Walter Hann has done marvellously good brush-work, too, in his Interior of Michu's Shop. Mr. Barter Johns conducts admirably; and Mr. J. A. E. Malone's stage-management is above reproach. There is still a long career in front of The Little Michus, and bigger crowds than ever have been flocking to Daly's during the week.

"THE KNIGHT OF THE BATH."

A Farce, in Three Acts, by Arthur Applin, Produced at Terry's Theatre, at a Matinée, on Tuesday, May 1.

Montague Whyte-Smythe ..... MR. LENNOX PAWLE
Dorothy Whyte-Smythe ..... MISS EILY MALYON
Charles Evered ..... MR. MALCOLM CHERRY
Mary Evered ..... MISS GRACE ARMYTAGE NOBLE
Colonel Jesson Evered ..... MR. D. J. WILLIAMS
Mrs. Jesson Evered ..... MISS MAUD HENDERSON
Robert ..... MR. ALLAN WADE

Mr. Arthur Applin's farce is preposterously improbable; but, to any audience which can make up its mind to swallow his premises for the sake of his conclusions, it may prove riotously amusing. Two couples, the Whyte-Smythes and the Evereds, are living in different flats in a residential hotel. Montague Whyte-Smythe, an absurd and almost idiotic creature, strays by mistake into the Evered flat, talks with Mrs. Evered through a bathroom door without perceiving the voice not to be his wife's, and goes off to take a nap in what he supposes to be his bedroom. Why he does not discover his error from details of furniture, &c., is not explained. Reappearing, wrapped in a bath-towel, he is met by Mrs. Whyte-Smythe, whom he believes to have come from the bathroom, whence Mrs. Evered presently emerges in evening dress. Mrs. Whyte-Smythe scolds jealously, and Mr. Evered, returning home, seizes the "Knight of the Bath," and attempts to strangle him. The next act takes place in the Whyte-Smythe flat, where Mr. Evered, who has quarrelled with his spouse, persuades Mrs. Whyte-Smythe to pretend pro. tem. to be his wife, as he is expecting a visit from his father and mother, and wishes to keep up appearances. The elderly pair arrive, and the deception is maintained, in spite of various difficulties, the Whyte-Smythe baby—the Evereds have only been married for a month—being carried across wrapped up in brown paper, and described as a china vase. Whyte-Smythe, when he looks in at his own flat, is persuaded that he is mad, and treated as the husband of Mrs. Evered, who poses as Mrs. Whyte-Smythe. Eventually, the bewildered Whyte-Smythe, wandering about at night with a candle, is grappled with by old Evered, who has lain down to sleep on a sofa, and, after more violent altercations, matters are at last cleared up. The piece was remarkably well played, Mr. Lennox Pawle being extremely comical as Montague Whyte-Smythe, Miss Eily Malyon's Dorothy being full of piquancy, point, and activity, and Mr. Malcolm Cherry being fervently brisk and acutely energetic as Charles Evered. Miss Grace Armytage Noble was refined, dainty, and humorous as Mary Evered; and Mr. D. J. Williams enacted Colonel Jesson Evered with a self-important geniality that was very effective, Miss Maud Henderson doing well as Miss Jesson Evered, and Mr. Allan Wade being efficient as Robert. The piece had a cordial reception from the audience which assembled at Mrs. St. Hill's tenth annual matinée of Our Dumb Friends' League, Mr. Welch lending Terry's Theatre, all the artists generously giving their services, Mr. Lennox Pawle painstakingly "producing" the farce, and Messrs. Lyons good-naturedly lending the furniture. Miss Edyth Olive spoke a prologue by Mr. Applin, in which a dying 'bus-horse described his sufferings from spur and bearing-rein; Miss Marta Cunningham sang two songs quite prettily; Mrs. Cowper-Coles's pupils danced an Irish jig with spirit; and the New Zealand Twins, two young ladies exactly alike, tinted in chocolate-colour, and wearing the simple Maori costume, sang and danced with a frank and buoyant exuberance, and well-deserved the warm approval which they obtained. Mrs. St. Hill, in an interval, spoke a few well-chosen words in gratitude to all who had given assistance.

HAZLITT AND LAMB ON LEAR.

Two great critics, William Hazlitt and Charles Lamb, have given their opinions of King Lear, one of the greatest and the least acted of any of Shakespeare's plays. Hazlitt says:—

"We wish that we could pass this play over, and say nothing about it. All that we can say must fall far short of the subject; or even of what we ourselves conceive of it. To attempt to give a description of the play itself or of its effect upon the mind, is mere impertinence: yet we must say something. It is then the best of all Shakespeare's plays, for it is the one in which he was most in earnest. He was here fairly caught in the web of his own imagination. The passion which he has taken as his subject is that which strikes its root deepest into the human heart; of which the bond is the hardest to be unloosed; and the cancelling and tearing to pieces of which gives the greatest revulsion to the frame. This depth of nature, this force of passion, this tug and war of the elements of our being, this firm faith in filial piety, and the giddy anarchy and whirling tumult of the thoughts at finding this prop failing it, the contrast between the fixed, immovable basis of natural affection, and the rapid, irregular starts of imagination, suddenly wrenched from all its accustomed holds and resting-places in the soul, this is what Shakespeare has given, and what nobody else but he could give. So we believe. The mind of Lear, staggering between the weight of attachment and the hurried movements of passion, is like a tall ship driven about by the winds, buffeted by the furious waves, but that still rides above the storm, having its anchor fixed in the bottom of the sea; or it is like the sharp rock circled by the eddying whirlpool that foams and beats against it, or like the solid promontory pushed from its basis by the force of an earthquake.

"It has been said, and we think justly, that the third act of Othello and the three first acts of Lear are Shakespeare's great masterpieces in the logic of passion: that they contain the highest examples, not only of the force of individual passion, but of its dramatic vicissitudes and striking effects arising from the different circumstances and characters of the persons speaking. We see the ebb and flow of the feeling, its pauses and feverish starts, its impatience of opposition, its accumulating force when it has time to recollect itself, the manner in which it avails itself of every passing word or gesture, its haste to repel insinuation, the alternate contraction and dilatation of the soul, and all 'the dazzling fence of controversy' in this mortal combat with poisoned weapons, aimed at the heart, where each wound is fatal. We have seen in Othello how the unsuspecting frankness and impetuous passions of the Moor are played upon and exasperated by the artful dexterity of Iago. In Lear, that which aggravates the sense of sympathy in the reader, and of uncontrollable anguish in the swollen heart of Lear, is the petrifying indifference, the cold, calculating, obdurate selfishness of his daughters. His keen passions seem whetted on their stony hearts. The contrast would be too painful, the shock too great, but for the intervention of the Fool, whose well-timed levity comes in to break the continuity of feeling when it can no longer be borne, and to bring into play again the fibres of the heart just as they are growing rigid from over-strained excitement."

Charles Lamb wrote in the Reflector:—"The Lear of Shakespeare cannot be acted. The contemptible machinery with which they mimic the storm which he goes out in, is not more inadequate to represent the horrors of the real elements than any actor can be to represent Lear. The greatness of Lear is not in corporal dimension, but in intellectual; the explosions of his passions are terrible as a volcano: they are storms turning up and disclosing to the bottom that rich sea, his mind, with all its vast riches. It is his mind which is laid bare. This case of flesh and blood seems too insignificant to be thought on; even as he himself neglects it. On the stage we see nothing but corporal infirmities and weakness, the impotence of rage; while we read it, we see not Lear, but we are Lear; we are in his mind; we are sustained by a grandeur which baffles the malice of daughters and storms; in the aberrations of his reason, we discover a mighty irregular power of reasoning, immethodised from the ordinary purposes of life, but exerting its powers, as the wind blows where it listeth, at will on the corruptions and abuses of mankind. What have looks or tones to do with that sublime identification of his age with that of the heavens themselves, when in his reproaches to them for conniving at the injustice of his children, he reminds them that 'they themselves are old!' What gesture shall we appropriate to this? What has the voice or the eye to do with such things? But the play is beyond all art, as the tamperings with it show. It is too hard and stony; it must have love-scenes, and a happy ending. It is not enough that Cordelia is a daughter; she must shine as a lover, too. Tate has put his hook in the nostrils of this Leviathan, for Garrick and his followers, the showmen of the scene, to draw it about more easily. A happy ending!—as if the living martyrdom that Lear had gone through, the flaying of his feelings alive, did not make a fair dismissal from the stage of life the only decorous thing for him. If he is to live and be happy after, if he could sustain this world's burden after, why all this pudder and preparation—why torment us with all this unnecessary sympathy? As if the childish pleasure of getting his gilt robes and sceptre again could tempt him to act over again his misused station—as if at his years and with his experience anything was left but to die."

SOME actors appear to be "cut out" for playing stage villains—Mr. Abingdon at once occurs to the mind, and, in old days, Mr. E. S. Willard—and it is usually found that they are good all-round men, capable and experienced, who happen to possess the appearance, voice, and manner the melodramatic villain demands. Mr. Alfred Harding is a case in point, this being the style of character for which he is usually cast, although he started his career, many years ago, at old Astley's Theatre by playing juvenile lead, and the list of parts includes Mercutio, Cassio, Von Haugh (in Old Heidelberg), Sergeant Keller (in Arizona), Bill Sykes—a change from the villains of the diamond-cut-diamond order—and David (in Charlotte Corday). Living at Wimbledon, Mr. Harding finds his chief recreation in gardening, and naturally prefers London or suburban engagements to touring. His wandering in former days has extended as far as India, when he supported Mrs. Brown Potter in repertoire, and more recently he went to South Africa under the Sass Nelson management. Mrs. Alfred Harding is also upon the stage, her professional name being Miss Bertha Adams.

To pick a few of Mr. Harding's adventures at random, this is what occurred on a certain occasion when his enthusiasm for swimming induced him to take a plunge into the Buffalo River at East London, South Africa. He was accompanied by a friend who, being of a less venturesome nature, preferred to remain in a rowing-boat safely moored to some steps at the edge of the water. Mr. Harding swam well out into the river, not thinking of the swiftness of the current, but very soon discovered that he could not return to the bank. He shouted to his friend, who either did not hear or did not realise his need for assistance, and after a few minutes the unfortunate actor was swept down the river. He no longer wasted his strength in shouting, and it was well for his companion's peace of mind that he could not hear his thoughts. Fortunately, an angler some distance away saw what was happening, and succeeded in checking Mr. Harding's mad career, and obligingly towed him back to the starting point.

ANOTHER of Mr. Harding's experiences—in India this time—promised to be even more annoying. He and his wife, leaving Rangoon at night, hired a boatman to take them to their ship. It was dark and stormy, and they were very thankful when their oarsman pulled up to the dark side of a vessel, although it was a little surprising to find only a rope ladder for the passengers to mount to the deck of a British India steamer. Mrs. Harding ascended first, and found herself surrounded by amazed Chinamen in the most unconventional and "impossible" costumes. It is needless to say that she made a hurried exit by means of the rope ladder, and the Indian boatman, far from apologising for having attempted to put them aboard a Chinese junk, calmly explained that he thought one ship would do as well as another.

AN anecdote concerning Elliston, which appears in the admirable little brochure given last week by Mr. Arthur Carlton as a souvenir of his production of The Merchant of Venice, at the Theatre Royal, Worcester, is well worthy of reproduction. The comedian had announced for his benefit "A grand display of fireworks on the stage of Worcester Theatre," a thing, of course, totally impracticable. This Elliston well knew, but he adroitly worked upon the fears of the landlord by hints of the great danger his building would be exposed to if such an exhibition took place, and, as he anticipated, the landlord forbade it, but the announcements were not altered, and the credulous public swallowed the bait and flocked to the theatre in crowds. Without any reference being made to the attraction of the night, the other items of the bill were proceeded with, but soon there arose a murmur which swelled into an uproar for the fireworks. Then Elliston came forward with a stately air. He had made most elaborate preparations for a grand pyrotechnic display, he said, but at the last moment he thought of the great danger, and the number of young tender girls, of respectable matrons, assembled to do him honour, and of the proprietor, one of the worthiest of men, whose property might be thus endangered. "There he is," he added, pointing to the stage box, where he had placed his scapegoat, a very shy, nervous man, who, terrified by the attention he had created, took to flight, "and I call upon him to state himself that he forbade the display." The audience were so glad of their escape that they applauded him heartily.

A GOOD story is also told of T. C. King, the tragedian who became the lessee in 1878. One evening he was playing Black-Eyed Susan, and during the performance had to fire a gun. On pulling the trigger, however, there was no report, and it was found that the gun had not been loaded, so the situation was spoilt. At the end of the scene he was naturally very angry with those whose duty it was to see the gun properly loaded. The next evening the "property" man made a point of being in the theatre very early, and carefully loaded the gun, so that the omission of the previous performance should not again occur. A little while after the stage-manager himself took care to put in an extra good charge of powder. By and by the tragedian himself came to the theatre, and in order that the incident of the preceding evening should not be repeated, put in yet another charge. When the situation of the play demanded it, our worthy lessee put the gun to his shoulder and pulled the trigger. There was a loud explosion, and the good man was sent spinning half across the stage. A gentleman who was standing in the wings within a few feet of the action, still has a vivid recollection of the concussion.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

MR. ALFRED BUTT returned to England, home, and beauty on Wednesday, and was at the Palace Theatre soon after his arrival in London on that evening. He has been absent "on the other side" some five weeks, and speaks in glowing terms of the kindness and hospitality shown him on all hands. He has secured some most attractive acts for the house he so ably directs in Shaftesbury-avenue. He made the return voyage across the Atlantic in that magnificent liner the Oceanic.

MR. T. P. O'CONNOR has determined upon immediate action in the House of Commons in the interests of musical composers and publishers. No intention being evident on the part of the Government to bring in a measure this Session, Mr. O'Connor as having a Bill drafted, and will introduce it in a few days. Every effort will be made to obtain facilities for its passage through the House, and it is hoped thereby that the Bill, which, it is expected, will have the support of influential members of all sections of Parliament, may become law within the limits of the present year.

MR. GEORGE SCOTT is very enthusiastic over the wonderful Urbanora pictures of the Hackenschmidt-Madrali match at Olympia last Saturday, which are being exhibited nightly at the Alhambra. Finer films could not be seen. They put beyond dispute all points of the struggle, from the entry of the wrestlers and their seconds to the final overthrow of the Turk and the invasion of the arena by the excited crowd. They are, in fact, a veritable tour de force of cinematography, and it is the first time that animated pictures taken by artificial light have proved an unequivocal success.

A GREAT many people seem to be under the impression that in consequence of the readjustment of the Coliseum's finances that palace of pleasure must of necessity be closing its doors. Nothing could be further from the actual truth. The Revue being played at the Coliseum is undoubtedly the greatest success in London at the present moment, and that the public appreciate the fact is evident by the crowded houses seen there daily at the 3, 6, and 9 p.m performances. It would be a thousand pities if in the readjustment of its affairs and the publicity given thereto, the Revue should suffer by an impression getting abroad that at any moment its triumphant career should be nipped in the bud. At the worst, all that will happen is that the debenture holders will carry on the business until a new company is floated to buy out the old concern.

THE trustees for the debenture holders took over the management of the Coliseum on Saturday. All contracts with the artists and the staff were declared at an end. New ones were made on Monday with those whom the new controllers desired to retain. Mr. John Donald has been reappointed general-manager, and Mr. Will Bishop now becomes stage-manager. The Revue produced by Mr. Stoll is now played three times a day instead of twice as formerly, consequently Mr. Charles Warner and Mme. Alice Esty, who were in the six o'clock bill, are not appearing.

THE secretary of the London Coliseum, Ltd., has convened an extraordinary general meeting, to be held at Cardiff on Thursday next, for the purpose of considering the following resolution:—"That it has been proved to the satisfaction of this meeting that the company cannot, by reason of its liabilities, continue its business, and that it is advisable to wind up same, and accordingly that the company be wound up voluntarily."

THE Modern Milo, the beautiful girl with dreamy blue eyes and a perfect figure, whose chaste and classic poses at the London Pavilion are crowding that house to the doors nightly, has recently come from Australia, where her success at the Tivoli Theatre, Sydney, was unprecedented. She has wonderful grace and charm, and no such lovely realisation of the marble creations of Milo, Phidias, and Praxiteles have ever been seen on the stage. During the preparations for the various pictures the audience is interested and delighted with the political caricatures of Cruikshank, a lightning impressionist of remarkable ability.

MISS DAISY GORDON, the charming young actress, produced her new comedy sketch, entitled A Practical Joke, on Thursday last at Barnard's, Greenwich, with great success. Miss Gordon was assisted by Mr. Syd Morton, Mr. Henry Hodgson, Miss May Cornish, and Miss Marjorie Rankin, the latter being very funny as the dude. The sketch was very well dressed, and under the capable management of Mr. Bevan Lorimer.

MESSRS FRANCIS, DAY, AND HUNTER have just placed on the market one of the most important novelties ever conceived, the invention of Valentine Watson and a gentleman named Christmas. It is called "The Perfect Vamping Chart," and by an arrangement, the ingenuity of which is only equalled by its extreme simplicity, anyone unacquainted with music can play pianoforte accompaniments at sight in any key. The novelty, which sells at sixpence, and is unlike anything which has gone before, is the talk of all who have examined and tested it.

KING ALFONSO and Princess Ena, with Princes Leopold and Maurice of Battenberg, and attended by Lord William Cecil and Miss Minnie Cochrane, went to the Hippodrome on Thursday afternoon, the party occupying two boxes. "Dronza," the magic talking head, pleased the King immensely, and when the figure sang "Rule Britannia," the King of Spain moved his hands up and down, beating time, and laughing at the queer voice of the mysterious mechanism. When the royal lovers left the Hippodrome and entered their carriage a dense crowd awaited them, and ringing cheers went up.

THE exterior of the Palace Theatre has reassumed the spick-and-span appearance it bore on the occasion of its first opening, the walls having been cleaned and renovated by the Steam Brush Co.

MR. ERNEST CH. GITTINS' Regal Operatic Quartette will open at the Hippodrome, Hounslow, on Monday, May 14, and will be seen at the Chelsea Palace the following week. The "Prison Scene" from Maritana will be the first selection from their répertoire.

MISS JENNIE BELMORE underwent a successful operation on Tuesday, and her friends will be pleased to hear that she is progressing so favourably that she will shortly resume business.

THE usual monthly meeting of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held on Wednesday next, at the York Hotel, York-road.

LAZERN THE MYSTIC, a magician recently brought to this country by Fred W. Millis, the well-known ventriloquist, made a very successful début at the Camberwell Palace on Wednesday. His entertainment is bright, amusing, and decidedly novel, and the audience, to mark their appreciation of his efforts, honoured him with a double recall.

MR. G. H. ELLIOTT, the chocolate-coloured coon, was personally congratulated by Mr. Lyndon Greenwood, manager of the Islington Empire, on behalf of Mr. Walter Gibbons, on his great success at that house during Easter week in his new scena Caroo, by Lawrance and Gifford. He had to sing three songs in each house.

MR. GEORGE HARRIS has been appointed acting-manager of the Palace Theatre of Varieties, Belfast.

MR. WILL COLLINS, late manager of the Ardwick Empire, took up his duties on Monday as district manager of the Moss-Stoll Empires in London.

THE s.s. Lugano was discovered to be on fire six miles off Hastings on Thursday, the 26th ult. Mr. Albert Mathams, the manager of the local Hippodrome, at once chartered a motor-launch, and was first out, showing successfully the pictures on the Biograph the same evening.

THE Birmingham Empire gave a grand charity matinée in aid of the local hospitals on Wednesday, when the manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham, was supported in his efforts by companies drawn from the various other establishments in the town, also Wolverhampton and Walsall, in addition to that of the Empire. A large attendance and much enthusiasm prevailed, and some £60 will be handed over as the result.

A SITE has been acquired by Sites, Limited, of 213, Piccadilly, in High-street, West Bromwich, and the plans have already passed the Council, for the erection of an up-to-date hippodrome, which will be one of the largest in the provinces. The hall will be worked on the two performances nightly system. Mr. T. M. Sylvester, of Coventry, and other hippodromes, has been appointed manager. The opening has been fixed for August Bank Holiday.

THE Dover Theatres Company, Ltd., announces that the Theatre Royal will be closed in September, and that after the necessary alterations for its conversion into a Hippodrome it will be re-opened on the two-houses-a-night system.

MR. G. H. CHIRGWIN informs us that he has decided to give a matinée during the week of July 30 in aid of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund and the Music Hall Home. Mr. Chirgwin, who is inaugurating his first season at the Happy Valley, Southend-on-Sea, hopes that his brother and sister artists will rally round him, and make it a big affair. Chirgwin himself will appear at the matinée.

MR. DAN THOMAS, who was appearing at the Accrington Hippodrome last week, recently visited the Accrington Police Station, lamenting the loss of his purse, which had in it two £5 notes, a diamond ring, and a gold stud. To his intense delight and surprise, after he had minutely described the missing valuables, the officer in charge was able to restore them to him. They had been picked up on the Sunday night in Blackburn-road, Accrington, by a boy who, with two companions, at once repaired to the police station and handed over their "find."

A PRETTY incident recently took place at Bidford-on-Avon, at the christening and launching of the "Gaiety" pleasure-boat, so named after the Gaiety Theatre of Varieties, Birmingham. Mrs. Albert Bushell performed the ceremony with her habitual grace and amiability to a crowd of admiring friends and not a few yokels, who seemed to take it as a personal honour. Bidford is becoming quite the place for a day's run out with professionals near Birmingham, and Host Butler, at the White Lion Hotel, is becoming famous for his viands and entertainment.

THE many friends of Mr. C. J. Cawood will learn with much regret that he will sever his long connection with the Empire Palace Theatre, Edinburgh, this week. Mr. Cawood, although quite a young man, has had a long experience of management—nearly nineteen years—the greater part of which has been spent in responsible positions at the Empire. Of modest, unassuming manner, he has earned a name for hard work and integrity of purpose. A testimonial is being organised as a mark of appreciation by several friends. The secretary, Mr. J. Gordon Dickson, 16, Coniston-terrace, Edinburgh, will be glad to receive and acknowledge subscriptions.

THE New Palace of Varieties, Lydd (Kent), was opened on Monday to a crowded house, and seems likely to prove a great success. The Three Cheers top the bill with their Dick Whittington scena, introducing a cleverly trained cat. Marie Rosebery is a great favourite, and her song, "Sons of the Silver Fern," appeals to all classes. The Mays make a hit with The Maniac Child; Maud Ethelda is a charming serio and dancer; Charles Kay is a popular comedian, his topical song, "The Beautiful Tale of Love," gathering fresh laurels at every verse; and Sybil Franklin and Co. in A Bachelor's Dream, and Harry Wallace, coon singer, complete the bill.

PROFESSOR WINGARD, after his performance at Osborne on Friday, the 27th ult., had the honour of being personally complimented by his Majesty the King of Spain, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg, and others of the Royal Family. The celebrated conjuror caused great fun by apparently breaking up King Alfonso's watch, and afterwards restoring it and returning it whole, greatly to His Majesty's delight. The professor has received a splendid testimonial saying how pleased His Majesty and their Royal Highnesses were with his clever entertainment.

THE eleventh ordinary general meeting of the Belfast Empire was held at 36, College-green, Dublin, on the 27th ult. Mr. Adam S. Findlater, J.P., chairman and managing director, presided. The other directors present were—Messrs. David Dalton, William Findlater, and Alfred Edwards. The report of the directors showed that after the payment of all working expenses, bank interest, income tax, and debenture interest, the loss sustained during the year amounted to £402 6s. 4d. From that amount there was deducted the sum of £81 0s. 5d., the amount brought forward from the previous account, so that there was a debit of £321 5s. 11d. carried forward. On the motion of the chairman, the report was adopted. Mr. David Dalton, the retiring director, and the auditors, Messrs. Stokes Bros. and Pim, were re-elected.

DURING the performance at Portsmouth on Monday night of the Pigmies who were at the Hippodrome last year, one of the women ran amok, and sprang off the stage among the audience. She was apparently annoyed by a boy in the second row who was grinning at her, and before she could be stopped she stabbed him in the face with her spear. The manager of the hall quickly intervened, and dragged her away before she could do any further damage.

A BENEFIT matinée is being arranged to take place at the Leicester Palace on Thursday, May 17th, by kind permission of Mr. Oswald Stoll, in aid of the widow and child of the late Leonard Vidal, who was manager there for upwards of two years. A number of well-known artists, including George Robey, Wilkie Bard, Happy Fanny Fields, Hetty King, and Ray Wallace, have kindly offered their services, and a bumper house is confidently expected. Mr. Vidal's family have been left in very straitened circumstances, and an appeal is being made for subscriptions, which may be sent to Mr. Arthur Barlow, solicitor, 1, High Pavement, Nottingham. No doubt many artists, with recollections of past kindnesses received at the hands of the deceased gentleman, will find it a pleasure to subscribe, and the smallest sums will be thankfully received and acknowledged.

MR. JOSEPH WILSON, who has been one of the numerous victims to influenza, has quite recovered, and returned to his duties at the Tivoli on Thursday.

CONGRATULATIONS to Mr. Ernest Rees, who, we are given to understand, has just become the owner of an estate in Wales, left to him by a recently deceased aunt. This sudden access of fortune will not prevent the popular comedian continuing his stage career, which has been very successful.

AT the time of going to press we learn that there is a slight improvement in Mr. Edward Swanborough's condition. The anniversary of the Chelsea Palace is to be celebrated on Friday next.

MR. JESSE SPARROW, the manager of the Camberwell Palace, who, as we announced last week, will have a complimentary there on the 22nd, will be succeeded in the management by Mr. P. A. Lennon, who recently held a similar position at the Richmond Theatre.

THE London Pavilion Cricket Club played their opening match of the season at Tufnell Park on Tuesday, the front of the house beating the orchestra quite easily. The respective scores were 205 and 77. The eleven play a staff team from the Apollo on the same ground on Tuesday next.

THE versatility of Rachel Lowe is again demonstrated by the clever turn she is now giving at the Oxford. Attired in a dainty Parisian gown, she is singing praises of "The Gay Bohemian Knights," a song written to the music of a popular instrumental number now being played nightly by the orchestras of every leading hotel and restaurant in London and Paris. Miss Lowe also sings of the adventures of "Stella," who "only was in Paris for a year."

"CONN THE SHAUGHRAUN" is the subject of a capital Irish song scena which Mr. Michael Nolan has introduced this week at the London, Shoreditch. It is by J. P. Harrington and the late George Le Brunn, and is really one of their best endeavours. Mr. Nolan has never been better suited with a character, and he makes of Boucicault's hero a regular broth of a bhoy—racy of the soil. His brogue, too, is quite "iligant." Conn, strange to say, was a favourite character with the late Jenny Hill, who appeared in the character at Easter, 1890, at the South London, at a special matinée, the play being considerably condensed for the purpose.

THE actor playing the bully in The Fighting Parson at Olympia, Liverpool, on Monday, was unable to rise after the first punch administered by the "Parson." Some twenty seconds elapsed before Mr. Gray was extricated from the predicament by Mr. Bailey—not Bill of that ilk—who, playing one of the Hooligans, suddenly approached him, saying, "'Ere! d'y'ear! You've shoved my pal out; 'ave a pop at me," and, without more ado, knocked the Parson clean off his feet. Amidst a scene of wild excitement a furious set-to resulted, unfortunately, with black eyes for the obliging Bailey and a damaged hand for the "Parson," who congratulated the actor on his spontaneous saving of an awkward situation.

MR. GEORGE LASHWOOD'S song concerning Paris is one of the specially good bits in the Coliseum Revue. He has always owed much of his success to his talent for keeping up to date. This is not difficult for half-a-dozen seasons; but when it comes to a professional career of twenty years, it means that a man must alter his tricks of speech and his style of clothes many times if he means to represent—as George Lashwood certainly does—the ordinary young man of the minute He is a Birmingham man, and toured in his early days with Little Tich and Dan Leno, thinking himself very lucky if he could earn thirty shillings a week by singing almost as many songs a night. Like Little Tich, too, he used to star at the little Marylebone Music Hall (now extinct) in the eighties. Mr. Lashwood is considering an offer he has received to pay a professional visit to America. There is every probability, also, that he will appear as Dandini at the Coliseum next Christmas. He is a keen golfer, and a firm believer in the possibilities for artistic work on the variety stage.

IN our paragraph last week referring to the Strolling Singers' musical scena My Highland Laddie, we omitted the name of Mr. Frank Reynolds, who sang the opening of "Eileen Alannah."

M. WITMARK AND SONS are, as usual, well to the front with songs to please the people. The rage of New York at the present time is a peculiar song, entitled "I've got to dance till the band gets through." Miss Maud Raymond has made an enormous success with this song in New York, receiving eight encores for it nightly.

MISS LOTTIE ALBERT is lying at her residence in Ridgmont-gardens seriously indisposed, but every hope is entertained of her speedy recovery.

CHARLES COLLETTE, who a few years ago made a great success as Wilkins Micawber in Little Em'ly in London and the provinces, has been specially engaged by Mr. Charles Cartwright to play the same part in his dramatised version of David Copperfield, which he will produce on Monday at the Court Theatre, Liverpool. Collette returns to the London Pavilion June 4.

MR. VICTOR STEVENS and his Premier Pierrots, so successful at Scarborough last year, have been secured for the Jersey season, and will appear, by permission of Sir W. H. V. Vernon, in the Springfield Grounds and Pavilion. The Premier Pierrots are a very strong attraction, and should prove successful.

MISS MADGE TEMPLE is meeting with great success at the Hippodrome, Manchester, where she is topping the bill with the "Witmarkian" song "Nola."

MISS AMBER AUSTA has a very catchy, taking song in "Trouble." The quaintness of the idea and the melody of this number, together with its charming rendition by the clever artist, makes it a feature of the Tivoli programme.

A GRAND matinée was held at the Palace Theatre, Belfast, on Saturday last, under the patronage of the Lord Mayor, Sir Daniel Dixon, J.P., M.P. The proceeds were in aid of local charities and the Actors' and Music Hall Benevolent Funds. There was a crowded auditorium, and the programme, which was compiled by Mr. Fred W. Warden, managing-director of Theatre Royal and Palace, Belfast, reflected much credit on that gentleman. The principal artists from the pantomime Dick Whittington assisted, comprising Neil Kenyon (who was, as usual, inimitable), Miss Harriet Fawn, Miss W. Preece, Sisters Vincent, and Messrs. O'Malley and Brown. By kind permission of Mr. Adam Findlater and Mr. J. A. Walker, manager, the following artists came over from the Empire Theatre:—Mr. Herbert Shelley, Mr. James Stewart, Mr. Bert Byrne, and Miss Gracie Graham. Mr. Harry Downs, with characteristic courtesy, permitted the following from the New Alhambra to appear:—Mr. Lawrence Barclay, Captain Devereux and his well-trained dogs, and Miss Mary Glen. All the Palace artists assisted. Mr. Fred W. Warden, chairman and hon. treasurer of the Belfast Theatrical Charity Fund, in a short speech, expressed his pleasure at seeing such a large audience, and returned thanks to all who had so kindly assisted. Mr. David Motherwell (hon. sec.) and the members of the committee also deserve a word of praise for their efforts.

AMONG the numerous telegrams and letters containing good wishes received by Mr. Oswald Stoll on Wednesday morning was one from the principal officials of the Coliseum in the following terms:—"We are deputed by your staff to express good wishes for a satisfactory arrangement at the meeting, and at the same time to testify our admiration of your administrative abilities in the conduct of affairs, and to the esteem in which you are held by all in the employ of the company.—(Signed) John Donald, Will Bishop, Will A. Bennet, A. Whitehead, Maurice Jacobi, J. Ballard, H. Mawbey, A. Norris, Arthur Shirley, Walter Slaughter."

AMONGST the artists who left England for America last Saturday was Mlle. L. Raffin, who, with her troupe of performing monkeys, is due at Coney Island for a long summer engagement.

THE Shapiro Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd., has just published another song sung by Miss Victoria Monks, entitled "Sweet Saturday Night." Miss Monks has the sole and exclusive music-hall singing rights of this and her success, "Moving Day."

MISS GWENNIE HASTO is making a big hit on the Stoll tour with "Wait till the sun shines, Nellie." Al-fresco artistes should write to the Shapiro Von Tilzer Music Co. for this song and other successes published by that enterprising firm.

MISS MILLICENT MARSDEN has been compelled through serious indisposition to resign her rôle of Lola in Cavalleria Rusticana at the Coliseum and wishes to thank her many friends for their kind inquiries, and to say that she is gradually gaining strength, and hopes to be soon quite convalescent.

MISS ALEXANDRA DAGMAR opened on Monday at the Olympia, Liverpool, for a twelve weeks' tour of the provinces, and will return to London on August Bank Holiday.

MR. HARRY LAUDER, the popular Scotch comedian, who has been staying at the Crown Hotel, Dunoon, has been on the sick list for the last month. He is now completely convalescent, and will make his reappearance at the Tivoli on Monday.

DR. WALFORD BODIE, the well-known exponent of bloodless surgery and demonstrator of electricity, since he left London has had one continual run of excellent business. Last week he had a record week at the Palace, Blackburn, despite it being the week after the holidays. It was also his seventh visit to the town, and he performed to over £529, his takings on the Saturday night alone amounting to over £163. During the week over 27,000 people paid for admission.

LIEUT. ALBINI has had the following letter from his old friend and partner, Dr. Harley, who has been travelling through the Bush in Australia and also in India:—"Calcutta, April 12, 1906. Dear Albini,—I was very much pleased, in taking up The Era of March 3, to see that you advertised. I had lost sight of you, and heard you had gone to America and obtained a second-hand coffin. Whenever I bought The Era I missed your advertisement, so I gave credence to the report. Well, I am glad you are alive. Let me have your permanent address. I could do with some good things. Write me a long letter." Dr. Harley, who has always been a great traveller, made his last appearance in London at the Oxford and Crystal Palace in conjunction with Lieut. Albini in an act similar to the one now run by Horace Goldin. Its success lasted five months at the two places.

MISS ALICE HOLLANDER'S artistic and cultured renderings of "My Irish Lily," by Swaffer and Darewski, and Mascheroni's "Ave Maria," have been a source of unadulterated delight to Tivoli audiences nightly, and the artist's efforts have been highly enhanced by Reginald Allan's orchestration and the musicianly handling of his fine band by Mr. De Reeder.

MR. EDGAR BATEMAN on Saturday last, on his lonely roost on Southend Pier, with Ernest Shand's fishing rod for company, completed his third comic song for Mr. Tom Leo. Maurice Scott has again supplied the melody, and the song, which is of a domestic nature, is entitled "Old Mrs. Flack did look black." The young comedian's "Too lazy to live" chorus has shaken the roof of the Palace, Tottenham, nightly during the current week.

AT the annual meeting of the members of the Herne Bay Habitation of the Primrose League, held on Thursday evening, the 19th ult., Mrs. Adney Payne was unanimously elected Dame President.

MR. HERBERT LENTON, the famous Risley acrobat, and formerly head of the Lenton Troupe—very popular in the eighties—has been living a retired life for some time in Newark, but has now determined to take up the acrobatic business again, and will make another start at the Hospital matinée at the Nottingham Empire during this month. Mr. Lenton, who left the variety stage in 1895, entered the acrobatic profession when twelve years of age, and in 1864 went out to South America. He did a great deal of globe-trotting before he made his first professional appearance in England in 1870, when he performed at the New Theatre Royal, Nottingham, the town of his birth. He ran some expensive companies in his time, and when he toured through Spain and Portugal in 1879 he had with him George Chirgwin, the famous "White-eyed Kaffir," the Brothers Dare, Fatma, the Brothers Bellonini (including Walter, the celebrated juggler), and the Girouette Family.

THE 461st meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held at the offices in Wellington-street on Tuesday, when there were present Messrs. Joe O'Gorman (in the chair), Harry Blake, Arthur Carlton, Charles Coborn, Fred Herbert, Charles Pastor, Jeff Vendome, Albert Voyce, Douglas White (hon. treasurer), and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed. A letter was read on behalf of a member who had been censured for being abusive to an agent of the Association, who declined to place his name on the list on a Saturday. It was explained that the agent had allowed others to go on the list on the day referred to, but refused to extend the privilege to the member in question, who hinted that the reason was because he did not patronise the agent's house.

THE secretary reported that the membership had increased during the week by twenty-four, and by his financial statement it appeared that the receipts amounted to £31 8s. and the expenditure to £20 6s. 2d. Mr. Douglas White, the honorary treasurer, presented his monthly and six-monthly statements, the latter showing that the balance in favour of the Association was £1085 11s. 9d.

MR. CHARLES COBORN, in accordance with his notice of a week previous, moved that the minute referring to the censure of a member be expunged. The committee, he said, were placed in a false position by not hearing both sides before passing condemnation. The proceeding had a tendency to belittle the executive, and was one that could not be too strongly deprecated. Mr. Albert Voyce moved the rejection of the resolution on the ground that the member was censured for omitting to place his name on the list in time. The practice was far too prevalent among members, and prompt action should be taken to check it. The motion was lost.

IT seems a pity that the histrionic talent which made Mr. Herbert Darnley one of our foremost comedians, not only in the music halls, but in such important parts as Sir Ormsby in The School Girl and Private Jupp in One of the Best, should be allowed to lay dormant; but such is the magnitude of his future managerial arrangements that to locate himself in any one production would be to make it impossible for him to attend to the other calls upon his time. Besides this, his vast experience as manager, producer, author, and artist will prove of the greatest value in the work he has mapped out for himself.

IN a few weeks Mr. Darnley will produce his new pantomimic sketch, The Skirmishers, to be quickly followed by the clever skit on the old-fashioned diorama, entitled The Panorama. In the summer he will superintend the reproduction of The 'Varsity Belle, following it in the autumn by the revival of the late Dan Leno's greatest triumph, Mr. Wix of Wickham; and, as a fitting climax to 1906 and a brilliant beginning to 1907, Mr. Darnley will stage in the halls a gigantic production, entitled Bailum and Barmey's, the Thickest Show on Earth.

THESE will be running concurrently with the present success, Moving In, so that Mr. Darnley will have his hands well filled. When asked his favourite occupation, Mr. Darnley answers, "Hard work," and when questioned as to his favourite pastime, replies "More work!"

MANY of our readers will no doubt remember the comedian and singer W. B. Fair, originator of "Tommy, make room for your uncle," late proprietor of the Winchester Music Hall and manager of the Royal Standard and Marylebone Music Halls. We learn that Mr. Fair has established a sawdust business, and having applied for a patent (and obtained provisional protection) for his process of manufacturing "sanitary" sawdust, and having put the same on the market with gratifying results in respect of orders and testimonials, a small private company has been formed under the name of the Sanitary Sawdust Syndicate, Ltd., to work and develop the same, with W. B. Fair as managing director. No prospectus or invitation to the public to subscribe for shares has, or will be, issued, but Mr. Fair will be pleased to forward copy of memorandum and articles of association, &c., to any of his old colleagues, friends, or acquaintances willing to take a financial interest in the syndicate by subscribing for one or more shares of £1 each. Address: W. B. Fair, Sanitary Sawdust Syndicate, Ltd., 5, President-place, Goswell-road, E.C.

MR. GUS ELEN, the well known coster comedian, living at Thurleigh-road, Balham, appeared to a summons on Monday, at the South-West London Police-court, for driving his motor-car at Putney, on April 15, at a speed exceeding twenty miles an hour. Mr. Elen pleaded ignorance of the speed (twenty-seven and three-quarter miles an hour) at which he was travelling at the time, attributing it to the fact that he was cleaning out the spent and dirty oil from the machinery. He said he had driven 15,000 miles in his motor, and it was not his habit to exceed the limit. He always took the greatest care, using his car not for racing, but for pleasure. Mr. de Grey fined him £2 and costs.

BLANCHE and Diacoff, after two years in India, returned to England last week, and opened at the Britannia Theatre on Monday. They are trick cyclists who have perfected the sensational act, introduced to London some years ago by Charlie Jones, of Australia, of riding at full speed at an angle of sixty-five degrees, having gradually reduced the size of their track until it only measures seventeen feet round the top. Miss Blanche is a daring little lady, who made her London début as a cyclist at the Pavilion, a few years ago, as one of the riders in the "Home-trainer" races. Her husband, Mr. Diacoff, has also been connected with the whirl of the wheel for a considerable time. Son of a successful trainer, his first experiences of bicycling were on the race track, first as an amateur and afterwards as a professional rider. Blanche and Diacoff travelled in India with Abell and Hackenback's Zoo. The Maharajah of Mysore was so pleased with their exciting performance that he presented them with three handsome new machines.

MANY Islingtonians have during the week journeyed to the Bedford, at Camden Town, to renew acquaintance with Little Thomas, the famous corner-man of the Mohawk-Moore and Burgess Minstrels, who has been fulfilling an engagement as a single turn, and meeting with his customary success. The voice of the comedian—whose sixty odd summers sit lightly on his shoulders—is as powerful as ever and his songs as droll as of yore.

AT the London meeting of the International Artists' Lodge, on Sunday, April 29, the President in the chair, a most important letter was read from Messrs. Cadle Bros., agents, containing the statement of the matter at issue between themselves and two members of the Lodge which was mentioned in last week's report. The letter was discussed at some length, and it was finally carried that, before submitting the matter to a meeting for arbitration, a letter should be written to the two members in question and to Messrs. Cadle Bros. requesting a formal statement from each that they would abide by the decision of this Arbitration committee.

A BROTHER related that he had a contract for two weeks from April 2 at the Pavilion, Glasgow and Greenock. He played Greenock, and then was informed that his Glasgow week was postponed to July 9. The artist pointed out to the manager that he could not accept such an agreement, as at that date he would be on mid-ocean. The manager then declared he had no contract with him at all. The contract was concluded before the hall passed into the hands of the present managers. The artist asked a lawyer's advice in Glasgow, as he knew that there was an agreement between the present and former managers as to the taking over of contracts. Bros. 1365 explained that the Lodge's solicitor had declared that an artist had no claim on the present manager, who did not actually sign contract, but had to sue the manager whose signature he held.

BRO. 1365 also drew attention to the fact that his remarks with reference to this very case were misunderstood and mis-stated in the report of April, wherein he is represented as having said: "It is now established that a manager taking over a house must take over the contracts from the former management." This was entirely a mistake. What he did say was that it is the person signing the contract who is responsible for the salary, and not the manager who takes over the house. Action must be laid against the former manager, and if there is an agreement between him and his successor to take over any or all bookings, then the predecessor can recover from his successor, but the artist has nothing to do with this.

A MEMBER submitted a contract with a Vienna manager and asked advice from the chairman, as he had been threatened with cancellation. The chairman stated that it contained no cancellation clause, but that there were many tricky paragraphs in it, which, if not carefully adhered to by the artist, might be utilised as a means of getting rid of him. He therefore advised the artist to have the contract carefully translated, and to mind all the minor matters contained in it, when he would be safe in going to fulfil the engagement.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE TIVOLI.

The crowded audiences that fill the favourite variety house in the Strand speak eloquently of the success of the policy of Mr. George Adney Payne and his co-directors, who are determined not only to secure the best possible talent, but to retain it. The current bill has quite a cosmopolitan aspect, as artists both from Australia and America add both to its gaiety and its sentiment. Miss Alice Hollander, who is a native of the new commonwealth, is associated with a daring experiment, nothing less than the singing of the "Ave Maria," the musical setting of the Latin prayer to the Virgin being that of Angelo Mascheroni. The solo was listened to with rapt attention on the night of our visit, and the charming vocalist, who sang very artistically and fervently, was several times recalled. The solo immediately precedes a comic entertainment presented by the Poluskis, entitled The Housebreakers, in which the humour consists for the most part of a parody of the methods of professional cracksmen. Mr. Will Poluski appears as a second edition of the Spider, and Mr. Sam Poluski parodies the Bill Sikes type of burglar. The humour is at present rather poor, but there are possibilities of working it up. Mr. Harry Randall introduces, with his customary success, his latest dame impersonation, Mrs. Tootles, the better half of a singularly uninspired flute player. He plays obbligati to her, though her enjoyment of them is spoilt by constant repetition. If Tootles stays longer at rehearsal than is at all necessary, one can easily understand it, when the "soul of music" no longer appeals to his much-tried partner. Mr. Randall brings out drolly all the amusing idiosyncrasies of the character, and though his voice is somewhat harsh, he possesses the virtue of distinctness. Miss Billie Barlow, who returns to the Tivoli after a lengthened absence, has an amusing song as a Red-Cross nurse, and evokes peals of laughter when she states that she is about to start the B.B.Y.M.R.—the "Billie Barlow Young Men's Rest." Naturally so charmingly vivacious and attractive a "soother" would be sure of an immense number of clients. Early in the evening Mr. Will Van Allen, who assumes the rags of a tramp, emits melodious sounds from all sorts of curious instruments. There is much genuine fun in his turn, as he has a fund of most amusing patter. The sentiment of a love-sick coon is cleverly and artistically realised by Mr. G. H. Elliott, who puts much feeling into his serenade; and as a direct contrast to his story of plantation affection Miss Rachel Lowe follows with a most successful number, entitled "Kettles to mend," with which she scored such a success during her recent brilliant pantomime engagement. Miss Lowe repeats that success with the Tivolians—a proof of the attractive nature of the number. Miss Daisy Dormer is a newcomer to the Tivoli, but that she will return again and again to its boards is a certainty; for her success on the night of our visit must have been exceedingly gratifying, and the young and attractive coon impersonator has every right to be proud of it. As her final item she gives "I'm going—going—gone!" and this is followed by a buck dance which is one of the best and most spirited displays of the kind that we have seen. The interests of mirth are well looked after by the prime minister thereof—Mr. George Robey; Mr. T. E. Dunville is in his best form as a museum attendant; and Mr. Harry Ford's comic logic and argumentative drollery are strong incitements to laughter. Conway and Leland keep the audience in the house while they exploit many whimsical conceits and fulfil their responsibilities as "the merry monopedes"; and American and Dutch comedy is cleverly exploited by King and Benson in a comedy musical act, and by Happy Fanny Fields, who has returned in complete possession of her powers to create hilarity. Other turns in the bill are contributed by Carrie Laurie and her juveniles, and Miss Amber Austa, comedienne, who puts much eccentricity into her song, "Trouble," and is responsible for a clever dance. Mr. Joseph Wilson has been suffering from influenza, but is fortunately much better. During his absence Mr. James Howell has controlled the front of the house with his usual tact and courtesy.

THE MIDDLESEX.

A unique speciality act is that of Mlle. Sylvesto. Attired in a neat white silk athletic costume, she performs various feats with the assistance of silver rings, placing them over her body in all manner of positions. In one posture she contrives to balance a small piece of lighted candle on her forehead while at the same time cleverly manipulating the hoops. She concludes her turn by rolling from one side of the stage to the other partially encased in a barrel. Tennyson and Wallis, dressed as policemen, relate a lot of amusing stories concerned with the life of a gentleman in blue, and a very comical couple they prove to be. Mr. Will Haines submits a capital character-vocalism turn; and the Lurins are a most entertaining comedy duo. Mr. Fred Clements strikes high as a versatile comedian, and this week he has certainly more than satisfied a critical Middlesex audience. Miss Cissie St. Clair has a pretty lyric in "Absence makes my heart grow fonder," which she sings with expression and feeling. Speedwell, the demon painter, sketches with lightning rapidity the portraits of well-known men. Thus we have life-like likenesses of General Booth, Lord Kitchener, Dan Leno, Sir Henry Irving, and other notabilities. Tee and Tee are as bright and lively as ever with their comedy specialities. They are an exceedingly popular couple down Drury-lane way, as in many other places where they have once made themselves known.

The Glenroy Troupe provide an extremely interesting act in their scena, Lads of the New Brigade. First the three young ladies make their appearance in kilts and smartly execute some Highland dances. Looking picturesque in Scottish full military dress, they continue their dancing, to the huge delight of the audience. Then two male members of the troupe take possession of the stage, and dance a lively Irish jig, in which they are later joined by the girls. The act is one of the most pleasing features in the programme. Mr. Hamilton Hill has, as everybody knows, a baritone voice of good quality, and he uses it to the utmost advantage in his two songs, one of which is, "I don't want a cosy corner." Miss Amber Austa has "a way with her" that compels the admiration of the house. Dressed in quaint old-fashioned dress and hat, she appears in a sort of scena with an oyster-seller, and she comments on the fact that he has got the ragtime voice. Her business in this as well as in her succeeding item is quite of an original order and her dancing is exquisitely graceful as well as somewhat novel. Mr. Charles Woodward gives his hearers something to laugh at in his song concerning a natural fact, the chorus being "If it wasn't for the men." His succeeding number is of a serious nature, and while singing it he is in military dress uniform, donned for the purpose of giving effect to the praises he voices regarding the gallant Carbineers.

Mr. Gus Harris attempts to teach a moral in his latest creation, The Synagogue. The curtain goes up on a Jewish place of worship. A mischievous boy throws a stone and breaks a pane of glass. The rabbi comes out—in the person of Mr. Gus Harris—and begs the boy to consider whether he himself would not feel annoyed if someone threw a stone through a window at the church which the lad himself attended. "Every bird has his nest" is one of the lines of Mr. Harris's song; then he goes on to speak of the indignities to which the Jews have been subjected in Russia, and the kindness the Chosen Race has received from liberty-loving England, etc. The song appears to be to the liking of the audience and Mr. Harris retires amid a perfect thunder of applause. Mr. Frank Seeley is as jocular and rollicking as of yore, and his vivacity and eccentricity call forth intense merriment. "I'll never forget the day" is a song with which he has been popular with the public for some time, and the boys at the Middlesex heartily demonstrate their appreciation of it. By means of the New Bioscope three series of attractive pictures are shown, one depicting an epicure's dream, another a schoolboy's escapade, and a third the days of slavery in South America. Mr. John Lawson and company are responsible for the concluding item, which is the sensational episode entitled The King's Minister, in which Mr. Lawson as the Prime Minister, and Mrs. Lawson as the Minister's daughter, work hard to please the audience.

ISLINGTON EMPIRE.

Mr. John Lawson did a wise thing in arranging with Mr. Cecil Raleigh to supply him with a sensational sketch, for no one was better qualified to furnish exactly the article that was required. The King's Minister, which has been the leading attraction in this week's bill at the Islington Empire, is a Drury Lane drama in miniature, with the comic element left out. It is true that the new production does not contain any scene which can be compared to the furniture-wrecking episode in Humanity, but, on the other hand, Mr. Lawson is able to present a truer study of character, and the later sketch gains in artistic effect by not being dependent for success upon one ultra-sensational scene. The Prime Minister of England certainly does not display the prudence one might reasonably expect from so exalted a personage in dining alone in a shady Soho restaurant with a woman who admits that she has lost her character. The lady smokes cigarettes, and on the stage that is always a bad sign. But at all events she means well by the Minister, and has obtained for him the compromising letters which a cowardly scoundrel has threatened to make use of to ruin the happiness of his lordship's daughter, Muriel. The brutal murder of the lady left alone in the restaurant is appalling in its grim reality, and the scene is cleverly played by the actor and actress concerned. The interest is well maintained until the close. The interview between the guilty but accusing Italian and the Prime Minister is well worked up to its tragic conclusion, and no details are wanting to render the scene thoroughly effective. Mr. John Lawson, who in appearance recalls to mind a famous statesman of thirty years ago, gives a careful and convincing portrayal of the Minister of the Crown, who shows dignity and restraint even in the presence of the blackmailer. Mrs. Lawson as Lady Muriel has few opportunities for powerful acting, but plays the part with distinction and the requisite degree of earnestness and charm. The rôles of the woman who is murdered, the desperate Italian restaurant keeper, and the young man who aspires to the hand of Lady Muriel are all well played. The production has been very favourably received by Empire audiences, who have given Mr. Lawson a hearty welcome to Islington.

The engagement of the smart juggler known as A Bou-Kou may be regarded as another feather in the managerial cap. He has a couple of comic assistants, who appear as a waiter and a boy in buttons, and the first-mentioned is specially active and amusing. A Bou-Kou's most sensational feat is sustaining aloft a table bearing chairs, &c., the waiter and the boy being seated below. The juggler challenges any person not in the profession to lift the table shoulder high from the stage and place it down again without letting it fall or dropping anything therefrom. A Bou-Kou concludes his interesting performance by neatly juggling with three flaming torches.

The popular comedienne, Miss Katie Lawrence, who opened at this hall on Monday, is no stranger to Islington audiences, who have always accorded her a hearty welcome. This she received on Monday, when she successfully gave three songs, but unfortunately she was not well enough to appear on Tuesday. However, Miss Lawrence was again in the bill the following evening, delighting the audience at each house by her rendering of "My old man" and other of her capital ditties. Mr. Fred Herbert scores with the song "It's a wonder what money will do," and in his "Said John Bull to Britannia" the allusions to current topics have their intended effect. Mr. Fred Poplar has a parody on "Home, Sweet Home," and gets a good reception. Mr. George Newburn continues to display his acknowledged ability as a mimic of well-known comedians of the variety stage; Mueller and Coyne give a variety entertainment, the lady singing while the gentleman affords evidence of his skill as an acrobat; Eugene and Willie win favour as musical performers and acrobats; and the three Sisters Leigh do well as vocalists and smart dancers. A specially attractive feature of the current programme are the pictures on the bioscope of the famous wrestling match between Hackenschmidt and Madrali. Mr. Lyndon Greenwood, the energetic manager here, deserves to be complimented on the excellence and completeness of the arrangements in front of the house. Mr. D'Arcy Salter is the acting-manager.

THE EUSTON.

The current programme at this popular hall is mostly in the lighter vein, and general hilarity—an excellent commander—for the most part rules the proceedings during the two hours' traffic of the stage at each performance. Mr. Harry Tate was for years regarded as our cleverest mimic. He it was who reproduced with the greatest exactitude the mannerisms, voice, and gestures of our popular comedians. There was naturally something mechanical in all this, however clever it may have been, and it certainly possessed qualities to which this adjective may be applied most appositely. But Mr. Tate had higher artistic ambitions than to go down to posterity as a mere imitator, and he has of late years revealed the unsuspected gift of humour. He more than surprised us with his impersonation of the automobilical novice in that now famous sketch, Motoring, which at the present moment may be said to be making both hemispheres laugh; but we make bold to say that his personal success is even greater in his sketch, Fishing, which is evoking roars of laughter among the Eustonians. The scene is a cool, translucent backwater, and the exploits of Mr. Tate commence with hooking his nether garments and end with the overturning of the punt from which he and his professional companion—a gentleman with a powerful imagination and an infinite capacity for lying—endeavour to tempt the "speckled beauties" that are every now and then "thrown up" to whet the keen sportsmanlike instincts of the piscatorial Johnny, who evidently thinks angling very thirsty work, if we may judge by the imposing array of bottled whisky which is brought on to the stage. But enough of description. Mr. Tate's genuine drollery is displayed in his power of comic expression even more than by the humour of his utterances, and he is intensely amusing. His coadjutors in the trifle give him excellent support, and Fishing is a laugh from beginning to end. We should add that it is from the pen of that clever farcical writer, Mr. Wal Pink.

Among the chief attractions of the variety entertainment is Miss Daisy Dormer, one of the daintiest of coon impersonators. Miss Dormer has chic, style, vivacity, and charm. She imparts a freshness and a cachet to her work which give renewed life and vigour to the somewhat overdone coon business. Dressed in a pretty scarlet short frock, this smart soubrette scores an enormous success in the smartly-written number by Charles Collins and Harry Castling, entitled "I'm going—going—I'm gone." This is followed by a wonderful dance, which is as unique as it is inspiriting. Miss Dormer thoroughly deserves her success, which is great. Mr. G. H. Elliott, who is known as the chocolate-coloured coon, puts considerable romance into his serenades of a plantation character, which are his special artistic contributions to the programme, and sings with no little intensity of expression a lilting refrain, which may be called "I'm the only coon without a lady." Mr. Elliott is also an excellent dancer, and altogether an interesting personality on the stage. Mr. Arthur Lennard, a firm favourite here as elsewhere, gives genuine pleasure by the admirable way he sings a parody, and also by his Robsonian methods in the clever song—which has done him excellent service—"Mate-mate-mater." The Crown Trio of speciality vocalists are new to us; but their pleasant harmony and agreeable singing should speedily win them favour. The combination consists of two men—one in Gordon Highlander dress, the other in English military uniform—and a pretty girl, costumed as a waitress. The old Scotch song, "Mary," is given successfully as a trio, and the Highlander scores in the very much hackneyed "True till Death." Mr. John Marx, a fine specimen of a cultured athlete—a veritable Hercules—causes great astonishment by the display of his immense strength, especially in the feat where he sustains no fewer than twenty-five men on a platform. The Sisters Hall and Mr. Joe Peterman's comedy extravaganza, in three scenes, entitled The Belle of the Orient, are other potent attractions in the bill.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

Mr. Fred Karno's latest production, Moses and Son, has proved a strong attraction at the Hackney Empire this week, and the handsome building has been packed with audiences that have expressed approval and delight in no half-hearted manner. Moses and Son more closely resembles a modern musical comedy than most of Mr. Fred Karno's previous productions, and no doubt it is only the time limit that stands in the way of the introduction of additional musical numbers. The first scene represents the interior of Moses and Sons' bank in Lombard-street, with a crowd of young ladies sitting with their backs to the audience busily engaged in typewriting. If it were an ordinary musical play these ladies would sing a chorus, but in the absence of this melodious preliminary we speedily make the acquaintance of Perkins, the caretaker at the bank, who is the leading character in the piece. A quaint and highly amusing personage is Perkins, as may easily be imagined when it is said that this part is impersonated by that favourite comedian Mr. Fred Kitchen. In the street outside the bank a pair of horses drawing a carriage, the sole occupant of which is a lady, bolt, but they are gallantly stopped by a son of the banker's, and no damage is done. The lady, however, faints, and is carried into the bank, and on recovering consciousness she finds Perkins by her side, which leads her to suppose that he was her brave rescuer. He does not deny it, and is regarded by everybody as a hero who has risked his life in doing a gallant act. Young Moses, for reasons of his own, does not claim the honour rightly due to him. He has fallen in love with one of the young ladies in the employ of the firm, but when he declares his intention of marrying her his father flies into a rage and bids him quit his presence for ever. Before this happens, however, much fun has been caused by Perkins' comic treatment of the office-boy, and his negotiations with a gentlemen who calls with a leather bag and beguiles the caretaker into purchasing it and its worthless contents. Another funny episode is the visit of a beggar woman, whose tale of woe melts Perkins to tears as he pours gold and bundles of bank-notes into her outstretched apron, telling her to call again "if she should run short."

In the next scene, the Stock Exchange, young Moses is reconciled to his father, and he and his wife invited to the grand ball, which duly takes place at the "Moses" Mansion, Park-lane. This is quite a brilliant scene, the reception of the company being followed by dancing. Here we find Perkins in full evening dress figuring as an American millionaire. But he is wearing borrowed—or, rather, stolen—plumes, and the imposture is discovered and denounced by Mr. Moses, who compels the detected caretaker to take off his coat and vest and divest himself of his rings. All the company turn from him with the exception of the lady who was the heroine of the carriage accident, and is evidently prepared to accept him as her husband.

Mr. Fred Kitchen, with his keen sense of humour and natural ability as a comedian, is extremely well suited in the part of Perkins; indeed, he has never done anything better. His exceedingly funny performance ensures the success of the production. With the exception of Mr. Kitchen the cast consists entirely of Hebrew artists. Miss Leah Morris is a most attractive Rebecca, the lady who shows a partiality for Perkins; and other characters are excellently played by Miss Janet Reeve, Miss Maude Shelton, Mr. Herbert Landeck, and Mr. Anthony Gordon. The music, composed and arranged by Mr. Dudley Powell, is bright and appropriate, and the elaborate staging of the production deserves special mention.

Amongst the general company engaged here this week is Mr. Ben Albert, a capital comedian, who scores with a couple of ditties, one of them dealing with the subject of logic. Mr. Austen Rudd, in his favourite rôle of a policeman, sings "I had to blow my whistle" with comic effect, and he also makes a hit with a good parody on "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you." Mr. Cooke and Miss Rothert appear in what is aptly termed "a typical American mix-up," and their bustling and versatile performance is much applauded. Mr. George Ridgwell, the excellent baritone vocalist, has a most favourable reception; and the Hayden Sisters have a capital collection of songs, "In the shade of the old apple-tree" and "Coming back home again" proving most acceptable contributions to the programme, which also includes George Antill (comedian) and the American bioscope with pictures illustrative of the carnival at Nice. Mr. John Christie, acting-manager, Mr. Kennedy Johnson, assistant-manager, and Mr. Walter Johnson, musical director, continue to fulfil their respective duties with praiseworthy care and efficiency.

RICHMOND THEATRE.

Quite ably does Mr. Kay Draco look after the fortunes of the pretty theatre so dear to Thamesiders. The attendance is still remarkably good, and is evidence that the liberality of the management is appreciated and rewarded. This week there are many good things in the bill. Place aux dames. Premier honours go to Miss Nell Richardson, who returns to the scenes of her former triumphs, for as principal boy in the pantomime she won all hearts. On Monday she was accorded quite an ovation as she tripped on to the stage to tell her audience how "Some boys loved one girl." Her second contribution, "Snowflakes," was exquisite, and she "dressed" the part with excellent taste. The Wedburns, who are also on a return visit, are quite amusing in their drolleries, much of their patter being really funny. They are clever instrumentalists too, and their clarionet soli win thunders of applause. The Donnas Trio get through some wonderful trapeze tricks, their balancing ladder feats being really remarkable; nor should Mr. Joe Mack, a comedian of promise, be forgotten, for he is vastly amusing. Dinah Morris and her troupe of Southern Belles enact an extravaganza entitled The Lost Coon. The production is a pot-pourri of songs, dances, plantation humours, and other eccentricities. Monday's audience seemed to like it amazingly, and cheered the efforts of the artists to the echo. The Sisters Reno evidence their versatility in some graceful terpsichorean essays, appearing first in a clever pas de deux. They then bravely foot it in a characteristic Slav dance; and, going from grave to gay, become a couple of irresponsible coons, and finish up with a duet as Spanish maidens in a whirl of muslin, ribbons, and hilarity. In a word, the Sisters Reno are excellent. A good "doggie show" is always a safe turn, and Mr. C. Gordyn's wonderful bow-wows win favour quite deservedly. Indeed, take them all round, they are quite a lot of jolly dogs. A pantomime scene dealing with the peccadillos of a gallant son of Mars and a lynx-eyed custodian of the peace causes peals of merriment, and, not content with this, Mr. Goodwyn's dogs play football in a way that would suggest there should be cup ties for doggies. The La Fane Comedy Company extract all the fun possible from a sketch entitled Keep it Dark. The bioscope, always a feature here, is really wonderfully interesting, and again we owe a debt of recognition to Mr. Norfolk Megone's excellent orchestra for their fine selection from Véronique. Encouraged by the success of the last matinée, The Little Michus made their début at Richmond Theatre on Wednesday.

THE SOUTH LONDON.

Mr. Frank Travis, who is amusing South London audiences this week with his ventriloquial act, might not inaptly describe his turn as quick-changes of the voice. For "quick-changes" they are. One wonders, indeed, how it is possible to imitate the speech of a man, a boy, and a little girl in the space of time of less than half-a-minute. Even more remarkable is the rapidity with which he alters the make-ups of his dummies. Thus he transforms a golden-haired maiden of six or seven summers to a hoary old Chelsea pensioner in a few seconds. Mr. Travis's business is full of laughable and interesting surprises. The Sisters Wingrove distinguish themselves as duettists and dancers, their vocalism being most delightful, and their dancing exceedingly graceful. Mr. Will E. Haines symbolises a well-known fact when he produces a sovereign from his pocket and refers to it as the golden key that will open any door. His song in connection with this subject is quite a smart number of its kind, and is appropriately rendered. The Misses Fraser and Haley, who call themselves harmonising vocalists, have a couple of enchanting songs. The first concerns the flowers of the different seasons, and the messages these dainty denizens of nature's nursery furnish. Their following effort is "I was only teasing you to find out if you were true." Both the young ladies are to be congratulated on their style and delivery.

Mr. Ernest Montefiore and company appear in the musical and dramatic scena, The Little Colonel. It is a pretty, pathetic, and well-written little sketch, and the two principal parts—those of Captain Barton and his daughter Marjorie—are cleverly acted by Mr. Montefiore and the juvenile lady who assists him. The child shows great promise of a histrionic career, and is a pleasing vocalist withal. Her interpretation of "Hear the Pipers calling, Jennie Mine," is particularly commendable, and the audience does not fail to give evidence of its hearty appreciation, both of the small maiden's efforts and of the playlet itself. Strong women are once more to the fore in the persons of Miss Vulcana, and the Misses Gwennie and Maud Atlas. The weight-lifting feats of these women excite general admiration, especially as the said feats are accomplished with grace and ease. The ladies appear in conjunction with Mr. Atlas, whose remarkable physical endowments require no recommendation at this hour. He exercises with 200lb. bar-bells in much the same way that ordinary men are content to run their circulation up with instruments of one-tenth that weight.

Dwarfland, the musical pantomime presented by the Six Brothers Luck, creates any amount of merriment. The scenes in which the action of the pantomime are set are picturesque in the extreme, especially the Magic Well, which brings to our notice the ruins of an old monastery set in the midst of beautiful foliage. The King's Rose Garden in the last scene furnishes another pretty picture, especially when we witness the graceful movements of some thirty good-looking dancers. The Brothers Luck, who take the principal parts in the production, are intensely funny, what with their whimsical remarks and their lively antics. The songs and dances go with a fine swing, and the whole pantomime provides a distinct and most delightful feature of the programme. With Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope we are told the story of Oliver Twist, Fagin, Nancy, Bill Sikes, and the Artful Dodger. The different scenes have been arranged with great care, and with a view of complying with the best ideas as to the novel, and unquestionably they succeed in doing so. We were pleased to see Mr. Frank Weeks, the energetic manager, looking extremely well on the evening of our visit, and attending with his usual strenuousness and care to the interests of his patrons.

GRAND, CLAPHAM.

The sign of success has been well displayed this week at Mr. Walter Gibbons's elegant hall on Lavender-hill, where houses overflowing in every part have given proof of the immense attractive powers of the current bill. A sensation is presented midway in the programme in the shape of "The Globe of Life," a steel sphere 16ft. in diameter, within which two cyclists perform the most intrepid feats. The performers, who are known as Wizard Stone and Irene Stone, have both won championship honours, the lady claiming to be the fastest female rider in America, to which progressive country the artists belong. Mounted on bicycles, inside their metal cage the pair career round at break-neck speed, rising and falling on the sloping sides with bewildering rapidity. Afterwards, Wizard Stone gets astride a heavy motor bicycle, and riding at the rate of nearly fifty miles an hour, "loops" the globe five or six times in succession—a feat, it is stated, he is the only man in the world to perform. The turn is alluded to as a cycle thrill defying all laws of gravitation, and the description is a perfect one.

Thrills are also contained in the sketch Satan, which furnishes an important item of the entertainment. The sketch is remarkable for the life-like impersonation of a gorilla given by Mr. Edward Sillward, who wins well-deserved cheers for his performance. The harrowing situations of the little piece are worked up with unerring skill, and the pathos which comes at the end is genuine and intense. Mr. Sillward is supported by Mr. Creaton Gray as George Golding, by Miss Polly Raim as his wife Mai, and by Messrs. Raymond Thomas and John Wigley in other parts. Fun is the principal ingredient of the duologue Saucy Maud, presented by the Brontes. A slighter plot than that contained in the sketch, in which a maid-servant impersonates her mistress and thus secures an offer of marriage from a young army officer, could not be imagined, and it says much for the comedy talents of the couple that they are able to keep the audience in hearty laughter throughout its performance. Miss Bronte's rendering of the resourceful slavey is especially to be praised, the frequent assertiveness of "Saucy Maud" from beneath the lady's disguise causing the utmost laughter.

The heartiest welcome is extended to Miss Nellie Wallace, whose caprices of dress and style seem to reach the height of eccentricity. Her singing of "Three times a day" thoroughly taxes the laughing powers of the audience, which are put to further proof in her song "My pretty maid." The "pretty maid" carries her arm in a sling, and her melancholy mood ill accords with the quaint antics with which she entertains the onlookers, who are convulsed with laughter, and make a resolute endeavour to recall the popular artist. The Two Bees present a pretty episode in Hiawatha Wed, which serves as a sequel to their former playlet on Longfellow's dusky hero. Mr. Harry Blake, as Hiawatha, declaims his lines vigorously, and it is a rare tribute to the versatility of the popular couple that an audience who have so often been moved to mirth should be affected to sympathetic silence by the simple pathos of the story of the American Indian and his squaw. Miss Flora Blake sings in her customary tuneful style, and the melodious nature of the duets are thoroughly preserved.

The Imperial Bioscope has a prominent place in the scheme of amusement, the pictures of elephants at work in Burmese forests being highly interesting. The mighty quadrupeds are depicted moving about amid the forest, felling huge trees and carrying them along with their trunks, and the picture forms an instructive lesson in brute force and sagacity. The memorable struggle between Hackenschmidt and Madrali, at Olympia on Saturday, is also shown, the view obtained of the last bout being exceedingly clear and striking. Drawee Frisco and Hambro combine in a juggling entertainment, in which comedy has a prominent place. The various tricks are neatly performed, and a fine collie dog contributes in no small measure to the fun which is made by a "nigger" assistant. Mr. Fred Neiman and his ventriloquial minstrels provide a well-appreciated item of the bill, the figures being cleverly voiced and worked. Miss Edith Courtney secures an irresistible encore with "Come back to Erin," which she sings in cultured style; George Young, the blind collier boy, also wins loud applause by his playing on a Japanese fiddle and for the energy which he imparts to a march on the concertina; and the long and well-selected programme is also contributed to by Mr. Fred Spencer, "expressionist." Mr. H. Ketteman rules with an experienced hand at the Grand Palace, and Mr. A. W. Deer capably performs the duties of acting-manager.

MR. FREDERIC BAUGH'S BENEFIT.

The old Britannia presented quite a unique spectacle on Friday evening, April 27, the occasion of the benefit of Mr. Frederic Baugh, the London district manager of the Macnaghten vaudeville circuit. No manager could wish for a better acknowledgment of his popularity, artists and audience co-operating to make the event an unqualified success. The vast auditorium was packed by means of the early doors, and an excellent programme was gone through. During the evening several gentlemen well known in variety circles, who had formed themselves into a committee, appeared on the stage, and Mr. Harrison, of the Palace, Halifax, on their behalf expressed the committee's desire to congratulate their host. He also apologised for the non-attendance of Mr. Frank Macnaghten, who is at present holiday-making in Japan. Mr. Harrison then made the presentations, which consisted of a cheque value £125, subscribed by a few friends, a handsome cigar case, the gift of Mr. Carl Hamlin, the musical director of the Britannia, and also a novel ornament in the shape of a model of the obelisk which stood at St. George's Circus outside the Surrey Theatre, one of the effects of the late Geo. Conquest, this being the present of Mr. Ernest Cadle, of Cadle's agency. Mr. Baugh bid for this identical article at the "Conquest" sale, but was outbid by the present donor. That famous personage, Ally Sloper, of Sloper's Half-Holiday, next presented silver watches each to Mr. Baugh and Mr. James McCarthy (the popular manager of the "Brit"). Mr. Baugh, in acknowledging the presents, said: "It gives me great pleasure to be able to be amongst you. I must thank all who have so generously done so much to show their appreciation of my endeavours. Since Mr. Barrasford has taken over the Britannia we have always tried to follow in the steps of the late Mrs. Sara Lane, whose popularity need not be told. Last winter, with the generosity of Mr. Leonard Mortimer, we were able to provide 7500 dinners for the poor children of Hoxton. The coming winter we shall endeavour to double that number. In conclusion, I must thank the patrons of the Britannia, who have already shown their appreciation. The management, in their turn, will at all times endeavour to give them value for their money." About forty "turns," in addition to the already excellent programme, appeared. Mr. Chas. Bignell, comedian, scored with his "Toodle-oodle-ay"; the Four Cecilias proved themselves a quartette of clever instrumentalists; the audience were loth to part with their old favourite, Mr. Harry Champion, who gave "The old brown hat"; the Four Virginians were recalled again and again with their smart singing and dancing act, Coon Town Society; Miss Rose Hamilton, comedienne, was enthusiastically received; Mr. Mansel Fane, actor-vocalist, rendered "Starlight" in excellent style; a favourite comedian appeared in the person of Mr. Will Lytton, who, with his originality and quaintness, is making rapid strides in his profession; the Sisters Albert are a smart pair of duettists and dancers; a flattering reception was accorded Walker and May, the coloured comedy duo; Mr. Joe Mac proved himself a comedian and eccentric dancer of more than ordinary merit; Mr. Chas. Austin, with his "Nursery Rhymes," was a host in himself; Miss Susie Marney won honours for her impressive rendering of "Don't turn the organ man away"; Miss Bessie Spear was well received with "I shan't sing a coon song," and also excelled as a dancer. Among the other artists who appeared were Mr. Fredk. Conquest and company in a dramatic episode, The Freak's Revenge; Miss Flo Roult, comedienne; the Chandos, musical speciality artists; the Ringling Trio, comedy sketch artists; Whisper, comedy juggler; Mr. Fred S. Peake and company, in their successful sketch The Hypocrite; Miss Lily Le Breton, trapeze artist; the Five Broadway Girls, vocalists, in their speciality, "The Gibson Girl"; Miss Ethel Dunford, character-vocalist; Miss Beattie Bloom, comedienne; Miss May Pritchard, comedienne; Miss Dorothy Clark, vocalist; and Miss Lottie Bell, comedienne and dancer. The entire stage-direction was in the capable hands of Mr. W. Waller, the Britannia's painstaking stage-manager; and Mr. James McCarthy worked hard in securing the comfort of his patrons in "front."

HARRY REYNOLDS' MINSTRELS

IN BRIGHTON.

Some nigger shows may be old-fashioned and dead slow, but there are no flies on this one of Harry Reynolds. It is a show that ought not to be missed. Speaking personally, we ourselves attended the performance expecting a boresome two hours. Instead of this, however, we were regaled with some two and a half hours' really high-class entertainment, and were genuinely sorry when the curtain fell.—Brighton Standard, April 26, 1906.

A CLEVER sketch, written by Mr. T. F. Doyle, of the Theatre Royal, Bradford, with music by Mr. Harry Rushworth, was presented for the first time at the Empire Theatre, Bradford, on Friday evening, the 27th ult. The idea of the trifle is effective. A woman with all the instincts of affection and heartfelt joy hails with song the long-deferred return of her husband from distant shores, but her rapture is brief, for news reaches her of the death of the loved one in a railway accident. She swoons, and in a vision sees herself reduced to beggary. When the awakening comes, however, the absent one is safe, and happiness is restored.

MRS. CHARLES LAW ATKINSON, who, as Miss Annie Schuberth, won fame in opera, achieved a signal success in her impersonation of the wife, and the applause which greeted her was enthusiastic. Mrs. Atkinson, who adopts the nom-de-guerre of Miss Veda Royd, was ably supported by Mr. Cannan Dalby and Miss Clara Hall, of Bradford.

MUSIC HALL BENEVOLENT FUND.

ANNUAL DINNER.

After the toasts of the King and Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Royal Family had been duly honoured,

The Chairman, rising to propose the toast of "The Music Hall Benevolent Fund," said:

Gentlemen, the next toast, "The Music Hall Benevolent Fund," is one that I scarcely feel able to do justice to after the many excellent chairmen you have had from time to time, and the masterly way in which they have treated the subject. However, I will do my best. I am sorry to say that for some time past there has been a strong feeling of dissatisfaction expressed by the profession with regard to the administration of the Fund. Whether this expression of dissatisfaction is founded upon fact or fiction I cannot say; but the fact remains that it has done almost irreparable harm to our excellent charity and institution, which has for years done so much good amongst the poor and needy of our vast profession. When I, for the second time, consented to become its president, I little knew how strong the feeling was against us, and the difficulties I had to contend with. However, with a strong determination, and with the loyal assistance of a few staunch friends, I have been able to save the situation for the present, in order that I may be able to challenge those who are wishing to crush the Fund to come forward and openly state their grievances, so that we may know, or, at least, endeavour to find out, any defects that may exist. It is my earnest desire that this should be done with a view to upholding, maintaining, and putting on a sound and proper basis a Fund which hundreds have benefited by in the past, and many hundreds more may benefit by in the future. An institution which has been going on for years may need some reform; but, because this may be so, why try and wipe out its existence? I am not applying this remark to those gentlemen present here to-night, for the very fact of you giving me your support is sufficient proof that you are desirous of my success during my year of office as president. It is easy to find fault, easy to criticise, and very tempting to find fault when by so doing one may find a reason for not subscribing. This, I think, may be applied to many who would rather see the Fund extinguished than lend a helping hand. We are entirely in the dark, as I have before suggested, as to what objections are taken to the committee's work. I only know that they work hard and earnestly. I may tell you, gentlemen, that the pensioners on this Fund have increased from six to thirty during the last few years, and we have buried 110 poor professionals in a like period—in many cases stepped in and saved them from a pauper's grave. One serious matter that I must refer to is that we have lent the sum of £2,146 in various amounts to artists who expressed themselves unwilling to accept charity, but borrowed the money for the purpose, in some cases, to travel to an engagement, or to furnish themselves with costumes and properties for the purpose of carrying out an immediate engagement, and of this large sum (£2,146) only £541 has been repaid, leaving an amount of £1,605 still owing to the Fund. Therefore, the poorer members of the profession have been deprived of this amount by their brother and sister artists who are not honourable enough to repay the loans. Gentlemen, to-night I want you all to put your names down for something, and I must ask you to think of the many who depend upon what we do here to-night; and what we may do here to-night, others may do afterwards, and by that means we may save our Fund from going to the wall. I feel, gentlemen, that you do not desire me to picture to you some of the sad cases we have to relieve. You all know that as some go up others come down, and to those who unfortunately come down we must give our attention. Once more, gentlemen, I ask you to assist us as far as you can, and I now have the pleasure of giving you the toast, "The Music Hall Benevolent Fund."

Mr. St. John Brenon, proposing, in the absence of Mr. T. P. O'Connor, the toast of "The Music Hall Proprietors," said: It was only when I came into the room that I was informed by your secretary that in the absence of Mr. T. P. O'Connor I would be asked to do my best to draw your attention to the merits of the proprietors of music halls. I am afraid that my efforts will be considered rather meagre in your estimation considering that you anticipated the pleasure of hearing so distinguished an orator as my friend Mr. T. P. O'Connor. Nevertheless, I will try my best to tell you what I think, and what I think you ought to think, and what the public thinks of the merits of music hall proprietors. These gentlemen, many of whom you see here this evening, have invested large sums of money in this pleasant and probably lucrative enterprise. It has brought to the banking accounts of numerous speculators large dividends due wholly to the energy and working capacity of the men who run the music halls and the men on the directorate of the various companies. Mr. Graydon, Mr. Gros, Mr. Joe Davis, and others have pioneered the music halls to the exalted position in the estimation of public opinion which they hold to-day. They have striven to purify the variety theatre, and have done their best to make it an entertainment to which your womenfolk and your children can be taken without fear of tainting their understandings. In asking you to honour this toast, I couple with it the name of Mr. Henri Gros.

Mr. Henri Gros, in responding, said: The very fact that the proprietor of a music hall is in the chair of this benevolent fund is sufficient raison d'être for the proprietors figuring on your toast list. I do think that Mr. Graydon is right to have expected a little more support from some of our colleagues. He is the honorary secretary to the London Entertainments Association, which numbers thirty-five music halls, and I do hope, if the proprietors and managers of those concerns are not here to-night, that we shall yet find their names on the subscription list. At any rate, proprietors of music halls have in the past done what they could for this fund, and now I am given to understand that this is rather a bar against the future of this fund with the artists. If there be any artists here to-night, let them remember that the proprietors of music halls will continue to subscribe to and attend their annual dinner, and to give as far as their means will enable them. This is essentially an artists' fund. When I, two years ago, sat in the chair that my friend now occupies, Mr. O'Gorman, in his capacity as King Rat, attended, with a large number of artists, and handed me the magnificent sum of £100. I hope they have a similar surprise in store for Mr. Graydon. Mr. St. John Brenon has told you what fortunes are made by proprietors of music halls and the enjoyment in life that they get from them. It is very plain that Mr. St. John Brenon is not a large shareholder in some of our latest ventures. It is also very plain that Mr. St. John Brenon, with his large literary knowledge, has forgotten that there is such an authority as the London County Council, and I would speak of that because it touches the future of the artists. The London County Council have of late thought, and they have given it forth in the Press and elsewhere, that they are the only people who look after the safety of the public, and they have now decided that standing-room is no longer to be allowed. What will that mean to us? It will mean the curtailment of our audiences. It will mean to the public increased prices of admission in all popular parts of the house, or it will mean to the artist possibly a reduction of salary. I know they won't smile at that. But the situation is serious. The evidence of their own chairman (Sir George Fardell) before the Royal Commission of 1892 was to the effect that standing-room afforded a safety valve to the public in getting out as showing the way of egress. The theatres now are better built than ever they were. The Council puts us in a corner and says to us, "This you shall do." We ask them, "What is the law?" They say, "We are above the law. We do not recognise the law. You either take your licence or leave it alone." I can only hope for more wisdom from those who are the licensing authorities.

Mr. Albert Flint, in proposing "The Trustees, Treasurer, and other Officers of the Fund," said: This toast has been placed in my hands at very short notice. It is the toast of the trustees and the other officers of the Fund. Now, as you are aware, the duties of the trustees and other officers are of quite an honorary character. There is no gain in any way bar that gain which they get in knowing that they are doing something for their fellow creatures. I couple with this toast the names of Mr. Walter Beard and Mr. Frank Weeks.

Mr. Walter Beard said: I think Dick Warner ought to have responded to this toast. However, speaking for myself and for those gentlemen who attend to the financial work of the Fund, I thank you. It is to my friend Mr. Weeks and those engaged with him that this toast must now be left.

Mr. Warner said he was extremely obliged to his friend Mr. Beard for having drawn attention to the matter of his name. He had previously informed the Chairman that he did not think he would be present, and for that reason he was not put down as a responder. He pointed out the necessities of the Fund, and earnestly begged for support. As far as he and his fellow trustees and officers were concerned, the Fund was being and would be administered most conscientiously.

At this juncture a telegram from Mr. Sydney Hyman wishing success to the Fund and a letter from Mr. Joe Lyons intimating that he was kept at home by doctor's orders were read.

Mr. Frank Weeks, replying to the same toast, said: As chairman of the committee I beg to thank you on their behalf for the honour you have done them. I think the whole of the profession owe a debt of gratitude to the members of the committee of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund. From my position as present chairman of the committee, and vice-chairman last year, when I attended forty-six meetings out of a possible fifty-two, it will show that the work I have done in the past, and am doing in the present, is solid and substantial, like other members of the committee, who are entitled at the least to the full recognition of that devotion to the cause which we all have at heart, viz., that of charity, and a desire to help those who have been overtaken by misfortune. We ask no praise for what we are doing—as an old soldier I am above that. "Duty" has been my password all my life, and will be to the end; but recognition for work done is only right and fair. Most of the gentlemen present know how we administer the funds that are entrusted to our care, and it is deeply to be regretted that statements are circulated by persons who are not in sympathy with us—to me it is inconceivable that such persons should exist; but they do, and have, moreover, done us a great deal of harm—that the cost of the distribution is 13s. or 14s. in the pound, whereas it is only about 3s. or 4s. These statements are repeated broadcast, and so made an excuse for not subscribing. The Fund has also been objected to, because it is said that the committee consists of proprietors and agents, who use their knowledge to depreciate the value of services of those artists who have unfortunately to apply for assistance. Such insulting remarks about the good men and true who have given their time and money need no comment, only this—if these tactics continue, and support is withheld, it will not be long before you have no Fund to help your poor. However, we are thankful that we have been enabled during last year, in addition to our weekly grants, to provide for our pensioners, who have increased from six to thirty in seven years. We also buried during last year ten poor professionals, bringing the number up to 110. In the like period we investigated during the year 1,548 cases. Notwithstanding all this, and that we closely watch the necessary expenditure, we are told we are extravagrant in our administration. Well, gentlemen, let me tell you this, that had we allowed ourselves to have been influenced by these selfish croakers, who possibly disparage our efforts, the good we have already done would never have been accomplished. I may mention that I have asked every manager throughout the Kingdom to get a penny from every one asking for a free pass, and we await the result. In conclusion, I assure the profession and the supporters of the Fund, that the committee, at considerable personal sacrifice, have striven to do their duty, and they trust they have met with the approval of those who know the difficulties of the work they have in hand.

Mr. T. Ernest Polden, in submitting the toast of "The Music Hall Profession," remarked that it was a pleasure for him to be present that evening to propose the toast of the music hall profession. He hoped there would be a hearty response to the request for donations. Let them remember the names associated as president with this Fund. On the illuminated banner at the back of the chairman, the topmost name was that of Sir Augustus Harris, while at the bottom was that of Mr. Graydon.

Mr. Frank Gerald, responding, said: I will endeavour to clear the air, and state what is the artists' view as regards the Music Hall Benevolent Fund. The Fund is not the popular institution it used to be. It has been frequently said that the poorer artist does not care to come before the committee of managers for help for fear that the circumstances surrounding his case should be brought up against him at some future date, when he might be seeking an engagement. But it is not the real reason for the artists' lack and trust and good-fellowship, that existed in of confidence. It is this: The friendly feeling, days gone by between the proprietor and the artist have disappeared. The relations between the two are now so strained that it is impossible for them to work together harmoniously. The artist suffers from various restrictions and bars at the present time. He is harassed in his employment and belittled in his work. A certain proprietor said recently that the advance in the music hall world was due entirely to the proprietors' business acumen and lavish outlay, and that the artist had done nothing to improve the profession. That, I take it, is belittling the artist. If the proprietor would meet the artist in a fair manner, then we should be able to work together.

Mr. Charles Coborn, speaking for Mr. Jack Harrison, gracefully referred to the Press, and

Mr. Frank Desprez and Mr. G. Spencer Edwards suitably acknowledged the compliments on behalf of the Fourth Estate.

The Secretary (Mr. Horace Marriott) announced that the president had collected over £400 during his year of office, and in face of the depression in every walk of life, the difficulties he had had in collecting that amount had been great. Where a man formerly gave ten guineas, he now only gave three, and where a person gave one guinea, he now gave nothing at all.

Mr. Warner gave the toast of "The Visitors," and

Mr. John Pritchard briefly responded.

Mr. Gros proposed the health of the Chairman, stating that that gentleman deserved the sympathy of the whole profession for the painstaking and conscientious manner in which he had worked for the Benevolent Fund. Referring to what Mr. Gerald had said, the speaker pointed out that when the late Mr. Dan Leno sat in the chair at a Music Hall Benevolent Fund dinner, he had the worst support from the artists that any president ever had. He (the speaker) would ask everyone to drink a bumper to Mr. Graydon.

The Chairman expressed his gratitude for the kindly remarks that had been made concerning him.

A capital variety programme, under the direction of Mr. Laurie Graydon and Mr. C. Chapman, was provided. Miss Ethel Walker gave a most pleasing pianoforte entertainment, others who helped to amuse the company being Mr. Gilbert Girard, Miss Hanid Alexander, Mr. Ernest Rees, Malini, Miss Fatmah Diard, the Emlyn-Jones Quintette, Miss Florence Yayman, Mr. Alfred Hurley, Miss Laura Johnson, Mr. Charles Norton, Princess Pauline, Miss Gomez, Mr. Frank Esmond, Mr. Frank Bolger, Mr. Bagnall, and Mr. Jack Lorimer, to all of whom Mr. Graydon asks us to tender his thanks. A delightful selection of music was played during the dinner by Mr. Angelo Asher's Bijou Orchestra.

All the arrangements in connection with the dinner, which proved most enjoyable and successful, were carried out by the energetic and courteous secretary, who had the able assistance of Mr. Laurie Graydon.

AN APPEAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—The readers and the profession generally will be sorry to hear that the illness of Mr. Fred Locke, the well-known pantomime librettist, is of so serious a nature that no hope can be held out of a recovery. He has had two strokes of paralysis since January last, and is now completely prostrated. Though he may linger on for a considerable time, it is quite certain that his literary labours are at an end; and so the income of his wife and family is practically reduced to nothing. The family consists of nine, of whom the three eldest are in situations at small salaries; but the other six, ranging in age from fourteen years down to six months, are at home, and entirely dependent on the exertions of their mother. In these circumstances, an old friend of the family, Mr. J. S. Crichton, of The Hampden, 9, Bridge-street, S.S., Glasgow, has put himself in communication with a number of the profession whose early successes were made in one or other of Mr. Locke's "pantos," and has been successful in relieving the more immediate necessities of the case. An appeal has been made in the Masonic column of a Glasgow newspaper, Mr. Locke being an initiate of the Mother Lodge, Kilwinning, No. O, and an affiliate of the Neptune, Kilwinning, No. 442, and the brethren are bestirring themselves to see what aid can be rendered to the family.

The following sums have already been subscribed, and at once forwarded to Mrs. Locke:—

J. S. Crichton	2	2	0
S. Y. Paterson	1	1	0
Hector Paterson	0	10	6
C. H.	0	3	6
A. S.	0	2	6
C. F.	0	2	0

—Yours truly, HECTOR PATERSON.

[The Editor of The Era will be pleased to acknowledge any further sums sent to Mr. J. S Crichton, 9, Bridge-street, S.S., Glasgow.]

Griff's new act, produced for the first time in London on Monday at the Oxford, is arranged on rather original lines. As the curtain goes up, the famous comedy juggler is seen holding a baby, which he is endeavouring to calm. The scene is a drawing-room at the artist's lodgings, and the period a few minutes before Griff has to start off for his appearance at a music hall. He is anxious to rehearse a few of his tricks, but the baby apparently doesn't want him to do anything of the kind, for it goes into convulsions and screams when he picks up anything. Finally, he succeeds in quieting the infant and puts it in its cradle. Then he turns to the visitors' book in order to see what well-known variety folk have stayed at the same diggings. He reads the name of the "Memory Man," who has put his signature to the statement that he had lodged in the house once before, but had forgotten the date. When Griff turns to his audience and asks, "Is that right, sir?" in the most approved Datas style there is an outburst of laughter. In like fashion he makes amusing references to other artists. Then Griff turns up a paper to discover at what time he is to appear on the Oxford stage. 7.45 is the time. "It is rather an early turn," he says whimsically, "but I'd sooner see the people coming in than going out."

Once more he takes to his juggling, but the baby's howls upset his calculations, with the result that some of the landlady's crockery is smashed. He next proceeds to balance a lighted lamp so that it shall move along a billiard cue held in a horizontal position, and one marvels at his skill and cleverness until the lamp slips from the stick and we discover that it is suspended from a piece of string. Catching oranges on steel points which he grips in his teeth is his concluding feat, but after one member of the audience has caught Griff a nasty "one" in the eye with an orange, the said Griff decides that it is time to retire, which he accordingly does, not before, however, the house has demonstrated its delight at his performance. A novel feature of the act is the baby, which is a most ingeniously contrived mechanical doll. The manner in which it is made to wink, open and shut its mouth, and kick its legs is most laughable. The infant's howls are furnished by Griff's ventriloquial powers. Miss Ethel Milton, who takes the part of the juggler's wife, has a charming personality, and carries herself with grace, and Mr. Harry Castle is capital as a cockney coachman.

Miss Bessie Arthur, the female Harry Lauder, successfully deputised for Miss Marie Loftus last week at the Pavilion, Greenock.

MUSIC HALL BENEVOLENT FUND, AND THE WORK IT DOES.

(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

One of the pleasantest functions of a newspaper is to watch and chronicle the doings and call attention to the excellent work performed by charitable associations. We, as a theatrical newspaper, are always delighted to give prominence to the noble services rendered by the benevolent funds connected with the profession. It is scarcely necessary for us at this time to say that the Music Hall Benevolent Fund is doing the same work amongst variety artists that the Actors' Benevolent Fund is doing amongst actors.

What has the Music Hall Benevolent Fund done, and what does it do? Here is an instance of one week's work. On Thursday, December 14 last, the committee investigated thirty-six cases of distress, and gave relief to thirty-three of the applicants. That happens fifty-two times in the year, and is only what is known as "weekly relief." Then, during the past year, the Fund buried ten poor professionals; and, then, there are the pensioners, who are receiving, and will receive, a weekly grant until their death. What is there to criticise in a committee which does such splendid work to which the following reports on cases will bear testimony?

(1) "One of the committee visited a case on Sunday; very sad; old professional ill in bed; bitterly cold day; no fire; hardly any bedclothes, and no food. Furniture: one table, two chairs, bare boards."

(2) "Two members of the committee visited a very deserving case of destitution and starvation last Friday—father, mother, and three children. They relieved the case, and reported fully on the following Thursday."

(3) "Sad case of sudden death of an artist. No funds to bury him. Instructions at once given by secretary to the undertaker."

(4) Letter from artist:—"It is with great reluctance that I apply to you, but abject poverty compels me to do so. I have had bad luck for the most part of last year. I walked from —— to London, where I tried to get an engagement, but old age stands in my way. I leave myself in your hands."

We will leave our readers to imagine what must have been the plight, what must have been the sufferings, of the people above referred to. Their cases are typical of many others that the committee is called upon to deal with every week And here let it be said that every applicant is treated with the utmost consideration; his or her confidences are respected in the strictest and most honourable manner. Mr. Horace Marriott, the secretary, take a sympathetic interest in the applications that are brought before him, and with admirable promptitude brings their necessities to the notice of the committee. And when we add that such gentlemen as Mr. Frank Allen, Mr. George Adney Payne, Mr. Henri Gros, Mr. Joseph Lyons, and Mr. J. L. Graydon have all expressed their entire satisfaction with the administration of the Fund, surely there is little room left for criticism.

MISS KATHLEEN CHIPMAN AND MR. GEORGE GOODES' VOCAL AND DRAMATIC RECITAL.

A large and fashionable audience assembled at the Æolian Hall on Thursday evening, May 3, when Miss Chipman and Mr. George Goodes gave their vocal and dramatic recital, assisted by Mr. Ernest Groom and Mr. Frank Griggs. The programme commenced with a recitation by Mr. George Goodes of Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice, Act i. sc. 3, in which the characters of Shylock, Bassanio, and Antonio were well defined by Mr. Goodes, who has a fine speaking voice and remarkably clear enunciation. Miss Kathleen Chipman, who was well received, sang "Pietà Signore," by Stradella, and Donizetti's "Convien Partir." Miss Chipman, who has a voice of good compass and rich quality, was heard to great advantage in these airs. She also sang Schubert's "Who is Sylvia?" with much charm, and gained great applause for Clay's "She wander'd down the mountain side," which Miss Chipman rendered in a particularly fine manner. Miss Chipman was also set down for Beethoven's "Ah! Perfido," "O Divine Redeemer" (with organ accompaniment), and Kjerulf's "My Heart and Lute." Other able recitations that were given by Mr. George Goodes included "Tittle-Tattle," by Mark Ambient, "The Parable of Nature," and R. Buchanan's "Ballad of Judas Iscariot"; and later on in the programme "Fra Giacomo" and Shakespeare's Henry IV., Part II. Act iii. sc. 2, in which the characters of Sir John Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, and Recruits appear. Mr. Ernest Groom displayed a fine and well-trained voice in Martin's "Plaisir d'Amour," and "Chanson de Route," by Puget. Two piano solos were given in admirable style by Mr. Frank Griggs, who chose Mendelssohn's Prelude in E Minor and Schumann's Canon in B Minor.

At Bow-street Police Court on Wednesday the Commissioner of Police was summoned to show cause why he should not deliver up to Messrs. Chappell and Co., and other music publishers, 9,300 copies of pirated music and ninety-three blocks from which such music was printed. The blocks and music formed part of the subject matter of the recent prosecution against Willetts (the "king of the pirates") and others for conspiracy to print and publish pirated music. Formal proof of the copyright having been given, Mr. Marsham made an order for the delivery of the blocks and music to the solicitors representing the respective claimants.

Tomps and Wells, in a new musical act, will shortly open in town. The former is a well-known comedian and instrumentalist, and the latter a brother to George Mozart.

Mr. T. Reed Pinaud has just returned to England after a most successful tour of eight months in Germany, Austria, Sweden, and Denmark. During his next extended tour Mr. Pinaud intends covering fresh ground, taking with him a larger répertoire.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

CROYDON EMPIRE PALACE.

A pleasant evening was spent on Friday last week at the Croydon Empire Palace of Varieties, when a number of local people and variety managers turned up to view the new establishment. Mr. Eustace H. Jay, the general-manager, received many of the visitors, and amongst others present were Mr. Walter Gibbons, Mr. Thos. G. Hales (the proprietor and freeholder), Mr. A. Lazarus, Mr. Charles Relf, Mr. Nelson Francis, and Mr. George Grimsdall.

The new Empire Palace has been erected on the site of the old National Hall and Palace of Varieties, North-end, Croydon. The building, a substantial affair of brick, stone, steel, and concrete, has been about six months in course of erection. The architect is Mr. W. G. Sprague, and, at a total expense approaching £30,000, the elaborate plans have been carried out by Mr. Walter Wallis, of Balham, general contractor, assisted by specialists in lighting, decoration, and upholstery. At the grand entrance in North-end has been erected at a height of 75ft. an ornamental tower of classic design, to be illuminated with powerful electric lights, and on which are allegorical and appropriate figures of "Music" and "Drama," with the dome surmounted with a figure of Mercury. The sculpture hereon was executed by Mr. Arrowsmith, of Clapham. From the doorway there are the tastefully-embellished corridor or passage and easy flights of stairs leading to the grand circle, boxes, and saloons.

The auditorium, which has a domed roof with sliding mechanism, is artistically decorated generally in the classic floral style of groups and festoons of blooms and foliage, in white, gold, and cream, the whole being remarkably effective. This splendid work has been carried out by Mr. De Jong, of Camden Town, who also produced the chaste allegorical group and the Croydon armorial bearings, in gold and colour, over the proscenium. Recurring to the interior, the ground is divided into rows of fauteuils, stalls, and pit stalls, all being upholstered in velvet and satin, in the best style, by Messrs. Waring, of Oxford-street, London, who, as well, have supplied the valuable carpets and tableau curtain. The gallery, designed to hold 800 people, is nicely and comfortably furnished; while the seats are so cleverly arranged that a full view of the stage and performers can easily be obtained from any part. The safety of the public has been well considered in regard to exits, and, although the building is absolutely fireproof, the floors being laid on concrete, extra precautions in the form of a fireproof curtain, iron doors, and numerous hydrants, have been taken. In addition to the foregoing, supplied by Messrs. Strode and Co., there are, by the same firm, the handsome electric light fittings and perfect heating and ventilating apparatus. The electric lighting machinery has been supplied and erected by that well-known firm of electrical engineers, Messrs. W. P. Theermann and Co., of Manchester. The seating for about 2,500 people was entrusted to Messrs. Lazarus and Co., of Great Eastern-street, London.

The stage, by Messrs. Lyons and Co., of St. Mary-axe, is completely fitted with, to the uninitiated, a complicated arrangement of gridiron, flies, floats, sprinklers, flats, traps, rollers, pulleys, and other incidental machinery for quickly changing and working what are technically known as the pictures. Mr. Francis H. Bull, of 4, Lower Bland-street, Great Dover-street, the well-known scenic artist, is the contractor for the scenery. In regard to the glazing, including the roof light of stained glass, that has been done in lead and ordinary glazing with pleasing effect by Messrs. Wootton and Co., of Croydon. The iron and steel work, the massive girders and stanchions, are by the celebrated firm of Messrs. Smith, Walker, and Co., constructional engineers, of Westminster. The construction of the whole has been carefully and vigilantly supervised by Mr. J. Moss, the clerk of the works.

For the future, given the first-class companies and aggregation of talent, as promised, and the genial Eustace H. Jay managing the whole, it may be safely predicted that the enterprise of the spirited proprietor will meet with full and ample reward. The comfort and convenience of the artists have been fully considered in regard to dressing-rooms, &c. The whole has been arranged by Mr. Thomas Gardiner Hales, the freeholder, in conjunction with Mr. Walter Gibbons, who, having so many variety theatres, is in an exceptional position to provide programmes of intrinsic merit.

A good send-off was given on the opening night (Tuesday), when the visitors testified in no stinted manner their appreciation of the comforts of the house. Mr. Jay had a cordial reception, and was complimented upon the generous entertainment provided. After "God Save the King" had been played by the capital orchestra, under the direction of Mr. A. Hully, the ball was opened by Miss Minnie Mace, whose artistic coon ditties and dances were much relished. Mr. Gilbert Girard won applause for his marvellous animal and instrumental imitations; Baker and Balfe's operatic xylophone turn received a well-deserved encore; Miss Mildred de Grey was charming in her clever and novel exhibition of bare-foot dancing; Mr. Billy Hobbs was first rate in coon song "Nobody" and nimble dance; Stanley and Greenop gave an interesting exhibition on banjos; the Aindow Sisters submitted a brilliant musical turn; Collins and Hawley, expert dancers, were unflagging; and a big hit was made by Ferguson and Mack in their grotesque acrobatic act The Dimple Sisters. The sketch Drummed Out was admirably staged and played by Mr. A. C. Lilly and company.

BOGUS MUSIC HALL AGENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA

Sir,—May I trespass upon your valuable space in connection with a matter which is undoubtedly of great importance to many of your readers? I refer to the so-called theatrical, music hall, or concert agent, who, under the pretence of obtaining engagements for aspirants to the stage, induced them, under promises of engagements, to part with money in advance, and without, in many cases, having the slightest chance of obtaining engagements for them.

My object in asking your powerful interest is to let it be known that an association called the Theatre, Variety, and Concert Agents' Association has been formed with the object of protecting the public against the practices referred to above. The Association is composed of all the well-known and established agents, and we are working in close co-operation with the London County Council for the purpose, not only of assisting them in discovering the bogus agent, but for the purpose of protecting artists against their practices. If, therefore, aspirants to the stage would make it their business before dealing with an agent to assure themselves that such agent is a member of this Association, they can, with most perfect safety, rely upon being dealt with in a proper and business-like manner. A list of the members of the Association can always be obtained from the Secretary, The Theatre, Variety, and Concert Agents' Association, 18, Fleet-street, E.C., who will at all times be only too pleased to answer any question or to give any information asked.—Yours faithfully,

GEORGE ASHTON,
President Theatre, Variety, and Concert Agents' Association.

LONDON COLISEUM.

Mr. Oswald Stoll, the managing-director, was on Tuesday appointed by the Chancery Court receiver and manager of the London Coliseum, Ltd., at the instance of the trustees for the debenture holders.

Mr. Eve, K.C., in moving for the appointment of Mr. Stoll, said that the matter was one of very great urgency. All the parties concerned were before the Court and consented to the application, which was the outcome of a resolution passed the day before.

The debenture issue was £115,000, and was secured under a trust deed of December, 1902, by a specific charge on the freehold and leasehold property of the company. The interest on the debentures had been paid, but several executions having been issued against the goods of the company, the principal money had become due and payable.

The Sheriff, counsel said, was actually in possession, but had not yet proceeded to sell. The company had no funds wherewith to pay out the executions, and it was not in a position to resist several actions that were pending.

Funds were also required to carry on the performances, which were being given daily, as there was no money to pay the salaries with. His clients, the plaintiff trustees, counsel continued, had to find the wages that fell due last week in order to prevent the house being closed. It was not disputed that the goodwill was a valuable one.

Mr. Oswald Stoll, whom it was proposed to appoint receiver and manager, had been managing-director since the incorporation of the company, and was well qualified to carry on the business. There was an affidavit of fitness to the effect that he was a fit and proper person in all respects to have control of the company's affairs, and there was also an affidavit by Mr. George Edwardes, of Daly's Theatre, as to his capacity for managing the business.

In these circumstances, counsel asked that Mr. Stoll, who held £50,000 debenture stock and a further mortgage, should be appointed with liberty to act at once, the plaintiff trustees undertaking to be answerable for the receipts until security had been given.

Mr. Eve also asked for the usual judgment in a debenture-holders' action.

Mr. Russell, for the company, assented to the proposal.

Mr. Justice Swinfen Eady granted the application, limiting Mr. Stoll's managership to three months, and entered the usual form of judgment in a debenture-holders' action.

The annual meeting was held at the Empire, Cardiff, on Tuesday, Mr. Oswald Stoll presiding.

The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said it was useless to dwell on the present position of the Coliseum; regrets were vain, and difficulties had to be made the best of. Every one concerned in the Coliseum had to meet a loss. After giving an account of the origin of the scheme for erecting music halls in the London districts, he said that he had come to the conclusion that the Coliseum was built a couple of years too soon. He wished to tell them that the result last year would probably have been £20,000 worse but for his organisation of the machinery of management. After criticising the London County Council in respect of the restricted licence granted, he said that, if the shareholders did not wish to find the money desired, then liquidation was inevitable. He suggested that a committee of investigation should be appointed, and he assured the shareholders that the directors courted the fullest inquiry.

Mr. Edward Nicholl said Mr. Stoll's explanation was not consoling to the ordinary shareholders, and he moved that the meeting be adjourned, and that a committee of investigation look into the books of the company. He had ascertained that Mr. Brukewich, one of the directors, had sold 100 shares. If the company were wound up, there would be sufficient to pay the debenture holders, Mr. Stoll his £40,000, and the other two directors their £10,000, which they had guaranteed as security. They wanted the statements in the prospectus thoroughly inquired into.

Mr. Brukewich stated that he had sold 100 ordinary shares and purchased 100 preference shares.

Mr. H. S. Medcalf seconded Mr. Nicholl's amendment, and complained that a lack of consideration had been shown in keeping the shareholders in the dark until the last moment.

Mr. H. J. Thomas, representing several shareholders, hoped that they would be able to devise some scheme to prevent the proposed winding-up.

Mr. Nicholl asked if the architect had been paid his commission on the excess of £67,000.

Mr. Stoll: No, sir.

Mr. Molineaux said that the directors had shown a singular want of attention to the interests of the shareholders in respect of the construction of the premises. He asked if Mr. Stoll had made a profit of £30,000 on the purchase of the site. Mr. Stoll replied that he had only made a paper profit in shares.

Mr. Nicholl asked if any register of shareholders had been sent to Somerset House, since January, 1905, and whether it had been purposely withheld so that the shareholders should not see what shares had been transferred.—The secretary replied that there was no obligation to forward the register of shareholders until within fourteen days after the annual meeting.—Mr. Nicholl: Well, has the annual meeting been purposely delayed?—The secretary: Absolutely and distinctly no.

Alderman P. W. Carey, Cardiff, one of the directors, said he had not sold a single share, and he had attended about twenty meetings in London without charging one penny for expenses.

Mr. Stoll stated that he had never received a penny in any shape or form, either by selling shares or for services rendered.

A shareholder suggested that Mr. Stoll should draw £100,000 from his private banking account to meet the present difficulties, and the chairman replied that when the committee of investigation went into the matter they would be astounded at what he had already done. Eventually the meeting was adjourned till May 10, and a committee of inspection appointed to investigate and report.

To commemorate Shakespeare week in Belfast, Mr. Sinclair Neill—the clever Shakespearean actor—and his dramatic students gave a reading of The Taming of the Shrew in Crown Chambers, Belfast, on Friday evening, the 27th ult. Mr. Neill's reading of Petruchio was marked by intellectual strength and subtlety, and he was spirited and entirely effective. Miss Mina F. Murphy was the vixenish Katharina to the life, acting with an intelligence that few could surpass. Mrs. J. R. Roberts was graceful and accomplished as Bianca, Mr. W. J. Rea acquitted himself ably as Lucentio, and Mr. J. D. Brannigan's rendering of Hortensio was no less successful. A débutante of much promise—Miss Lilias McBain—furnished a remarkably clever reading.

MISS KITTY RAYBURN essayed this week, with the greatest possible success, at the Royal Standard, a new song by Charles Wilmott and H. E. Pether, entitled "Come and make love to me."

MR. AND MRS. WILL MITCHAM (Miss Maud Ross) have just received the congratulations of hosts of friends on the completion of twenty years of married life.

DEEP sympathy must go out to Mr. Harry Clifford, who has just lost yet another brother—Arthur—from that terrible complaint consumption. This last bereavement makes no less than six deaths in a short space—mother, father, three brothers, and one sister, three having died during the last five months. Truly a sad record for one family.

CHAT WITH PAUL CINQUEVALLI.

(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

Without doubt at the present day the man who stands facile princeps as a juggler is Mr. Paul Cinquevalli. Yet it was not in this line of business that Mr. Cinquevalli first made a name in the world of entertainers; in fact, the very event which turned his attention to the art of juggling nearly terminated his career on this planet in any capacity at all. It was during his convalescence while recovering from a trapeze accident which nearly proved fatal that he began seriously to practise those marvellous feats with which he now astonishes and delights audiences in every part of the globe.

Born in Poland, Mr. Cinquevalli was educated in Berlin. So expert was he, even at a very early age, in gymnastic exercises, that he determined to join a circus troupe, and to that end ran away from school. After two years' hard work in Russia and Germany, his company had the good fortune to be commanded to appear before the Emperor William I. in Berlin. On that occasion he scored such a success that his future career seemed fixed and determined. But shortly afterwards, while doing a flying leap from a trapeze, without a guarding net beneath, his hands slipped on an unwiped bar, and he plunged into the arena beneath. For eight months he lay pretty well half-dead, and then began his practice of conjuring tricks, which, as all the world knows, he has continued up to the present time with such remarkable success.

and the enormous floral trophy presented to him on his opening night in New York.

"And now, I understand, Mr. Cinquevalli, you consider yourself a Britisher?"

"I don't merely consider that I'm a Britisher, but I really am. You see, I'm a naturalised Englishman. Why? do you ask. Well, I have been in practically every country in the world, and I've mixed with every people, and I've now made up my mind as to which is the best. I have a permament home in London, where I shall eventually retire."

"That won't happen just yet, I suppose?"

"I propose to retire from the stage in three years' time—to be precise, on June 29, 1909. That will be the eve of my fiftieth anniversary. You know, I tried to retire once before, about twelve years ago. I 'rested' for one year and ten months, but it wasn't a success. At the beginning of those twenty-two months I was in the habit of wearing a 17½in. collar; at the end of that period I only needed a 15in. collar. In fact, I shrunk terribly all round, and became an invalid. Then a doctor, after carefully diagnosing my case, told me to go back to the stage, and back I went. But I think I shall go for good this time. I was only thirty-four when I retired on the last occasion, and at fifty a man is better prepared to quit the boards provided he has made enough money."

"And how is your next three years made up?"

"I am here at the Hippodrome for eight weeks; then follows my usual Moss and Stoll tour up to October. I have most flattering offers to go to America, but having accepted engagements for the Continent next winter, I must try to cancel them in order to permit of my appearing in the States. If I succeed, I shall be in America until April, 1907, after which I shall return to London. And, before I forget, I would like you to say how much I appreciate the kindnesses I have received from British people in the United Kingdom and its Colonies."

There is one thing upon which Mr. Cinquevalli is to be highly congratulated, and that is the fact that through all the years he has retained the affection and esteem of the public. In his time he must have seen many jugglers come and many jugglers go. He, curiously enough, gains more applause juggling with three balls than another artist with ten. "Try, try, try again" must be the motto of a juggler, and some of those feats with which Cinquevalli has familiarised us have taken years to perfect. For instance, the balancing of the billiard balls on the cue cost a year and a half of hard work before Cinquevalli could keep the balls steady for two seconds, and it was eight years before he was absolute master of the trick.

"My greatest feat," remarked Cinquevalli, "is undoubtedly my billiard-ball feat, and it is one that has not been copied. Do you know, I would never dream of going on the stage without satisfying myself that I could do the balances. It is the last thing I do every night before I leave my dressing-room to make my appearance." This trick consists of balancing two billiard balls on the top of each other and resting on the butt end of a cue, the other end standing on another billiard ball resting on the chin.

"It is a funny thing, but nevertheless true, that I find my nerves far steadier in warm climates; and when I have had anything new of a very difficult nature in hand, I have left over practising it until I went abroad to one or other of the warm countries it has been my custom to visit. I have to practise a trick for months just to see if it is possible."

Physically, Cinquevalli is a splendidly proportioned man, and one of the most muscular men at ten and a half stone in the world. In appearance he is somewhat deceptive, for he does not show his muscles; but really he is extraordinarily strong, as he proves when playing with a 48lb. cannon ball. Catching this ball on the back between his shoulders is Cinquevalli's most dangerous feat, for if the ball should drop a couple of inches on either side it would smash his shoulder blade, while the same distance too high would go far towards breaking his neck.

Mr. Cinquevalli is a most pleasant companion for half-an-hour's chat, for, besides being the greatest of jugglers, he is a courteous and genial man of the world, who has seen and observed much in his travels, and has a fund of pleasant reminiscences. He speaks with ease and fluency nearly all the European tongues, and is a capable musician, playing the violin, piano, and other instruments.

AMUSEMENTS IN CAPE TOWN.

CAPE TOWN, APRIL 9.—OPERA HOUSE (Lessees, Messrs. B. F. Wheeler; Business-Manager for Mr. Leonard Rayne, Mr. Grant Fallowes).—On Wednesday, April 5, Mr. Leonard Rayne inaugurated his 1905 season at this palatial theatre, when he produced for the first time in South Africa the dramatic version of Hall Caine's novel, The Prodigal Son. Mr. Leonard Rayne as Magnus Stephenson carried out his task with his usual vigour of style; he is always virile in his impersonations, but the rugged force with which he invested the character of Magnus must be ranked as one of the most convincing studies we have seen out here. Mr. Frank Beresford once more proved himself an actor of no mean ability, ably portraying the cowardice and vacillating weakness of Oscar Stephensen; whilst Mr. G. Clifton Boyne and Mr. Burton Scymour were especially well cast as Stephen Magnusson and Oscar Neilsen respectively. Miss Gertrude Goddart's Helga Neilsen was a first-class piece of work. She depicted the fascinating, dissatisfied woman very cleverly. Miss Maud Stewart Drewry, who made her first appearance in Cape Town, invested the character of Thora Stephensen with infinite charm, scoring especially in the second act, where she accuses her sister of betraying her. An excellent performance was contributed by Miss Annie Leaf as Margaret Neilsen. Miss Freda Godfrey's Elin was a charming piece of natural acting, and she daintily sang a song entitled "Dear Land of the Northern Sea." Miss Ada Barton was admirable as Anna; and the smaller parts were satisfactorily filled. The scenic beauties of the piece excited admiration. A mountain pass in the interior of Iceland, with the sunlit plains beyond, was a genuine triumph for the scenic artist, Mr. Howard Glover. The piece played too long on the opening night; but the fine scenery, wonderful stage effects, and, more than all, the admirable way in which the play was acted, kept a large audience in their seats to close upon midnight. The incidental music was excellently handled by an efficient orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Charles Mercer. There were loud calls for the principals, who were vociferously applauded.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC STUDENTS.

The Royal Academy of Dramatic Students gave on Thursday afternoon the Hippolytus of Euripides, translated by Gilbert Murray, LL.D., the gentleman who has won laurels at the Court Theatre by his translations of the famous Greek author. The Hippolytus is not the most interesting example of Euripides, but it has been made celebrated by eminent performers, and it served to display in a favourable manner the abilities of the students, who were generally successful in their efforts. The action of the play takes place in front of the Royal Castle of Trozên, where the statues of Artemis on the right and Aphroditê on the left are seen, winning the oblations of the multitude. These statues were beautifully represented by Miss Rosa J. Williamson as Aphroditê, and Miss Vera Cockburn as Artemis; Mr. Cecil Pearson appeared as Theseus, King of Athens, with unquestionable success; and as Phædra, Miss Alice M. Holder acquitted herself charmingly. Mr. Patric Curwen represented Hippolytus effectively, and was much to be commended for his delivery of the lines. The old nurse of Phædra was sustained by Miss Esther Telling, whose dramatic gifts were conspicuous in the great scene where the nurse counsels the flight of the unhappy wife with her lover, Mr. Emile D'Oisly as a henchman; Mr. McNaughton Duncan as an old huntsman, and Miss Leveaux as the leader of the chorus were also entitled to praise; and the chorus of women admirably discharged their duties. The musical accompaniments were composed by Mr. Hubert Bath (Goring Thomas scholar). Miss Rosina Filippi being absent, Miss Magrath took her place as director. The plot of the play is simple. Phædra, the wife of the King, falls in love with Hippolytus, and is tempted to fly with him, but is restrained by the love of her children, the chorus, in accordance with the system of Greek dramas, commenting on the action of the principals. The tone of the play is therefore extremely sombre, and voices of the chorus being frequently heard in lamentations which sounded dismally enough, though the young ladies were quite equal to their task. The entire representation was most intelligent, and reflected great credit on the Academy.

AT the Tivoli, Glasgow, this week the strong card is the company directed by Mr. Sydney Bacon, in a piece called The Maniac, in which Mr. Melville Bickford impersonates the title-part. Other good turns include Jock Walker, a clever Scotch comedian; Little Barney, who seems to have drifted into the patriotic line; Left in Charge is a merry skit presented by Conway and Garland; the Tricky Trio of young ladies fascinate in an equal degree by smart songs and dances; and the Mozon and Blumenfeld's dogs complete the bill.

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—Your last week's report of the Waxworks, Dublin, refers to Gravetta and Pave. It should have been yours faithfully, BOSKO AND DILLON, Waxworks, Dublin, May 2, 1906.

CHAS. W. POOLE'S Myriorama has entered upon its second week at the Theatre Royal, Ryde, and packed houses have been the rule. This week extra tableaux are being shown, representing the Battle of Waterloo. An excellent variety company includes Kitty Woodford's canine circus—a clever troupe of dogs; Harry Stewart, a smart change artist; Daisy Graham's birds, who show evidences of careful training; Leonard and Mac, patter comedians; Ariel and Astarte, in a clever performance on the trapeze and horizontal bars; and Little Doretta, acrobatic dancer.

ASSOCIATION OF THEATRE, VARIETY, AND CONCERT AGENTS.

CHAT WITH MR. GEORGE ASHTON.

(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

One of the newest of the professional protection societies—if protection be the right word to use—bears the title of the Theatre, Variety, and Concert Agents' Association. Its president is Mr. George Ashton, who, probably more than anybody else, has striven to give to the business of agency work a dignity and a respect which for a long time it sadly lacked.

In the course of conversation with Mr. Ashton the other day, we were told how the Association was started. It appears that some of the agents found out that the London County Council in the Bill which they were preparing last year for the proper supervision of servants' registry offices, intended to include the dramatic and music hall agents. A meeting of the latter was called, and steps were at once taken to form an association to oppose the Bill if necessary. A considerable amount of correspondence passed between the L.C.C. and the Association, and Mr. Ashton headed a deputation to the Council on two occasions. The Association came to the conclusion that they would have to fight the proposed Bill, one clause in which provided that every theatre, music, and concert agent should be registered, that he should keep such books as the Council directed, and that his books and offices were to be under the supervision of the officers of the Council. Mr. Ashton and his colleagues thought that to be classed with the keepers of servants' registry offices was nothing less than an indignity. They appeared before a House of Commons' Committee appointed to consider the question, and the members of the Association were able to congratulate themselves on winning the day. The Bill was altered, so that all agents who do not take any registration or preliminary fees were exempt from the provisions of the Act. Since then the Council have welcomed the formation of the Association, for the two bodies have been able to work in co-operation. This means, of course, that the L.C.C. have been gracious enough to recognise the usefulness of the Society, whose members are not required to be registered at all.

Now, so far as the artists are concerned, there is an advantage in dealing with a member of the Association in that an artist can always be sure that he is dealing with a bona-fide agent, and one who does not expect or take preliminary fees directly or indirectly. Mr. Ashton assures us that all the best and most respectable agents have joined the Association. The Association has been able on more than one occasion to assist the L.C.C. in their efforts to prevent persons being imposed on by bogus agents. It was only a few days ago that they heard of a case of a so-called agent imposing on artists, and they at once brought the matter to the notice of the Council, who, in their turn, promptly set Scotland Yard upon the track of the persons. The result was that two men were arrested a few weeks ago. They had started an enterprise, which they called the Empire Agency, at 62, Strand. Another case came before the Association of an agent in the country, who had a printed letter which he sent to artists demanding £1 before he would undertake to do business for them. Mr. Ashton maintains that such a system is obtaining money under false pretences, and the Association cordially invites any artist who hears of an agent who requires a preliminary fee to communicate with the Secretary to the Association, at 18, Fleet-street, E.C. From this it will be seen that the Association lives not only for the protection of its members but also for the protection of artists and the public against fraudulent agents.

Mr. Ashton personally is a popular figure in theatrical and musical circles. He might not inaptly be called the "King's dramatic adviser." For the last twenty-eight years Mr. Ashton has been in personal attendance upon His Majesty at theatres and music halls. The King always sends for him when His Majesty wishes to see a play or visit a variety establishment.

"The King," says Mr. Ashton, "has been a great theatre-goer. I have known him go every night in one week. He very seldom, however, goes to a music hall. He is particularly fond of high-class music, and so far as the legitimate theatre is concerned, he prefers a good comedy better than anything else. The Queen, on the other hand, is very fond of drama.

"It was I who suggested that the late Dan Leno should go to Sandringham. That performance was the first His Majesty witnessed since coming to the throne. On that occasion the theatre was represented by Mr. Seymour Hicks and Miss Ellaline Terriss.

And now we get to hear who it is arranges the preliminaries of the performances "by command" at Windsor. Mr. Ashton is responsible for all the details—the printing of the programme, the building of the stage, the accommodation for the artists, their trains, &c., in fact, everything with the exception of the absolute performance itself.

Mr. Ashton started his dramatic and variety agency some two years ago. Last Christmas his firm secured the business of Nathan and Somers, then undergoing a dissolution of partnership. In purchasing the business Mr. Ashton was fortunate in securing Mr. Ben Nathan in the direction of that branch, and Mr. W. Scott Adacker as manager. A very important department of Mr. Ashton's Bond-street business is the supplying of concert and variety artists for private drawing-rooms in London.

MR. JOSH DIXON'S laughable song, "The Indian," by Robson and Hyde, which has been of late exciting the risible faculties of London Pavilion audiences, has been secured by the Charing Cross-road music publishing house.

VARIETY ARTISTS' FEDERATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—It would be scarcely necessary for me to inform your readers that I am delighted at the formation and existence of a real music hall artists' association, as many of them know perfectly well that I have been striving for over a quarter of a century to bring about that very thing. Who shall say now that my faith was not justified? We most of us hope and believe that the V.A.F. has come to stay, and that it will grow and prosper and increase in strength and usefulness. We need it, and we have got it, and the next thing is to help it on with all our might. In saying this I may cause some surprise by my next declaration of opinion, and that is, that what is needed within its ranks is a loyal, honest, and friendly opposition of the Parliamentary kind. Doubtless there are many who would say that adverse criticism is hardly the way to help an institution forward, but a little reflection and reference to the history of other institutions will convince them that the contrary is often the case, and that many blunders and causes of after regret may be avoided by frank and open discussion of events as they occur. That which is good and right will survive. Secrecy, suppression, and concealment are usually the tools of those who have only selfish ends to serve, and I am quite certain that there is no desire or intention in the minds of those who are engaged in piloting the V.A.F. to success of employing any such unworthy means. A provisional committee (it does not call itself a provisional committee, but it is) has been formed—or rather has formed itself—and considerable progress has been made. A large sum of money has been subscribed, over a thousand members enrolled, a newspaper started, offices and staff engaged, and a manager (or organising secretary) appointed. So far, so good. And now a few words of criticism of the movement up to the present will not be out of place. We may well take breath and reflect here.

Four music hall institutions—namely, the M.H.A.R.A., the International Artists' Lodge, the order of Water Rats, and that of the Terriers—all powerful and worthy in their way—had arrived at the very definite opinion that there were certain abuses in the music-hall business which called loudly for reform. The executive committee of each sent six delegates to a conference of all four bodies, who discussed very fully and temperately the subjects before them. But they did more. They exceeded their powers. The duty of delegates to a conference is to confer, and then to report to those who sent them the result of their conferring, the opinions collectively formed, and the plans suggested, leaving to those whom they represented the duty of putting those plans into execution should they deem it desirable to do so. The first thing they actually did, besides and in addition to debating, was to draft and send out an appeal to the music hall proprietors and managers concerning what is known as the "barring clause." It was a most respectful, temperate, and reasonable document, and I entirely agree with it, but I will venture to ask if it would have carried any less weight had it been issued with the full support and sanction of all the members of the aforementioned bodies duly sought and obtained. I think not. Emboldened by the notice taken of this movement they went further, and, at the conference table, formed and established what is undoubtedly a trades union for music-hall artists, gave it a name, collected funds, and made themselves into an executive committee to carry out the plans which they themselves, without consulting their principals, had decided upon. Does any sane man believe that if those delegates had acted as all delegates should, returned to those who sent them, placed results fully before them, explained plans, and told of promised support, that the result would not have been equally satisfactory? To suggest such a thing would be to imply that the delegates could not trust those who delegated them from amongst their members—which would be a very extraordinary state of things. There was no occasion here for a Nelson to put the telescope to his blind eye. No signals were against them. I, for one, believe that their principals—that is to say, the great majority of the members of the bodies who sent them—would have received the outcome of their deliberations with the greatest favour, and acted accordingly. But that does not do away with the fact that they established a very bad precedent, and I fervently hope that such irregular courses will be avoided for the future. If such acts became common, it would not be a matter of delegates not being able to trust their principals, but of the principals not being able to trust their delegates to confine their actions within due and proper limits, and then the whole fabric of government would fall like a house of cards. As it happens, no great harm has been done. It just happens that the principals (as far as we can judge) approve of the newly-formed institution and its objects, but no amount of approval of the result can justify the method by which it was achieved. The maxim, "Let all things be done decently and in order," applies quite as forcibly to our affairs as to anyone else's. I know human nature well enough to be perfectly prepared to find that my remarks will displease some who may be unable, or, worse, unwilling, to see and admit that my desires are wholly and heartily for the good of our new society. I have worked for it since it was started, and intend to keep on working for it. It should be a very great success, and it will not be my fault if it is not, but I have always held the opinion, and see no cause to depart from it now, that fair criticism of observed methods is the very best means of keeping those methods, if they be good, in a right course, as also of preventing the adoption of such as are not really of advantage to the cause in hand. If my opinion is held to be wrong, let it be exposed and controverted, but by all means let it be done right out in the open columns of the press. If it is right, let it be acted upon.—Yours truly,

CHARLES COBORN.

THE first annual banquet, concert, and ball of the Anglo-French Piscatorials took place last Saturday at the Cercle Français, Leicester-square, Mr. Alfred Abrahams, of the Coach and Horses, Wellington-street, being in the chair. The affair was a complete success. At the concert Mme. Charles Gordon made a great impression with her songs; Mme. Clara Dowle also sang well, after which Mr. Walter Norman and his daughter, Miss Daisy Howard, and Mr. Thomas Crook were also appreciated. After the dinner and concert dancing was carried on until the small hours of the morning.

MANY complaints having been received by the London music publishers that a big business was being done in the sale of pirated music in Portsmouth, two experienced agents (Mr. E. Briebach and Mr. John Abbott, both of Mr. David Day's staff) were sent down a few days since, and they were successful in tracing two wholesale depôts. Applications were made for two search warrants, and these were executed by the police and the agents, and thousands of illicit copies were seized. Applications for summonses have been made. The bigger haul was discovered in a house at Portsea, where it was taken care of until wanted. It was then taken to a barber's shop for distribution to the street sellers.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

A case involving points of considerable interest to roundabout proprietors and lessees of fair-grounds was adjudicated upon by the Richmond Borough Magistrates on Monday. Mr. George Beach secured a piece of vacant land on the Richmond side of Kew Bridge, admirably adapted for the purpose of holding a small pleasure fair. This was held during the Easter holidays, to the great delight of the thousands of holiday-makers who went to Kew. The fair, however, provoked the opposition of a few of the residents adjacent to the ground, and some remarks of a condemnatory character were made at the Easter Vestry of one of the Kew churches. This little local feeling spurred the authorities to take action against Mr. Beach. As every care had been taken in view of the possibility of prejudiced opposition from "goody-goody" people by only using soft music, and avoiding all noisy clamour on the ground, it was impossible to object to the fair as being either a source of annoyance or disturbance to the inhabitants. It was then discovered, under an old by-law passed in the year 1892, that action could be taken against Mr. Beach because he had not left a sufficient wide, free space around his machine—a beautiful and costly set of horses and ostriches—which the local authorities, to bring Mr. Beach within the penalty of their by-laws, designated as a whirligig. This, in substance, was the important point that engaged the attention of the magistrates, and although their decision was not challenged, it still remains a most important point, and one that—were this by-law in existence in other places—would need settlement.

Expert evidence was adduced to show that whirligigs were in use fifteen or twenty years ago, but they had been supplanted by the modern steam-driven roundabout, which was free from danger to the passing public, and that whilst the old whirligig had a swinging-out motion in addition to the whirling round of the machine-frame, there is no such whirling-out motion on the modern roundabout, which works entirely within its own frame.

Mr. T. Watson Wright, for the defendant (George Beach), endeavoured to show first that the by-law in itself was ultra vires, and contrary to the spirit of English law, inasmuch as it did not give any qualifications or show wherein there was any danger to public safety, and he stated that such a by-law, if proposed to-day, would not have the slightest chance of being sanctioned. His second contention was that even if the by-law was held by the magistrates to be good, that the machine exhibited by Mr. Beach was not a whirligig. He concluded a closely-reasoned argument on these two points by asking the Bench to take into consideration the unfortunate circumstance of the inability, through serious illness, of Mr. George Beach at the time of the alleged offence. He trusted that their decision would be based upon consideration of the fact that, at the time of the erection of the concerns on the fair-ground, the defendant was wholly unable to superintend or to provide for the carrying out of the by-laws.

In the end the magistrates decided that the by-law was a good one, and that, in their opinion, all roundabouts are whirligigs, that Mr. Beach had infringed the by-law, but they would only inflict the small penalty of 1s. and costs.

The fairs ahead for next week are:—Alnwick, Dudley, Heckmondwike, Braintree, Chester, Market Bosworth, Colne, Hereford, Soham, Swaffham, Beaconsfield, Farnham, Stamfordham, Stonehouse, Leintwardine, Clun, Spalding, Staines, Renfrew, Rothsay, Kilmarnoch, Penygroes, Brynmawr, Knighton, Monmouth, Abergavenny, Talgarth, Chelmsford, Chertsey, Haslemere, Haverhill, Hertford, Lambourne, Leicester, Long Sutton, Lowestoft, Lymington, Maidstone, Much Wenlock, Pembridge, Sturminster Newton, Stow-on-the-Wold, Wadebridge, Worsted, and Yaxley.

The Agricultural Shows and Cattle Fairs for May are as follows:—Macclesfield, Uttoxeter, Oakham, and Stamford on the 7th. Lampeter, Crawley, and Keighley on the 8th. Soham, Dunstable, Drogheda, Knaresborough, Swaffham, Dewsbury, and Preston on the 9th. Wisbeach, Burgh, Bourne, and Farnham on the 10th. Leicester, Stow-on-the-Wold, Maidstone, Chelmsford, Congleton, Bellingham, and Hertford on the 12th. Barnsley, Huddersfield, Market Weighton, Newark, and Ripon on the 14th. Ipswich on the 15th. Alston, Briston, Clones, Armagh, Ely, and Swindon on the 31st.

The fair at Alton (Hants) was entirely in the hands of the local showman, William Matthews, who provided roundabouts, side-shows, throwing games, and other novelties.

Bedford Fair was well maintained by the cinematograph theatre of Thurston and Sons, Ridley's variety show, Harry Hughes's military tournament, Thurston's roundabouts, and other machines by Messrs. Harris and Shaw. There were the usual attendant throng of fair-ground caterers, with minor novelties, throwing games, and stalls.

Mr. Alf. Ball, with his variety theatre and animated up-to-date photography, is doing excellent business at Barking. At the end of last week's performances he gave a series of shows to the school children of the town, and nearly a thousand children formed the queue waiting for their turn to enjoy the capital display of films provided by Mr. Ball.

Wm. Beach, with his fair-ground aggregation, maintained the fair at Heston this week, and is now taking, week by week, his annual round of small fairs in the Metropolitan district.

Mr. Tom Norman, with his new show, has been doing good business at the fair-ground, Old Ford.

At Astwood Bank, Herbert and Son's World's Fair roundabouts, park swings, shooting saloons, bottle battery, cokernut sheets, striker, &c., have been the attractions.

The following plays have been performed at Jenning's Alexander Theatre, Evesham:—The Village Vagabond, The Soldier's Oath, Aurora Floyd, The Female Detective, The Ticket-of-Leave-Man, Alone in the Pirates' Lair and Life Among the Hop-pickers.

At West Hartlepool, on the 21st ult., John Wm. Pearce and Joseph Wallace were charged with assaulting Joseph Beaumont, at the Market Yard. Defendants denied the offence. The assault arose out of a dispute at the cocoanut stall. Witness said Wallace struck and kicked both Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont. A fine of 10s. and costs each was imposed, the Mayor remarking that the Bench were determined to protect the tenants of the market. They paid licences, were respectable citizens, and had a right to be protected. Anyone brought in future on this charge would be severely dealt with. The Market Yard was not going to be the rendezvous of those who went to abuse the people in charge of the stands.

WHAT IS A WHIRLIGIG?

INTERESTING CASE AT RICHMOND.

At the Richmond Sessions House on Monday, April 30, the case of George Beach versus the Richmond Corporation came on for decision before Mr. F. G. Humphries (presiding), Mr. F. W. Dimbleby, and Colonel L. G. Powell. Beach was summoned under the local by-laws that he, being a person causing or suffering a whirligig driven by steam power to be used for hire on certain land, he did not cause such whirligig to be so placed that it had a free space around it on every side equal to its greatest height.

Mr. H. Sagar (deputy Town Clerk) prosecuted for the Corporation, and Mr. Watson Wright, of Leicester, solicitor for the Showmen and Vandwellers Protection Association, defended Beach, who, unfortunately, owing to serious illness, was unable to attend, and was represented by his wife.

In opening the case, Mr. Sagar said, that under Section 38 of the Public Health Amendment Act the Richmond Corporation, in the year 1892, prepared and passed by-laws which were approved by the Local Government Board. One was to the effect that no one should cause or suffer any whirligig or swing driven by steam power to be let or used for hire, except it comply with the following regulation:—"That every whirligig or swing shall be placed in a free space equal to its greatest height." The penalty was £5, with other penalties, for every day during which the offence continued. He produced a copy of the by-laws. He briefly narrated the facts of the case, and said that the by-law did not say where the whirligig should be, and it therefore applied to public as well as private land. A copy of the by-laws was given to Mrs. Beach (Mr. Beach was ill), who was acting as her husband's agent. He contended that he only had to prove the facts in order to secure a conviction.

John Henry Brierley, borough surveyor, said that he visited the land, which was situated in what was known as Bush's-road, near Kew Bridge. He saw Mrs. Beach and other representatives, and Mr. Shepherd. The ground was at the back of the King's Arms, and on it were swings and a roundabout. There was a rigth-of-way through Bush-road, though it was not a public road. On April 21 he measured the open space around the roundabout. The greatest height of the latter was 20ft.. The edge of it was within 6½ft. of the corner of a shooting range, 11ft. from the steps of a caravan, 13½ft. from a harness stand, and 16ft. 10in. from the fence. The measurements were made from the outer edge of the platforms of the roundabout.

Cross-examined: The sources of danger due to the space not being observed was people crowding together near the machine, and in case a person fell off the horses. He thought a person might fall off and strike the corner of the shooting range. It was absolutely necessary that there should be a clear space. The object of the by-law was to provide for the public safety.

Mr. Watson Wright: Will you define what is a whirligig?

Witness: No.

By Mr. Sagar: He understood a roundabout to be a whirligig. There was no clause in the by-law defining what a whirligig was.

By Mr. Dimbleby: Sometimes people jumped off the roundabouts before they stopped running.

Alfred Fisher, foreman in the employ of the Richmond Corporation, said that he visited the land on the 11th, and saw there a whirligig. It was part of his duty to inspect those things and see that they complied with the by-laws. He saw Mrs. Beach, and served her with a copy of the by-laws, which he read to her. He spoke to her again, and told her that she was not complying with the by-laws, but they continued to erect and use the whirligig. He confirmed the measurements made by the borough surveyor.

Cross-examined: He saw Mr. Beach, who was ill in bed, and he told him that he did not know what action would be taken. He did not say that a summons would not be issued this time.

George Taylor, sub-foreman in the employ of the Richmond Corporation, gave corroborative evidence. He also said that he rode on the whirligig during the Easter holidays.

Mr. Watson Wright pointed out that, under the Public Health Act, no common informer could lay information leading to a summons, that the authority to complain must be the Sanitary Authority, and that the prosecutor must be an official of that authority, armed for this purpose with a specific resolution of the Sanitary Committee, and that that resolution ought to be in evidence before them.

In the second place, he contended that the by-law was ultra vires, repugnant to the general law of the land, and repugnant to the provisions of the Public Health Act. The by-law itself contained no word of qualification, such, for instance, as "the public safety." It did not seek impartially to restrict trade or regulate it, but totally prohibited the exercise of the business of steam-driven machines.

He strongly contended that under the Local Government Act, 1888, and the Municipal Corporation Act of 1882, in framing a by-law it should contain qualifying words, as for example: "Danger to residents or passengers or as being a cause of annoyance to the residents in its immediate vicinity," his contention was that the by-law was bad, and he felt sure that if the Association for which he was solicitor had known of the proposal to pass such a by-law they would have opposed it, and he was confident that on these grounds it would not have been passed.

The by-law had been confirmed by the Local Government Board, but the mere fact of confirmation did not make it a good by-law.

Mr. Dimbleby said that he agreed that confirmation did not necessarily make it a good by-law, but he would like to point out that the proceedings were being taken under the Public Health Act, and not under the other Acts mentioned.

Mr. Watson Wright urged that there should be words of qualification.

Mr. Dimbleby: Do you mean that a by-law cannot be made authorising restrictions unless mention is made of those restrictions in the Act itself?

Mr. Watson Wright: Yes, sir. Continuing, he said that there was not one word in the summons mentioning that the offence was to the danger of the public. The by-law was bad, and the summons at any rate required amendment. Then the machine, the roundabout, was not a whirligig. He believed there were none now. Messrs. Savage and Co., of King's Lynn, who were the makers of all those sort of machines, had not made one for fifteen years. A whirligig was a machine with boats attached by rods which flew out by centrifugal force as it revolved. There was a danger of people being struck by those. If the Bench decided against him on the points raised, he would like to say that at the most Mrs. Beach had committed a technical offence, and if the summons was dismissed on payment of costs, there would be no objection. Those people would not do anything other than comply with the reasonable requirements of the authorities in the future, for they had no desire to fly in the face of the authorities. The machine cost nearly £2,000, and they had their living to get.

The Reverend Thomas Horne said that for the past sixteen years he had been Hon. Chaplain to the Showmen's Guild, a society which included the great majority of the travelling showmen and roundabout proprietors of the United Kingdom, he claimed to be an expert on the question of by-laws affecting the show business, as he had codified the whole body of existing by-laws in counties, boroughs, and cities.

This he had done in order that the showmen might be able to understand the conditions under which their business might be carried on.

In order to accomplish this he had been in correspondence with the officials of all public bodies, and he gave it as his opinion that in only one or two more instances did such a by-law as the Richmond one exist.

In connection with his work as Chaplain to the Guild he had attended all the large fairs in the Kingdom. The machine owned by Mr. Beach was not a whirligig but a set of steam galloping horses, quite a different machine from a whirligig.

A whirligig was one with cars or boats which as it went round swung out from the frame; Mr. Beach's machine was self-contained within the frame, and whilst a whirligig might possibly be dangerous, a set of steam galloping horses was entirely free from danger.

Although he had been for sixteen years past a visitor to the great fair grounds of England he had not seen a whirligig proper during the past ten years.

As an expert he desired to say that the roundabout mentioned in the case was not a whirligig as technically understood on the road amongst the show people.

Wm. Beach, brother of the defendant, and a large proporietor of roundabouts and fairground novelties, said that "there were different kinds of roundabouts, such as switchbacks, galloping and jumping horses, and Venetian gondolas. The machine owned by his brother was a set of galloping horses. It was surrounded by a fixed frame and that people could come up to three inches of the frame without any danger."

Mr. Alfred Ball, proprietor of the Bioscope Exhibition, said that he had travelled as a showman all his life, that he was well acquainted with all kinds of roundabout machines, and that the machine in question was not a whirligig. He knew what a whirligig was, and to his knowledge there were but one or two still in existence, and certainly not one in the metropolitan district.

"A whirligig was a machine that swung out, and the swifter the machine was run, the greater the outward swing of the cars containing the passengers. That kind of machine was a whirligig."

In reply to the Bench, Mr. Sagar said that instructions for the proceedings were received from the Highways Committee, who had such power delegated to them by the Town Council. It had not been hitherto required for the authority to produce evidence at that Court.

The Clerk to the Magistrates said that such authority was required by the Statute and ought to have been before the Court.

Mr. Sagar replied that if it was necessary to produce it he would have to ask for an adjournment.

Mr. Watson Wright, on behalf of his client, waived the point and said that they would rather the case was judged by the Bench upon its merits without raising the point in question.

The Magistrates retired to consider their decision. On returning, the Chairman said that they had dealt with the points raised, and they held that the proceedings had been properly instituted by the local authority; that the by-law was good; and that a roundabout was a whirligig within the maning of the by-law. They understood that the defendant Beach would undertake in future to conform with the by-laws, and if that were so, the penalty would be 1s., and the costs of the court.

Mr. Watson Wright said his client would undertake to meet the requirements of the by-laws in future.

The Alexandra Hippodrome visited Bangor on Tuesday, and had crowded audiences afternoon and evening. Diabelo's sensational cycling acts formed attractive features in a good all-round programme.

The funeral of Katherine Studt, who died after a long and painful illness from cancer, took place at Cardiff Cemetery on Saturday. The remains were interred in the family vault, in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends. In addition to the various members of the families of John, Henry, and Jacob Studt, the following relatives and friends attended the ceremony: Mr. H. Broxup (husband), London; Mr. and Mrs. C. Broxup (son), London; Mrs. H. Wools (sister), London; Mr. W. Haggar, Mr. H. Scard, Mr. James Dooner, Mr. Richard Dooner, Miss Dooner, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Butlin, Mr. T. Butlin, Mr. James Day, Mr. Danter (representing Mrs. W. Danter), Mr. John Johnson (Victoria Theatre, Tredegar), Mrs. Evans (Pontypridd), Mr. Gibson (representing the Treharne family, Pontypridd), Mr. W. Lloyd (Cardiff), Mr. C. W. Edwards (Cardiff), Mr. Theo Edwards (Cardiff), Mr. Williams (Abergavenny), Mrs. Marise (Whitchurch), Mr. and Mrs. Jones. Handsome floral tributes, in addition to those from the family, came from the Dooner family, Mr. W. Haggar, Mr. H. Scard, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Butlin, Mrs. Eliza Baker, Mr. James Day, Messrs. W. C. and S. Hancock (two wreaths), Mr. L. W. Birchley, Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Marisco, Letters of condolence were received from friends not able to attend, including Mr. and Mrs. P. Collins and son, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hastings, and Mr. John Lloyd.

The Studt family beg to thank all friends who were present, and also those unable to be there for the expressions of sympathy extended to them in their bereavement.

At Feckenham were Mr. C. Herbert, with roundabouts, park swings, cokernut gardens, &c.; and Mr. E. Herbert's shooting saloons, bottle battery, and Mollies and striker.

Radford Feast was supplied by Mr. Scarrott's amusements and Sorrell's toy bazaar.

Messrs. Herbert's World's Fair is doing splendid business at Eastern Hill, Astwood Bank.

At Tilney's Fair Ground, Abertillery, Mr. W. Hagger's Royal Electric Bioscope still continues to draw crowds nightly, the spacious building being filled to overflowing at each show. The pictures are up to date, and well worth seeing.

Dear Sir,—Can I ask your assistance by opening a subscription list in the columns of The Era on behalf of the widow and children of the late John du Humphries, whose sudden and tragic death at Merthyr Tydfil you so ably reported. Humphries had a wide circle of friends—I may say scarcely any enemies—and was always a ready supporter to anything benefiting his fellow travellers, and a ready giver to any deserving case.

This case is well worthy your consideration, as the widow and children are left totally unprovided for; but with a little assistance the home could be kept together and made self-supporting. The societies to which he belonged have agreed to assist, and have promises from many of his and my own friends to subscribe. If you will kindly open a subscription through The Era I will send you a first list of subscriptions.—I am, dear sir, yours truly, Arthur Reeves.

We gladly comply with Mr. Reeves' request, and strongly commend this thoroughly deserving case to the members of the circus and show profession, and, indeed, the wider circle of his friends in the variety and theatrical world. We have taken pains to satisfy ourselves of the necessity of the case, and hope that an immediate and generous response will follow Mr. Reeves' appeal. Subscriptions sent direct to The Era office may be made payable to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, and will be duly acknowledged.

Bishampton Fête will take place on Monday, July 16.

STORIES OF SHOWMAN LIFE.

By the Rev. T. Horne, Hon. Chaplain to the Showman's Guild.

(Copyright.)

"THE BOMB-SHELL MYSTERY."

Probably no profession in the world is as much subject to the invasion of outsiders as the business of the fair-ground.

This is a source of strength and vitality in most instances, but from time to time it is a source of weakness and misapprehension.

The whole body of showmen are brought under suspicion and public disfavour by the misdoing of someone who, because he has exhibited a novelty for a few weeks or months, claims to be a showman, or because, under the stress of apparent poverty, a man has become for a time attached to a travelling show, he has been dubbed a showman.

One of the strangest mysteries of the road of this character occurred some eighteen years ago, and for a long time it remained an almost unfathomable mystery.

By the death-bed confession of the principal actor in the mysterious crime the truth came to light, some half-dozen years ago.

Piecing together the story as succinctly as possible, it reads as follows:

Blackburn Easter Fair had for its principal novelty Vedrini's phantascope, a concern that for many years held a high position in the big fair-grounds of the country.

It was a beautiful show, both outside and in, and Vedrini travelled a good dramatic company to perform both on the parade at the front and to introduce the ghost on the stage.

Amongst Vedrini's clever people taking part in the show were two compatriots of his from sunny Italy, Phillipi and Eleonora Danzini.

They were remarkably clever in pierrot and pierrette parts, and as pantomimists could have held their own with the very best on any stage in the world.

Whilst the show was building up it was noticed that Danzini himself betrayed considerable alarm and agitation at the evident observation bestowed upon him by a little knot of Italians who were apparently idling about the fair-ground with no other motive than that of the general crowd—to see the shows building up.

Probably Danzini's agitation would have passed unnoticed but that throwing down the pole he was handling so provoked Vedrini that he roundly rebuked him in florid Italian. This flow of epithets at once fixed the attention of the Italian onlookers upon both Vedrini and the agitated Danzini.

These details, insignificant in themselves, were the only clue of any value in the many after attempts to elucidate the mystery with which our story is concerned.

It was the second day of the fair, and the ghost illusion at Vedrini's included a scene in which both the Danzinis appeared, Philipi personating a ghostly pierrot in the oven beneath the stage, and his wife, Eleonora, as pierrette directly on the stage.

At the moment when the ghostly pierrot is thrown upon the stage there came from somewhere in the audience a heavy missile, thrown directly at the ghost.

As soon as the missile struck the sheet of plate glass it was deflected into the well beneath, and a great crack across the face of the glass betrayed the force of the blow; but that was not all. From the oven beneath there came a scream of agony, and Danzini, the pierrot, rose from the well and faced the audience, shouting in his terror, "Fly for your lives! It is death—it is death!"

Before the audience could recover from the horror and surprise of Danzini's words there was a terrific explosion, the stage rocked, and then subsided under the force of the terrific shock. The sheet of plate glass, by a miracle, still remained, cracked though it was, in its frame, and although there was a great deal of crushing and a considerable number of people received serious bruisings and all suffered from the terrible fright, remarkably few people were injured.

In the well beneath the stage terrible havoc occurred; Danzini and the operator were frightfully injured by the bomb which had been thrown by some miscreant in the audience.

Immediately both men were taken to the hospital; both were too injured for speech, and poor Madame Danzini was hysterical to so great an extent that she could give no connected account of her own terrible experiences.

The police made careful investigation, but beyond the fragments of the shattered bomb-shell and the wreckage the terrible engine of death caused, there was nothing for them to go upon.

Vedrini, who should have remembered the incident of Danzini's agitation at the time of building up the show, either did not remember it, or thought it of no moment for police inquiries.

Most of the showmen on the ground grew suspicious of Vedrini on account of his reluctance to interest himself very much in the matter.

When taken to task for this want of interest, he merely shrugged his shoulders and said, "What would you? I cannot tell why it was done; it may be jealousy or it may be political revenge. Danzini, like many of my countrymen, may be a member of a secret society, and so, for my own part, whatever the police may do, I shall take no steps. Besides, the first loss will be the least loss. I would sooner pay for a new stage fit-up than have to lose my business fixtures during the next fortnight. It is altogether a mystery to me; and though I am sorry for Danzini, and hope he will soon be better, I cannot afford to keep my show packed away in order to look after his concerns."

This was considered very callous by his brother showmen, and their unanimous verdict was that that sort of thing might be thought right on the Continent, but it was not the right thing amongst British showmen.

It was quite four months before Danzini was well enough to leave the hospital, and then he was a mere wreck of his former self. In the disfigured and crippled Danzini that left the hospital no one would have recognised the bright and sprightly pierrot of Vedrini's phantascope.

The terrible strain of anxiety and grief had also effected a marked change in Madame Danzini, no longer the charming and beautiful Italian dancer and pierrette, but a haggard, grief-worn and tragic woman.

They found their way back to Vedrini's, and, to his credit, it must be admitted their old master found them employment about the show.

The police, however, were completely baffled in their efforts to trace the author of this dastardly outrage, and it must be confessed that the greatest sufferer, Danzini, gave them no assistance or encouragement. All that he would say was, "It is a terrible blunder, gentlemen. I had no enemy in the world; I was mistaken for someone else, possibly a political enemy of the Nihilists or the Amalfi; but there, I know not. It is a mystery, and I have to suffer for someone else's sin."

The police, however, had their doubts, and for many months Vedrini's show was watched in every town wherein it was located; but all to no purpose, and so ultimately the bomb explosion at the ghost show was relegated to the catalogue of unsolved mysteries.

For many years there was a very good pitch for showmen to winter upon at New Islington, Ancoats, Manchester, and there, two years after the outrage at Blackburn Fair, Vedrini's phantascope took up its quarters between Christmas and Easter.

A little way from the show-ground lies the Italian quarter—Bloom-street—where in its numerous side street and alleys a great number of Italians live.

Padrone Villimimo kept a large lodging-house, and sent out a considerable number of organs in charge of his lodgers day by day. Here in the large kitchen every evening, after their day's work, a score or more of Italian men and women might be found.

The quick and vivacious temperament of the Italian nature found full expression in merry song and in the friendly chatter of the groups into which the Padrone's lodgers divided themselves.

Upon an evening that the Padrone's lodgers will ever remember a frightful crime took place. How the quarrel originated no one ever knew, but there it was—red murder full and terrible, and the work of an instant.

The victim fell prone upon the ground weltering in his blood, and the murderer with the reeking poignard in his hand, was in the strong grasp of two of the lodgers. Women screamed in their terror, and the Padrone, in stern tones, issuing his command—

"Hold the villain securely, go for the police, go for a doctor!" Then, whilst men hurried off in obedience to his behests, Villimimo knelt down, carefully feeling the heart of the stricken man,

He looked up, and gazing round on the affrighted people, said—"He is dead."

Looking at the murderer, he said—"Wretched man, why did you do this?"

The murderer's answer came hissing through his teeth—

"It was a life for a life! He knew why I killed him, but to you and to the world it shall never be known."

By this time the police arrived upon the scene, and the murderer was taken to the nearest police-station; and though subjected to the keenest interrogations of the police-sergeant, absolutely refused to give any clue whatever to his identity.

The Manchester papers, of course, gave very graphic accounts of the terrible murder in the Italian quarter, and broadly hinted at a political solution of the mystery surrounding the crime.

This was much intensified by the discovery made by the police that their prisoner was a female.

This discovery only increased their difficulties, and created in the public mind a widespread sentiment of sympathy for the criminal, the general assumption of the public being that the mysterious woman was impelled by some strong motive of personal injury.

Again the police were baffled—no clue as to the motive for the crime and no evidence as to the identity of the criminal were forthcoming.

From some mysterious source ample funds flowed in to provide the very best counsel for her, and the trial was famous for the brilliant speech made in her defence, and for the compassionate summing up of the learned Judge.

The verdict was "Guilty," but was accompanied by a strong recommendation to mercy, the jury having serious doubts as to the sanity of the condemned woman.

The recommendation to mercy was followed in due course by the clemency of the Crown, and the unknown woman was sent into confinement during Her Majesty's pleasure.

* * * *

Twelve years after the Manchester tragedy a group of three were seen waiting at the gates of one of our female convict prisons, awaiting the coming out of someone whose time of durance had expired.

The three waiting men were Danzini, Vedrini, and the aged Padrone Villimimo.

When the great doors were opened there appeared just one woman, who was seen shaking hands with a female warder and expressing her thanks for the many acts of kindness she had received during her ten years' incarceration.

When the doors swung to behind her she stood for a moment perplexed and dazed, and then recognising the friends waiting to receive her, she rushed forward crying—"Phillipi, my husband, and you, my friends," and then in an instant she was in her husband's arms feeling the warmth and joy of his tender pity, and presently she was shaking hands with the Italian showman and the lodging-house keeper.

And now the secret is out, the avenger of the dastardly outrage and political crime at Blackburn Fair was Eleonora Danzini, the wife of the man who suffered so terribly from the explosion of the bomb, but the true inwardness of the motives prompting the crime only became known some years after.

It was the confession of an Italian, a political spy in the pay of the Government, and in substance it was, that he, in order to justify his continued employment, had invented a story of secret political activity in which he had involved perfectly innocent people like the Danzinis and Vedrini, the showman.

The consummate villainy of the man was shown in the way in which he had played off one political society against another, and for the purpose of proving his usefulness as a political agent had incited individuals to commit crimes for so-called political purposes.

The bomb outrage in the ghost show at Blackburn Fair was one of the devilish schemes of his invention.

With all the fire of her Southern nature Eleonora Danzini determined to be revenged on the man who had wrecked her happiness and nearly killed her husband.

How she got on the track of the villain and ultimately traced him to the Padrone's lodging in Manchester she never divulged, but doubtless in this matter she received from her compatriots considerable assistance.

Shortly after her release Vedrini's show passed over to France, and with it went the Danzinis, the sad sufferers from that most awful pest of human society, the "agent provocateur."

The May Day Fair at Stockport attracted an unusually large crowd of big concerns. These included Captain Tom Payne's bioscope, Gal. Hague's assault-at-arms, Gibson's temple of mystery, and Haydon's second experts; W. Shaw's fine art gallery completed the show list. J. Hibbert and Sons, the local firm, contributed a set of motor-cars and a farmyard set, with ranges of swings and other novelties. John Collins exhibited two machines, motor-cars and steam yachts; Harrison with slipping the slope and highfliers. Winchester ranges and rifle saloons were provided by Wild, Fletcher, and Jewell. There were avenues of minor novelties, in all occupying 520ft. frontage, the principal caterers being Deekes, Beckett, Smith, Ingham, Turner, Fletcher, Jewell, Chaplin, Beckett, Cordwell, and Lynch.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, APRIL 4.—Charley's Aunt has just been revived at the Manhattan Theatre. It was first produced at this house thirteen years ago, and Mr. Etienne Girardot made the hit of a lifetime as Lord Fancourt Babberley. He is playing his original part in the revival, and sending the audience into convulsions of laughter, just as he did in days gone by.

"BEDFORD'S HOPE," a play written by Lincoln J. Carter, has scored a sensational success at several of the "popular price" houses in this vicinity. It tells a story of life in a Montana mining camp, where William Bedford's "Old Pard" mine has lost its "pay streak," and the miners are working day and night to discover the vein again, not only to save the mine, but also its owner, who is in financial difficulties. Their efforts are ultimately successful, and everyone is made wealthy and happy except the villain, Colonel Hooker, who has plotted in vain to obtain possession of the mine, and ruin its owner. The sensational feature of the play is a realistic race between an auto. and an express train carrying rival parties to an auction sale of the "Old Pard" stock, information having been received that the "pay streak" has been discovered. The automobile wins, the audience being worked up to a high pitch of excitement.

"MR. HOPKINSON" has moved from the Savoy to the Lew Fields Theatre, which has just been leased by Mr. James K. Hackett, who has long desired to become the manager of a New York theatre. Mr. Hackett, in conjunction with Mr. Frank Curzon, will produce farces and comedies at his theatre, which will probably be renamed. In the meantime, Mr. Hopkinson is expected to run for several months in its new quarters.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN is to have two new theatres in or near Broadway, and according to current report they will be named after Mr. John Drew and Miss Maude Adams.

MR. DE WOLF HOPPER, in Happyland, is the reigning attraction at the Casino. In this comic opera, which is far superior to the average musical play submitted to Broadway playgoers, Mr. Reginald De Koven, the composer, has done some of his best work, and the libretto, by the late Frederic Ranken, is equally praiseworthy. As King Ecstaticus Mr. Hopper is exceedingly droll and diverting, and is ably assisted by Miss Marguerite Clarke, a petite comedienne, who is dainty and refined, and a sweet singer, besides being remarkably pretty.

MISS VESTA VICTORIA has been appearing with great success at the local music halls under the management of Mr. Percy G. Williams, and her songs have delighted large audiences. The Country Girl" and "Waiting at the Church" won immediate popularity, but a certain catchy refrain—inseparably associated with the name of Vesta Victoria, and which pervaded New York during her previous visit to this city—was not forgotten by any means, and "Daddy wouldn't buy me a bow-wow" was sung in response to persistent demands, and received with enthusiastic approval.

FRED KARNO'S London pantomime company in A Night in an English Music Hall have fulfilled engagements recently at the principal music halls in New York and Brooklyn, and their success has been most emphatic.

EDWARD J. MORGAN, an actor of English birth, who was very popular in America, died very suddenly in New York on the 10th ult. He was alone in his room at the Belleclaire Hotel when an attack of vertigo caused him to fall to the floor face downwards, and, being too weak to rise, he was suffocated.

NEW YORK, APRIL 18.—The Social Whirl, a musical comedy, in two acts, produced by the Messrs. Shubert at the Casino on the 7th inst., met with a very favourable reception, and is likely to prove an excellent summer attraction, the Casino being the one theatre on Broadway that is never expected to close during the hot weather. Messrs. Charles Doty and Joseph Herbert wrote the book, and Mr. Gustav Kerker composed the music of this new offering, which was staged in an admirable manner by Mr. R. H. Burnside, and the result of their joint efforts is a typical Casino "show" that is quite in accord with popular taste. For its title the piece has what is supposed to be the name of a racy society journal, the idea having been suggested by a recent scandal in which a local publication of this description was involved. The journal in question has published a paragraph about a certain gentleman who has taken a trip in a motor-car with a "Broadway favourite." The gentleman's initials are "J. E.," and the complications that create all the fun are caused by the fact that four individuals more or less acquainted with one another have names beginning with the same letters. The representative of the Whirl obtains his information from the proprietress of a fashionable manicure parlour, and this place is the scene of the first act, the exterior of a country club house being reproduced with rich pictorial effect in the second act.

Messrs. Charles Ross, Joseph Coyne, and Frederick Bond are the principal funmakers, and to their hearty co-operation the success of the piece is largely due. A very entertaining member of the company is Miss Maude Raymond, who sings an amusing song about "Bill Simmons," a coloured gentleman who had to dance whenever he heard a band. Miss Adele Ritchie, as Violet Dare, the "Broadway favourite," acted the part with her usual vivacity and savoir-faire. Miss Mabel Fenton distinguished herself as a society leader; Miss Ada Lewis was capital as a "tough" soubrette from the West; and Miss Blanche Deyo's dancing won well-deserved applause.

"IT'S ALL YOUR FAULT," a farce in three acts, by Edgar Selwyn, was well received at the Savoy Theatre on the 2nd inst. Howard Beasley, in order to keep the allowance which he receives from a rich uncle, invents an imaginary son and gives him the same name as the uncle, Caxton Coulter. The deception is kept up for several years, until Mr. Coulter pays a visit to his nephew, having decided to take his namesake to live with him. Beasley's friend, Jack Dobbins, reluctantly agrees to find a boy, and pretend to be his tutor. A precocious youngster named Archibald escapes from an institution and climbs into Dobbins's room by the window. When the rich uncle arrives with Mrs. Coulter and their daughter Winifred, the boy suddenly emerges from his hiding-place, and in desperation Dobbins introduces him as Beasley's son; much to the surprise of Beasley's wife, who has not been told of the deception. Dobbins and his supposed pupil are installed in Mr. Coulter's home, where Dobbins lays siege to Winifred's heart and makes himself quite at home in the wine cellar. In the complications that ensue, Messrs. Beasley, Dobbins, and Coulter are each accused of being Archibald's father, which causes no end of jealousy and bad feeling. It is ultimately discovered that the boy is the son of an individual named Bill Stubbs, who turns up at the end to be forgiven. Before this happens Archibald calmly accepts each new father with a proper display of affection and an entire absence of emotion. The hit of the performance was made by Master Pincus Lekosky, a fat-faced youngster with an amusing dialect and unlimited assurance, who impersonated the boy Archibald. Mr. Herbert Carr played the uncle, Caxton Coulter, with considerable humour, and made a decided hit. Mr. Edgar Selwyn's Howard Beasley was a clever characterisation, and Mr. Herbert Sleath, as Jack Dobbins, upheld preposterous incidents and situations with an aplomb that was most convincing. Miss Louise Closser, Miss Maud Hosford, and Miss Carolyn Lee played prominent parts well.

"THE GREATER LOVE," a four-act play, written by Mrs. Ivy Ashton Root, deals with some of the most interesting episodes in the life of the great composer Mozart. The play has won a fair measure of success at the Madison-square Theatre. The scenes are laid in Vienna and Prague during the period in which Don Giovanni and The Magic Flute were composed and Mozart's last requiem was finished. Some of the characters introduced in the play are Aloysia Weber, in whose voice the composer was greatly interested; Constanz Weber, who afterwards became his wife; Herr Schikaneder, Mozart's enemy, the manager for whom he wrote The Magic Flute, and who subsequently robbed him of his royalties; Signor Bondini, manager of the theatre at Prague, who retrieved his fortunes by producing Don Giovanni; Franz Sussmayer, Mozart's pupil and staunch friend; and Albert Lange, the actor who became the husband of Aloysia Weber. The final scene of the play shows Mozart surrounded by his wife and friends, who join in singing the requiem, this being a reproduction of Munkacsy's painting, "The Last Moments of Mozart." The play was extremely interesting. Mr. Howard Kyle gave an intelligent, sympathetic, and highly artistic embodiment of the great composer, and the performance was creditable to all concerned.

MESSRS. SHUBERT BROTHERS, the leaders of the "independent" movement in America, have obtained control of a large number of theatres during the last ten months, and have formed a circuit of fifty playhouses in the principal cities. Several prominent players have lately deserted the "syndicate" managers and signed contracts to appear under the direction of the Shuberts.

MR. TONY PASTOR completed his forty-first year of theatrical management on the 22nd ult., and celebrated the occasion by making his reappearance on the stage of his popular music-hall after a long absence. The house was packed, and Mr. Pastor received an ovation. A reminder of days gone by that was hugely enjoyed by many persons in the audience who were able to remember the old, old songs was Mr. Pastor's singing of "Sarah's Young Man."

NEW YORK, APRIL 25.—Mr. William H. Crane's personal popularity is largely responsible for the success of the farcical comedy, An American Lord, by George Broadhurst and C. T. Dazey, in which he is now appearing at the Hudson Theatre, the incidents and situations being mostly far-fetched and absurdly improbable. Mr. Crane has the part of John Breuster, who keeps an hotel in North Dakota, and has an unconquerable aversion to the English nobility. But his daughter falls in love with a nice young fellow who proves to be a lord, and to add to his discomfiture he inherits an estate in England and the title of Lord Breuster. When these honours are suddenly thrust upon him his first impulse is to decline them and stay in his own country, but he thinks better of it, and decides to take up his new responsibilities in order that he may have an opportunity of showing the Britishers "how an American runs things." He puts electric lights in the parish church, pulls down cottages and builds model tenements with all the latest American improvements, and astonishes the natives in other ways. He treads on his neighbours' corns to such an extent that he becomes embroiled in a row with Lord Wycherly, who owns the adjoining property. The two men snarl at each other through the bars of an iron gate in the party wall until the Englishman says something which Breuster takes as "an affront to the entire American nation," and the patriotic Yankee swears to get even with his enemy at every possible opportunity. In the meantime his son falls in love with Lord Wycherly's daughter. The love affairs of the young people, who have none of their parents' prejudices, land them in numerous complications, and Breuster himself is always in hot water. But he sees the error of his ways eventually, is cured of his Anglophobia, and actually helps his son to elope with his English sweetheart. One newspaper announced that Mr. Crane "twisted the lion's tail in three acts," but as a matter of fact he merely gave it a jerk or two. In fact, the feud between the Englishman and the American resolved itself into a mutual admiration conference at the close, with the erstwhile prejudiced Yankee saying all sorts of nice things about the "mother country."

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows:—

MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALAN W. YOUNG,
Empire Theatre, Liverpool.

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,

MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THE DETECTIVE.

A child is stolen from her parents, and taken to the hiding-place of the child-stealers. After taking all her jewellery and little trinkets, and treating her rather roughly, they write to her parents offering to release her on payment of £200. Her father puts the matter into the hands of a detective, who cleverly disguises himself, and meets the robbers. He escapes with the child, and is recaptured, but he again gets away, and after many hairbreadth escapes, he restores the little one to her grateful parents. About 462ft. The Subject, £11 11s. 0d.

ESCAPED FROM THE CAGE.

While a large audience is watching a troup of performing animals, a large monkey escapes from his cage close by, and puts everyone to flight. The performers at once take up the chase, and the monkey leads them a fine dance, climbing into most inaccessible places, and getting into all kinds of mischief on his way. At last he is captured, and can be seen consoling himself in the cage from which he was so glad to be free. About 310ft. The Subject, £7 15s. 0d.

LOVE TRAGEDY.

A gentleman forms an attachment for a girl, and winning her favour, they live happily together for a time. The man tires of his companion, and arranges to make a wealthy marriage. The Subject, £10 5s. 0d.

THE LAW OF PARDON.

A husband discovers that his wife is receiving letters from a lover, and seeks a separation. In the Law Courts the wife beseeches his forgiveness, but he will not listen, and they part. The wife hears of her daughter's illness, and, after a lot of persuasion, succeeds in getting the nurse to change places with her. The husband returns, and is still unforgiving, but the little girl pleads with him, and the husband and wife are reconciled. About 475ft. The Subject, £11 17s. 6d.

A TIPSTER TAKEN FOR A FOOL.

A tipster bets an innkeeper £5 that he cannot sit on a chair and imitate the swinging of a clock pendulum for an hour without speaking. Two £5 notes are placed on the table, and the innkeeper starts. Meanwhile, the tipster has a good meal. Bound by his promise, the innkeeper will not speak to his wife and family, and they, thinking he has gone mad, bring all the tradespeople in to see what is the matter. Just on the hour the tipster takes the notes and walks out. After the hour has passed, and the innkeeper asks for the two £5 notes, his friends have no doubt that they are dealing with a lunatic, and bind him, ready to take to the lunatic asylum. About 412ft. The Subject, £10 6s. 0d.

DICK TURPIN'S RIDE TO YORK.

No. 1026.

This film closely follows the historical tale, and has been carried out with a reckless daring almost equal to that dare-devil ride. The photographic quality is of the very best, and we can with pleasure present to all our patrons once again a phenomenal success.

The scene opens with Dick and Tom King taking a glass outside the "Jack Falstaff" Inn, and as soon as they disappear inside to settle the account, the landlord is seen to betray them, anxious to share the reward of £300 offered. Dick, with the assistance of his confederate and a pretty barmaid, however, after a desperate struggle, manages to escape on his favourite horse, Black Bess. He is followed by the attorney, chief constable, and doctor on horseback, and a hot chase commences, numbers of people joining in the running; one rather eager man who endeavours to bar the way of the outlaw meets his death from Dick's pistol. The chase proceeds at high speed through country and village, the highwayman exacting whenever he can tribute from the lips of the fair sex. In one village he unfastens the latticed window of a house by standing on his horse, enters a bedroom, and demands toll from the lips of a young lady; while, with his pistol, he subdues the irate mother, who gladly seeks protection beneath the bed-clothes. Dick is able at one inn, by the aid of a friendly ostler, to obtain refreshment for himself and his horse, whom he rubs down in great haste. The chase gets hotter and hotter, as his pursuers ride up to change horses, and Dick escapes from the back while the man is parleying with his enemies.

Dick, meeting an old woman, just past the gallows, where her son hangs (and which he has saluted), is requested by her to bear a package to Sir Luke, to which he consents. Turpin proceeds on his way as fast as his steed can take him. He rides out and stops the York Coach, which is passing along the road, and demands to know where he can find Sir Luke. After obtaining the desired information, he rides on. The coach is again stopped, this time by the pursuers, and they add another to their number. They press on with the chase. Dick's way is seen to be apparently stopped by a five-barred gate, but master and horse treat the matter lightly, and clear the gate in fine manner. riding on for dear life. The "hounds" not being quite up to the "fox" in skill, have to dismount, and, after some delay, follow on. Dick Turpin and horse are seen at the end of their journey to struggle on, both hard spent, the poor animal almost dropping as Dick delivers his precious packet to Sir Luke.

Thus, Dick's kind mission is accomplished, but at great cost, the death of his best friend, Black Bess, with which the picture closes.

AMUSEMENTS IN GLASGOW.

ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Humphreys.—With the visit this week of Mr. Harry Fischer's company in The Scottish Bluebells, Glasgow playgoers are afforded an opportunity of passing judgment upon yet another musical play. All round the company is a strong one, and the tokens of appreciation were frequent, several encores being accorded during the performance. Mr. Peter D. Bermingham supplies a humorous study as ex-Bailie Maie, and his business is very amusing; Mr. Arthur Cartwright acts and sings with effect as Guy Chalmers; the Montague of Mr. Leon Simkin is very funny and entertaining; Prince Ivan is admirably taken by Mr. Clifford Morgan; Miss Hettie Gale pleasingly portrays the part of Maisie Maie; Mrs. Elspeth Maie is charmingly played by Mme. Kate Sherry; Miss Lillie Hales's impersonation of Kirsty is very good—she obtains much fun from the part. Other parts were well looked after by Misses Elsie Steadman, Kitty Clinton, Edythe Carlyle, and Mr. Dan O'Connor. The scenery, representing views in Edinburgh, was very effective.

ROYALTY, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—A good house accorded a hearty welcome to the new comic opera, The Girls from Utah, which is given here by a company under the direction of Mr. Walter McEwen. The music, which is by Mr. Walter Wadham Petre, is bright and tuneful, and contains several numbers which caught the fancy of the audience at once, notably the madrigal in the first act, the serenade in the second, and the stirring patriotic song and chorus, "Our King and Queen." Mr. Fred Eastman is most amusing as Brewgood, the innkeeper and matrimonial agent, and infuses lots of fun into the part in his own quaint style; as Alphonse, Mr. W. H. Powell gives a clever bit of eccentric comedy, and has some clever songs; Mr. Harrison Brockbank as Terence Rainford was in excellent voice, and made a picturesque figure as the mine manager; his songs are all good items, and were received with enthusiasm. Miss Nora Brocklebank as Mildred made a pretty and sympathetic heroine, and sang several songs with taste and expression; Miss Florence Parpey (better known now in Glasgow as Mrs. Dickson Moffatt) received a hearty welcome, and made a decided hit as the energetic and managing widow, Mrs. Bumble; Miss Kate Vesey, as Suza, again showed her skill as a dancer, and acted with brightness and animation; Mr. Howard F. Cropton as Billy, Miss Seymour Hodges as his wife, and Miss Lillian Pollard as Deborah completed an able caste. A large and tuneful chorus gave due prominence to the concerted music, and Mr. George M. Saker conducted with ability.

GRAND, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Mascard.—Mr. Charles Hermann, with a talented company, are here this week playing The Octoroon, in which Mr. Hermann gives an effective rendering of Wah-no-tee, the Indian chief; Miss Florence Tench as Zoe, the Octoroon, give a charming rendering of the part; while Miss Hettie Ferguson makes a pleasing Dora. Miss Amy Corelli give a spirited representation of the boy Paul; and Mr. Harry Leander is excellent as the talkative old negro, Pete. Mr. Frank Woodville as the brutal Jacob M'Losky depicts the evil qualities of the character powerfully; while Mr. W. H. Palmer gives a fine delineation of the hero, George Peyton. Mr. Charles Freeman as Salem Scudder acts the typical Yankee to the life; and Mr. I. P. Millar as Sunnyside is also effective. Miss Annie Duncan is quietly natural as the widow, Mrs. Peyton; Miss Nellie Shannon, Miss Dunmore, and Miss Gertie Walters as negro slaves give local colour to the cast.

KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—Mr. Lewis Waller's company is here this week giving a spirited performance of the romantic play Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner. The part of Elizabeth Philipse is undertaken by Miss Cynthia Brooke, who depicts the varying moods of the imperious young heroine with complete success; the Mistress Williams of Miss Leonora Braham is a charming bit of comedy, the maid Molly being pleasingly represented by Miss Phyllis Back; Mr. Frederick Victor plays the hero Captain Harry Peyton in admirable fashion, imparting to the character a chivalrous quality that is very convincing; as Major Colden, Mr. Elliot Ball acts with strong dramatic effect; Mr. Sidney Young's Valentine is a finely finished character-sketch; in the part of Edwards, Mr. A. Carlaw Grand gives a good account of himself; Mr. Donald Young is a smart Sergeant Carrington; and as the black servants Sam and Cuff, Mr. Tom Taylor and Mr. J. Thomas fill their parts well. The play is preceded by the new comedietta Domestic Bliss.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdock.—Miss Violet Maitland and company, in By Tempest Tossed, provides the entertainment here. Mr. Harry Glenney as Jasper Marsden is good as the bibulous longshoreman; Mr. H. Macdonald has some clever touches as the old salt, Ben Ingleby; but most interest centres in the part of Pete, his son, vigorously depicted by Mr. Herbert St. Clair. Miss Violet Maitland as Nance Kingston acts with quiet grace; and the acting of Miss Rénee Selbit as Ben's wife is of the opposite order, as befits the character. Mr. F. Sidney as Jack Harper, the disappointed son of the sea, enlists sympathy, and in Act 3 is seen at his best. The domestic interest of the piece is well sustained, and the nautical flavour is not overdone. Mr. Edwin Frith, Mr. W. May, Mr. Tom Chester, Mr. F. L. Harold, Mr. T. Watson, Miss L. Wright, and Miss Phyllis St. Clair essay the minor parts. Miss Nellie Saker is worthy of notice as Davy, a fisher lad. The drama is suitably staged.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Gillespy.—The Power of Gold is being given here this week by a company headed by Mr. Frank Ayrton, who himself fills the part of Sammy Smudge with considerable humour. Miss Lilla Wilde give a strong performance as Lady Brandon; and her companion in villainy is well played by Mr. Charles Whitlock as the Melay doctor. Miss Georgina V. France as Meg Judson makes a sympathetic heroine; and Mr. Richard Oliver does well as Paul Judson. Humour, song, and dance are contributed by Miss Madge Seymour, who brightens the play considerably thereby. The piece is well staged.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—For the concluding week of the season Govan patrons are this week interesting themselves in the fortunes of A False Wife, as presented by Mr. F. Marriott-Watson's company. Miss Florence E. Florence gives an excellent rendering of the part of Lady Mansfield; and good support is given by Miss Ellen Armor, Miss Judith Ansell, and Messrs. George Langham, W. Howard Barlow, Frank Strickland, Owen Edwin, and Elton Morgan. The play is well mounted, and several of the incidents are thrilling in the extreme.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Mussett.—Tom Costello pays a welcome return visit. This versatile comedian always gives of his best. He was equally successful in pathos and comedy; his humorous song about a ten pound note, and a pathetic song regarding an old clown, were exceptionally well received. The Mario and Dunham Trio give a very smart and humorous horizontal bar act; Watson's dogs provide a very interesting display of animal training. Other acceptable terms are given by Forrest and King, "two pieces of elastic"; the New Macs, clever patter comedians and dancers; Hoppitt, Toney, and Terry, coster comedians; the Derrells, duettists and dancers; Dora Lyric, a clever comedienne; and a funny sketch, entitled Two Up a Tree, by the Albert and Edmunds' Troupe.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd., and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Carlton tops the bill here, and this clever comedian, with his smart card tricks and the amusing patter that accompanies them, keeps the audience in roars of laughter all the time. The Three Rubys give an excellent trapeze and balancing performance; Bros. Egbert, "the happy dustmen," again give their wonderfully clever knockabout turn; Amy Russell, comedienne, has several good songs; and in a more eccentric line, Lily Esplin shows her skill. A cleverly arranged turn is that of Lennie and Hast, in their Sea Nymph sketch. Lindon Vandeville Company also give a neat turn in their Monks at Play; Fred Bronte, comedian; Conway and Garland, in a vocal and comedy act; and the Reed-Oetzmann Troupe, in a knockabout pantomime, complete a varied and attractive bill.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—Edwin Boyde is the chief attraction this week. All his songs are very humorous, and every point is cleverly brought out by this smart comedian. Dale and O'Malley strike an original vein in the cross-talk business, and their reception must have been most gratifying to these two clever artists. Wallan, the expert juggler, is as interesting as ever; Dan Thomas makes a great hit with his funny songs and eccentricities; Sable Fern sings her songs well, and is a big favourite; the Great Vincent does some startling somersaults from great heights; the Holloways are wire artists of a high order; the Original Celtics are full of fun, besides displaying good vocal abilities; A. J. Gamble, Scotch comedian, and Ruth Lytton, Scotch comedienne, also provide good turns.

PALACE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—Crowded houses twice nightly is the rule here, the special draw being Arthur Roberts and his clever company in The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife. This lively sketch, written by Harry Pleon, fairly bristles with opportunities for the versatile comedian, and Mr. Roberts never misses a point. Miss Ruby Celeste and the other members of the cast give able support. W. J. Churchill comes armed with several smart songs, and his turn is a popular one. Lalla Selbina shows her ability and dexterity in juggling and trick bicycling and excels in both. The Florodora Girls are a popular trio, and sing and dance well. Max Waldon ranks high as a female impersonator, and his make-up is wonderful. Fred Howard, ventriloquist, takes exceedingly well, and Allen and Hart, eccentrics, complete a first-rate programme.

COLISEUM.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan.—The programme submitted here this week is of a high standard, and attracts large houses. Lempriere Pringle and company occupy the place of honour, and in their musical sketch, Highwayman Hal, make a favourable impression. Marie Collins, comedienne, is also marked out for special approval. Other interesting turns include Roze and Calvert, the clever comedy artists; Edwin Barwick, the popular comedian; Lios Alfa Sisters, trapeze artists; Lilian Elfrida, mimic; Doughty's sketch company, in Captain Cupid; Lady Fauntleroy, ventriloquist; Bros. Corcoran, instrumentalists; and the bioscope, with a series of interesting pictures.

TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. M. Armstrong.—A splendid bill of fare is provided here this week, the chief attraction being the engagement of Kate Carney, coster comedienne, in her latest scena, entitled The Sunday Promenade, introducing clever up-to-date coster life, songs, and delineations, all of which are well received by the audience, Miss Carney being repeatedly called before the curtain. A clever sketch is contributed by James Willard and company, introducing the specially-trained mastiff dog Tiger; while the efforts of Ted Karno's troupe affords much merriment. Miss Rose Elliott continues a great favourite; her songs, being sung in first-class style, ensure her a hearty reception. The other members of the company include Temple Trio, operatic vocalists; Grace McCartan, ballad vocalist; Hayman and Franklin, sketch artists; Shean, Fox, and Shean, comedy boxing act; Mike Cray, comedy juggler; George Bendon, "the white coon"; and Tivoli bioscope, with up-to-date pictures.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, APRIL 3.—Paul Jones was revived by Mr. J. C. Williamson's Royal Comic Opera Company on March 31, at Her Majesty's Theatre. This time the hero is enacted by Miss Florence Young, whose excellent voice and handsome face and figure well fit her for the part. Mr. George Lauri was again the "rorty, naughty" Bouillabaisse. Miss Alma Barker was Yvonne, her naïveté and crisp singing winning general approval; and Miss Ivy Evelyn Scott was one of the successes of the evening as Chopinette, and Miss Nellie Wilson fully met the requirements of the rôle of Malaguenas. Mr. Claude Bantock's Old Bicoquet was an artistic effort; Mr. W. S. Percy made Petit Pierre intensely laughable; Mr. Haigh Jackson sang the music of his part extremely well; Mr. Gerard Coventry was responsible for the completeness of Mr. Williamson's revival. The Radium Ballet was loudly applauded.

MR. WILLIAM ANDERSON has produced a new version, by Mr. Edmund Duggan, of Lady Audley's Secret. Miss Eugenie Duggan has made one of the greatest hits of her career as Lady Audley. The other characters were given by Miss Ada Guildford, Miss Mabel Lane, Miss D. Douglas, Miss Marian Buckley, Mr. Lawrence Dunbar, Mr. H. S. Willard, Mr. Edmund Duggan, Mr. Temple Harrison, Mr. J. H. Munroe, Mr. Max Clifton, and Baby Seaton.

"DR. WAKE'S PATIENT" still amuses and interests audiences at the Criterion, and there appears to be no need for change for the rest of the season.

AT the Tivoli additions were made last week by Mr. Harry Rickards in the persons of Miss Pearl Livingstone, a clever serio-singer and dancer; Baby Sutton, a child performer; Miss Alice Raymond, a very good cornetist and bugler; and Miss Kitty Denton reappeared.

WIRTH'S CIRCUS returned to the Prince Alfred Park on Saturday with a full list of popular artists.

THE Victor Dale matinée, to assist the widow of the dead poet, was an enormous success. Mr. William Anderson gave his theatre and company. Mr. Williamson, Messrs. Brough and Flemming, and Mr. Harry Rickards sent contingents. Mr. George Rignold recited, and Miss Eileen Boyd led the chorus and ballet Off to the Rio Grande.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Cavanah, C.A.—Messrs. Durward Lely's and William Mollison's company is here this week in Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush. Mr. Mollison plays with all his customary skill as Lachlan Campbell, the outstanding character of the play; and Mr. Allen Thomas gives a capital portraiture of the "pawky" old Doctor Maclure. "Wee Posty" and Tammas Mitchell are capably represented by Mr. Alec F. Thomson and Mr. Kendall Chalmers; and the part of Flora is successfully portrayed by Miss Evelyn McKay. Miss Alice Francis is equally at home as Kate Carnegie; while Mr. Lely is cordially received as the Rev. John Carmichael.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Rosen and Bliss; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Madame Ada Colley, the celebrated Australian vocalist, makes a brilliantly successful appearance; and the feats of Lady Flora, an ape which displays almost human ingenuity, prove singularly interesting. The Ladderites are warmly applauded in their gymnastic act; Koose shows himself to be an acrobat of rare skill; the Three Zaracs also make a decided hit as gymnasts; and the Keats appear successfully in an amusing sketch, The Detective and the Lady. Among the other artists whose turns are appreciated are Miss Vera Mayne, a sprightly comedienne; Mr. George Rapley, Hans and Lux, and Mr. George Westland.

COOKE'S HIPPODROME.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. John Henry Cooke.—The programme is, as usual here, highly attractive. In addition to the daring and graceful feats of horsemanship, one of the most highly appreciated items is a sketch, Japanese and Russians, in which an incident of the recent war in the East is graphically depicted. Mlle. Zetto is as successful as ever in her wire-walking feats; and Eli Raglus highly amuses the audience by his exceedingly deft manipulation of an indiarubber ball. Among other sensational features of the performance is a realistic representation of a steeplechase; and the evening concludes with a capital presentation of a mirth-provoking sketch, Courtship under Difficulties.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. Robert Ayrton's company is appearing here this week in The Gambler's Wife. Mr. Ayrton gives a lifelike portrayal of Desmond Dare; Mr. A. Saunders plays the part of S. Solomon with skill; John Grant is well acted by Mr. R. Pitt; and Jack Grant is a very careful study by Mr. V. Millard. Miss Adria Hill deserves special mention for her rendering of the dual rôle of Mildred and Mirian Grant; and Miss Lizzie Cook is well cast as Carmen Lancho.

HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Willmot, Potter, Vandy, and Weisker.—Regan and Ryan top the bill here this week; J. H. LIVERPOOL.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—Notwithstanding the fact that adaptations from the works of Dickens, particularly that of "David Copperfield," have been numerous and varied, it is clear that the creations of the great Victorian novelist still possess a hold on the theatre-going public. Evidence of this was especially shown here this week, when Mr. Charles Cartwright and his London company presented Dan'l Peggotty. In a word, the production was an artistic treat, and the general opinion of crowded audiences was that the true spirit of the principal characters in "David Copperfield" was never so amply shown through histrionic art as during the present week. Lovers of Dickens, and there were many present, were delighted at seeing Micawber, Peggotty, Emily, Betsy Trotwood, and others moving across the stage, just as if they had stepped out of the pages of "David Copperfield." Then, again, the costumes and dresses of the Early Victorian period lent an added charm to the play, while the scenery, particularly that showing the interior of Peggotty's boathouse, was eminently satisfactory. The unvarying and methodical "swish" of the sea on the shingle outside the house was as fine a sample of stage illusion as could possibly be provided, and this realistic feature was particularly noted by the delighted auditors. A fine picture of the rough, warm-hearted fisherman Peggotty was presented by Mr. Charles Cartwright, pathos, passion, and simplicity being evinced with keen intensity; Mr. Charles Collette charmed everybody with his exquisite Micawber; a more finished idea of the sneaking Heep could hardly be given than that of Mr. Ivan Berlyn; Mr. Alfred Woods admirably supported Mr. Cartwright as the bashful, honest Ham; Little Emily, as rendered by Miss Molly Pearson, readily endeared herself to the audience; the Steerforth of Mr. Arthur Royston was an excellent piece of acting; Mr. Humphrey Warden did well as Copperfield, although the character did not hold a place of much importance in the plot; Miss Mary Smith truly realised the spirit of the complaining Mrs. Gummidge; Mr. Ernest Mozar, both in make-up and demeanour, afforded every satisfaction as Littimer; and the remainder of the cast also displayed high accomplishments. These included Mr. H. Carter Bligh (Mr. Wickfield); Miss Maud Williamson (Mrs. Steerforth); Miss Edith Cartwright (Rosa Dartle); Miss Mabel Luxmore (Betsy Trotwood); Miss Gordon Walker (Agnes Wickfield); Miss Scott-Lauder (Martha); and Miss Ruby Wyndham (Mrs. Barkis). The singing of "Believe me, if all these endearing young charms," by Mr. Mozar, accompanied on the harp by Miss Walker, was loudly applauded. At the close of each act the curtain had to be raised several times.

SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—The enterprise of the management of this house in booking Peter Pan for three weeks has been fully justified. KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, May 7,
the Drama, entitled
"THE ETERNAL CITY."

When The Eternal City was produced at His Majesty's Theatre on Oct. 2, 1902, its chief weakness was found to be the diffusiveness of the dialogue, more particularly that put into the mouth of his Holiness the Pope. But considerable revision has taken place since then, and the drama has been well received this week at the Kennington Theatre, where it was last witnessed over two years ago, it being then played by Mr. Tree's company. Mr. Bannister Howard has brought an excellent combination, and the piece is staged in a manner that meets with the full approval of the audience. Mr. Henry Deas puts plenty of vigour and spirit into his embodiment of David Rossi, and he meets with a good reception. Mr. E. Stanton Sharp gives a careful study of Baron Bonelli, and success rewards his efforts. Mr. W. O'Flynn makes good use of his opportunities as Bruno Rocco. Mr. L. St. G. Lowther does well as the Chief of Police, and the rascally spy has an able exponent in Mr. Herbert Legerton. Mr. Richard Walsh gets some fun out of the part of Tomasso. The rôle of Donna Roma, originally played by Miss Constance Collier, is powerfully represented by Miss Marie Polini, whose acting merits warm commendation. Miss Mary Mannering does excellent work in the part of Rossi's wife, and all the minor characters are carefully sustained. The songs which are introduced are well rendered by Miss Ethel Percival and Miss Alice Dunn.

DEATH OF MISS OLGA BRANDON.

We regret to record the death on Tuesday last of Miss Olga Brandon, who some years ago held a prominent position in the profession. She had been in ill-health for a considerable time, and had come up to London from a nursing home at Ramsgate with the intention of staying for a few days, but her illness from consumption assumed an acute form, and she died suddenly at 97, College Green, Camden Town.

Miss Brandon, who for the last ten or a dozen years has done very little stage work, was born in Australia in 1865, and was educated in a convent at Geelong. She made her début at the Madison-square Theatre, New York, on September 29, 1884, as Edith in The Private Secretary. She was afterwards seen in New York as Mrs. Smith in In Chancery, Minnie in England, and Lydia Haversack in Twins. Her first appearance in London was made at the Royalty on January 27, 1887, as Grace Goldring in Modern Wives, also appearing later at the same theatre in Ivy and as Mrs. Mudford Merry in A Tragedy. Returning to America, she toured with J. S. Clarke in old English comedy. During this tour she also played Ophelia and Pauline Deschapelles. On her return to England in 1888 she joined the Kendals for provincial tours, appearing as Rhoda in The Weaker Sex, and Mrs. Molyneux in A White Lie, playing this part when the piece was produced at the Court on May 25. At the Shaftesbury on April 5, 1890, she appeared as Mrs. Lisle in Dick Venables. On May 21 following, she played Vashti in H. A. Jones's Judah, one of her best performances. At the Adelphi on August 2, 1890, Miss Brandon played Ethel Kingston in The English Rose, and she also appeared there as Lucy in a revival of The Streets of London on May 7, 1891. Other parts in which she was seen in London were Una Dell in The Crusaders at the Avenue Theatre (1891), Florizel in A Visit (1892), the title-rôle in Nadia (1892), Clare O'Mara in Strathlogan (1892), the Duchess de Vervier in The Broken Melody (1892), Gertrude in The Maelstrom at the Shaftesbury (1892), Esther in Caste (Criterion, 1889), Mrs. Cuthbert in Cyril's Success (Criterion, 1890), Mary Melrose in Our Boys (Criterion, 1890), Mary Blenkarn in a revival of The Middleman at the Shaftesbury in 1890, Ruth in Hypatia (1893), and Lady Hilda in An American Bride (1893). The funeral of the deceased actress took place at the Roman Catholic Cemetery, East Finchley.

E. Savery, A. M. Seaton, Lucy Sibley, Adnam Sprange, Chas. A. Stephenson, Blanka Stewart, and Chas. Cruikshanks (secretary).

Mr. Cecil Barth was voted to the chair. The minutes of the second bi-monthly meeting having been read and confirmed, the secretary read a letter from Mr. Ernest St. John, setting forth various views of the policy of the Association, and suggesting certain schemes for extending the usefulness of the organisation. Several members having spoken on the subject, it was ultimately agreed that Mr. Ernest St. John should be asked to formulate a scheme. A member present promised to support him in his enterprise, and would endeavour to induce others to do so.

The consideration of the proposition brought forward by Miss Vera Leslie was unavoidably postponed, owing to the absence of that lady. As it was felt there was no immediate hurry for a decision in the matter, it was agreed that it might remain in abeyance until such time as Miss Leslie might be able to attend at some future bi-monthly meeting, so as to give the members the benefit of her views on the subject.

Mr. Robert Milsted proposed "that the post of secretary to this Association shall not last for a term of more than three years, but that at the end of that time the late secretary be eligible for re-election if he cares to stand; other candidates must be members of the council, and must have been on the council for at least one year. That the secretary be elected by general ballot of members." Mr. F. Rawson Buckley seconded the proposition.

Several members spoke upon this subject. Mr. Acton Bond pointed out what he considered to be the objections to the adoption of such a measure; and Mr. Cecil Barth having also spoken against the proposition, it was put to the vote and declared to be lost, five voting in favour of the resolution and nine against.

Miss Joan Pereira proposed that the council should consider the establishment of dramatic debates in connection with the Association, and Mr. Adnam Sprange having seconded the proposition, it was put to the meeting, and carried. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

STRATFORD SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL.

Great interest was taken in Mr. F. R. Benson's production at Stratford-on-Avon last week of the trilogy of King Henry VI., consecutive performances of which were given at the Memorial Theatre in celebration of Shakespeare's anniversary. Part III., which was staged on Friday, the 4th inst., is specially notable from the reason that it has not been seen in its original form since the Restoration, and the opportunity of witnessing the play in actual representation was taken full advantage of by a large and appreciative audience. Mr. Benson, who had made some judicious cuts in the text, sustained the part of Richard, Duke of Gloucester, and portrayed with much subtlety the hard and unscrupulous nature of the ambitious nobleman. Mrs. Benson added another success to those already achieved by her performance of Margaret, acting the rôle with striking dramatic force and queenly dignity. A most favourable impression was created by Mr. Cyril Keightley, who came within reach of perfection in the part of Suffolk. Mr. George Buchanan gave a rendering of Henry VI. instinct with regal dignity and artistic resource. Mr. Stanley Howlett and Mr. H. O. Nicholson were admirable exponents of the Prince of Wales and Edward IV. respectively. An agreeable touch of sweetness was imparted to the play by Miss Olive Noble, who impersonated Lady Grey with rare grace and delicacy; and Miss Leah Hanman infused much pathos into her rendering of the unfortunate young Earl of Rutland. A vigorous and outspoken Lord Clifford was found in Mr. Philip Sanders; Mr. Clarence Derwent made the best use of his opportunities as the Duke of York; and Mr. Reginald Davis as the Duke of Clarence, and Mr. B. A. Pittar as the Earl of Warwick, were suitably placed.

At the close of the performance, Mr. Benson was heartily recalled, and made in acknowledgment a short speech, in the course of which he said that he had just heard one of the stage-hands remark, as the curtain fell, "Thank goodness, there's another confounded king dead!" This feeling, he suggested, might perhaps be shared by the audience; but it was something to say that in the consecutive performance of these histories the Memorial Theatre had done what no other theatre in the world had attempted.

"A TIGHT CORNER."

A Light Comedy, in Three Acts,
By Herbert Swears, produced, for the first time on any stage, at the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth, On Wednesday, May 9, 1906.

Jack Hyacynth ..... MR. KENDAL
Samson Quale ..... MR. ERNEST HENDRIE
Barrington Skews ..... MR. METCALFE WOOD
Bangham ..... MR. F. CHAS. POOLE
Postern ..... MR. ARROWSMITH
Mrs. Pertwee ..... MISS JESSIE MOORE
Clara ..... MISS MARIE LOHR
Mrs. Hyacynth ..... MRS. KENDAL

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal had a most hearty reception on Wednesday evening, when they produced for the first time Mr. Herbert Swears's comedy, entitled A Tight Corner. The incidents of the three acts take place in the drawing-room of the Hyacynths' flat in Mount-street, Berkeley-square. In the first act we find Samson Quale, a solicitor of the old and prim school, telling his friend, the easy, happy-going Jack Hyacynth, of his wife's goings on with several male friends, whom, with his entire concurrence, she invites to what she calls her "aviary," and dubs them her "birds." Quale suggests that people are talking about it, and that Jack shall write an effusive letter to a lady of the upper flat, a Mrs. Pertwee, already known to the wife as having a liking for Jack, and place it where his wife can find it. Jack eventually falls in with his friend's idea, and duly writes the letter. They retire to the dining-room, and Mrs. Jack, who is going for a motor-drive with one of the "birds," comes in, looking for her key, discovers the letter, and, finding it unfastened, reads it; but, having unbounded confidence in her husband, sees through the whole thing, and laughingly, after sealing, sends the missive up to Mrs. Pertwee.

In the second act we find Jack is in a highly nervous condition about meeting Mrs. Pertwee, and blames his friend, but Quale makes light of the matter, and says it is easy to get out of it by telling Mrs. Pertwee the note was only written to amuse himself, but unfortunately got placed in an addressed envelope that should have contained an invitation to dinner. Quale retires to the kitchen, Jack telling him, as he has got him in a tight corner, he must see him through. Mrs. Pertwee duly keeps the appointment, and, after some intense love-making on her part, to the great discomfort of Hyacynth, Jack tells her what the letter really meant, and that it was a mistake, whereupon she promptly faints. Quale returns at this crisis, and the two proceed to rouse her. Quale suggests it is only a sham, and gets her round very easily. At this juncture Mrs. Hyacynth is heard coming with her escort, and Mrs. Pertwee hides in an old oak chest which is to be sent to the auctioneers' for sale later on. Mrs. Jack comes in, and soon finds out the box trick, and the act ends with the workmen carrying out the chest.

Act 3 is devoted to unwinding the tangle, and after Mrs. Pertwee has had a rough time, and the two friends, Jack and Quale, have been thoroughly frightened, the comedy ends by Mrs. Hyacynth showing the meddlesome Quale and Mrs. Pertwee the door.

Mrs. Kendal is such a consummate actress that it is a pleasure to watch her performance, and her entire absence of effort made the part of Mrs. Jack Hyacynth quite delightful to witness. Mr. Kendal played the open-hearted, straightforward stockbroker, Jack Hyacynth, in the free and easy style of which he is a past-master; his trepidation at meeting the love-sick Mrs. Pertwee and his anger with his friend Quale were admirably depicted. Miss Jessie Moore, in the part of Mrs. Pertwee, played with great judgment and tact. Samson Quale, the intruding friend of Jack, was a very excellent character-part sustained by Mr. Ernest Hendrie with conspicuous success, his portentous utterances being given with immense gusto. Barrington Skews, one of "the birds," was safe in the experienced hands of Mr. Metcalfe Wood. Miss Marie Lohr played Clara carefully and well.

The comedy went with a swing from the beginning, the applause being very frequent and evidently sincere. There were numerous calls at the end of each act, and at the fall of the curtain the applause was most pronounced. The author was called and bowed his acknowledgments.

THE definition of a stage play according to the police was given at Hayward's Heath on Wednesday, when George Leslie was summoned for acting a stage play in an unlicensed building, the Public Hall, on May 7. Defendant pleaded not guilty. The police evidence was to the effect that A Royal Divorce was played, defendant being dressed as Napoleon, and numerous others taking part in character dress, including women and "soldiers with swords." All seemed to be very careful that only one person spoke in each scene. That day defendant had failed to get a licence for the hall, because sufficient notice had not been given.

WHEN the police entered the hall the defendant asked, "Is this all right?" "No," came the reply; "it is a play, and a licence is required." Defendant said, "Oh, I thought that if only one spoke at a time it was not a stage play," and the police-sergeant answered, "They are living characters and make gestures, which constitutes it a play. Defendant told the Bench that although the theatrical party paid the rent, the hall was closed on Tuesday night, and over three hundred people, who had come to hear singing only, were turned away. They could not get their rent back, could not give entertainments, and were stranded. Already they had had bad luck in other towns. The Bench held that technically the party were performing a stage play, but under all the circumstances the case was dismissed.

OWING to the death of her mother, Miss Constance Stephens has been unable to take up her part in The Eternal City, at Kennington Theatre this week.

PRESENTATION.—Miss Peggy Famo was presented at the Tivoli, Manchester, on Wednesday, with a cameo gold ring, by Miss Lucia Collins.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, May 7, the Drama, in Four Acts, Adapted from Charles Dickens's novel by J. F. Brandon, and entitled
"OLIVER TWIST."

This week Oliver Twist has been a great attraction in Marylebone, Mr. Bailey's commodious theatre being packed with a contented audience on the night of our visit. Mr. W. S. Hartford enacts Bill Sikes in a vivid and realistic way, the impersonation being most praiseworthy. The Mr. Bumble of Mr. Fred Dobell is a clever character-study of that self-important personage; Mr. George Claremont plays in his usual finished style as Mr. Brownlow; Mr. J. F. Brandon is decidedly good as Mr. Grimwig; Mr. A. G. Lytton scores as Mr. Monks; Mr. Johnny Leoni and Mr. Herbert Boyle do exceptionally well as the Artful Dodger and Charlie Bates respectively; whilst Mr. W. R. Sheen sustains the rôle of Fagin with much ingenuity and force, his impersonation leaving but little to be desired. As Nancy, Miss Lily Hammersley plays with a great amount of force and expression; Miss Hettie Graham does well as Noah Claypole; Miss Adeline Montagu is effective as Mrs. Corney; Miss Ella Seton is painstaking as Rose Maylie; and Miss Bertha Baker makes the pathetic figure of Oliver Twist a very lovable one by reason of her artistic methods. The other members of the long cast all do well, and the whole production is worthy of high commendation.

MR. CHARLES FRY'S RECITAL.

The resumption of Mr. Charles Fry's Shakespearean matinées, which are this year being given at the Court Theatre, attracted a large audience on Saturday afternoon, when A Winter's Tale was revived, the stage being draped in the fashion usual with Mr. Fry's recitals. To what extent the veteran elocutionist and actor is responsible for the popularity into which Shakespeare has sprung in recent years it is impossible to say, but there can be no doubt that such artistic representations as those provided for many years past by Mr. Fry in association with Miss Olive Kennett are bound to have a stimulating influence on public taste and to exercise an important bearing in the dramatic education of the people. The representation of Shakespeare's tearful comedy on Saturday was thoroughly enjoyed, constant applause and four or five curtain calls at the end of the piece giving complete evidence of the satisfaction of the audience. Mr. Fry, whose reading of Leontes is already well known, declaimed the lines with his usual power and emphasis, and by his well-varied gesture and dramatic resource gave a striking representation of the conflict of emotions to which jealousy gives rise. Miss Olive Kennett was again a stately Queen, full of dignity, delivering her lines with a deep pathos that was very affecting. Her "statuesque" scene was remarkably well managed, and created a profound impression. A captivating Perdita was supplied in the person of Miss Dora Keith, who charmed by her grace and delicacy, and rendered her lines with deep feeling and a true appreciation of their worth. Her love scenes with Florizel, gallantly enacted by Mr. Hughes Jones, were not the least agreeable features of the performance. Autolycus, the rogue, was played by Mr. Patrick Munro, who availed himself of every opportunity of creating mirth, of which there was no lack while he was on the stage. His fine voice was employed admirably in the songs which fall to him and in the trio with the two shepherdesses, the success of which was shared by Misses Helen Lynden and Marion Stenner, who acted merrily as Mopsa and Dorcas respectively. Mr. C. Francis added appreciably to the fun of the piece by his droll delivery and quaint antics as the clown, and in the part of his father Mr. W. J. R. Cane submitted a creditable assumption of the aged shepherd. A courtly Camillo was found in Mr. Stanley Leverton, who acted with a convincing earnestness that added significance to the part, and Mr. Vincent Nello gave a thorough exposition of the chivalry and kingliness of Polixenes. Miss Jessie Cowen acted naïvely and with sweet ingenuousness as the boy Mamilius, Miss Winifred Rae was a sympathetic Paulina, Mr. Ernest Beharold did well in the rôle of Antigonus, Mr. Arthur Broughton impersonated Time, and the chorus and the various subsidiary parts in the long cast were adequately filled. The songs and incidental music are the work of Mr. Arthur Fox, the orchestra was capably led by Mr. Cuthbert Kelly, and the rustic dance was under the direction of Miss Lily Sturman.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, May 7,
Play, by Mr. Alfred Sutro, entitled
"THE WALLS OF JERICHO."

There is so much in The Walls of Jericho to fascinate and attract the attention of the public, that it was no surprise to find a big house assembled on Monday to welcome Mr. Bourchier's company on its return visit. Although there are several changes in the company, very able substitutes have been found, and the attractiveness of this enjoyable "smart-set" piece is fully maintained. Mr. Edward A. Warburton's Jack Frobisher is a wonderfully natural embodiment, particularly interesting, and, withal, so human. As Lady Alethea Frobisher, Miss Amy Ravenscroft perfectly realises the author's conception of the part, displaying great discrimination in portraying the various moods of the lady; a very clever study, alike excellent in its humour and its touches of pathos. Mr. Alfred S. Barber repeats his fine piece of acting as Hankey Bannister; and Mr. Cecil Brooking is still seen to great advantage in the character of the Marquis of Steventon. It would be difficult to find a better exponent of this character. Mr. A. W. Tyrer as Harry Dallas invests the part with all the cleverness needed to make it as effective as the author desires. Praise is due to Messrs. V. Wilcox Cadogan, Joseph Herbert, and Wilfred S. Lane for their acting as Bertram Hannaford, the Hon. Wilfred Renton, and Lord Marchmont respectively. Lady Westoby is ably undertaken by Miss Helen Haye. Miss Jean Harkness repeats her skilful impersonation of Miss Mornington, and Miss Mary Weigall capably sustains the part of the Duchess of Skye. A pert and piquant Lady Lucy Derenham is Miss Nona Wynne; and Miss May Brooke (Lady Porchester) and Miss Florence Harcourt (Miss Wyatt) are well cast. Messrs. Walter Newcombe, W. L. Jenkins, W. Littlejohns, J. Morris, and Miss Edith Warburton are satisfactory representatives of minor parts. The company well deserved the numerous recalls they received on Monday. The management are to be congratulated on the manner in which the production is staged, the scenery being admirable, and the general stage setting could hardly be improved upon. A word of praise might fittingly be extended to the musical-director, Mr. Charles Elcock, for a most enjoyable selection of music, and to the new business-manager, Mr. J. Murray Herriott for carefully looking after the comfort of those in front.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, May 7,
Shakespeare's Play, entitled
"RICHARD III."

Something in the nature of a Shakespeare festival is being held here this week, during which Mr. Esmond Bramley's Shakespearean company has been appearing here in a round of the Bard's most popular works, which are most carefully staged. The company, taken all round, is decidedly good. On Monday evening Richard III. was the play chosen for presentation. Mr. Cyril Este undertook the rôle of the Duke of Gloucester, and gave a good reading of the part, being careful to bring out all its craftiness. Mr. Este's acting showed great earnestness and careful study. A striking performance was that of Lady Anne, as presented by Miss Millie Ford, who, possessing a very musical voice, played the part with much pathos. Mr. Baliol Holloway appeared as the Duke of Clarence, giving a fine rendering of the part. In the latter part of the play he contributed an excellently drawn portrait of Henry, Earl of Richmond, the combat which brings the play to a close being excellently managed. Mr. F. O. Chambers was good as Buckingham; and Lords Stanley and Hastings were in the safe keeping of Messrs. Doyle and Fred Scarth Miss May Beatrice and Miss Ruth Nightingale were to be commended for their playing of the two young Princes. Miss Maud Garth delivered the lines allotted her as Elizabeth in a dignified manner; and Mrs. Bernard Parkin was responsible for an acceptable rendering of the Duchess of York. Messrs. Evans and Gordon were distinctly good as the Murderers, playing their short comedy scene with much tact and skill. Mr. G. E. Dunstan was impressive as the Bishop of Ely; Mr. Leonard Cheetham was successful at Ratcliffe; and Mr. A. L. Evans was seen to advantage as Catesby. Hamlet, The Merry Wives of Windsor, and Romeo and Juliet have also been staged during the week.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, May 7, the Play, by Hall Caine, entitled
"THE CHRISTIAN."

A notable novel, turned into a strong play by the author, and well acted by capable artists, forms the admirable bill of fare at the above theatre this week, and the strong situations of the piece have provided food for thought for the gratified audiences. The earnest and devoted cleric, John Storm, is powerfully acted by Mr. F. Rawson-Buckley. He is seldom off the stage, and his good work is recognised and rewarded by hearty applause. Mr. Harry Colbeck looks an ideal priest, and carefully portrays the characteristics of the Rev. Father Lamplugh. The fine presence of Mr. Colin Johnston gives reality to the worldly Archdeacon Wealthy; and Mr. Percy Johnson is good in the small part of Parson Quayle. Lord Robert Ure, the evil genius of the play, is excellently rendered by Mr. P. Gedge Twyman, who both looks and acts well; and Mr. Duncan Yarrow as the hero, Horatio Drake, adds greatly to the success of the production by his convincing ardour as the lover of Glory. Mr. Anthony Rawles as the raffish Faro King is appropriately debonair; and Mr. John Hames gives a clever, though none too flattering, portrait of the music-hall manager. Mr. Charles Stafford is well suited as Brother Paul, the assistant at the mission room; and Mr. George Moon makes a burly linkman, or "chucker-out." Miss Grace Murielle is quite at home as Glory Quayle, either as the simple island maiden or as the variety star in London. Her dresses are very becoming, and her acting is of a high order. The kindly Mrs. Callander is well impersonated by Miss Violet Vivian, who assumes the Scottish dialect admirably; Miss Florence Radcliffe invests the part of Polly Love with much charm, and secures the sympathies of all; Liza, Glory's maid, is a clever little sketch in the hands of Miss Cicely Oates; and Mesdames L. Kingston, Phyllis Leslie, and Eileen Barry give colour to the fellow artists of Glory. Miss Aggie Royal, as the reclaimed Aggie Jones, gave a clever dance in the second act, which was much applauded. The scenery is appropriate, and calls before the curtain on Monday were numerous.

GRAND, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, May 7,
the Farce, entitled
"WHAT THE BUTLER SAW."

Mr. Lionel Rignold and Miss Ada Blanche have been drawing good houses here this week with the above-named farce, and "laughter holding both his sides" has indeed been the order of the day. The rôle of Mrs. Barrington suits Miss Ada Blanche so remarkably that it might really have been specially written for her. Miss Blanche throws herself whole-heartedly and light-heartedly into her work, with the result that her characterisation of the part is as charming as it is refreshingly natural. Mr. Lionel Rignold is also thoroughly in his element as Pink, the butler, and keeps his audience in a continual ripple of laughter with his amusing acting and clever facial expression, to say nothing of his quaint, but decidedly original, delivery of his lines. Mr. Charles Fawcett plays Jack Barrington, the fly-away Irishman, with an easy eloquence and an unforced gaiety that are delightfully in character. As Sir Charles Foden Mr. Reddick Anderson acts neatly and effectively, submitting his best work in the one or two tender passages in the play. Miss Marie Daltra is eminently successful as the whimsical, but good-natured, Miss Foden; and Miss Grace Richardson does her best with the decidedly colourless part of Nora. Mr. Harry H. Rignold is amusingly Hebraic as Abraham Weinstein; Mr. George Ascott is sufficiently peppery as General Dunlop; and Miss Annie Goward evokes a good deal of laughter as Mrs. Hake. The smaller parts are capably handled, worthy of especial mention being the Professor Shale of Mr. Roy Byford, who not only looks the part, but, in a few words and with fewer gestures, submits a character-study which is, in its way, as near perfection as may be PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

On Monday, May 7,
New Version, by Herbert Shelley, of Mrs. Henry Wood's Novel, entitled
"EAST LYNNE."

A successful appeal to the playgoers of Poplar has been made this week by Miss Lilian Dundas's company in a new version of the popular novel named above. The piece has been judiciously modernised without impairing in any way the dramatic excellences of the powerfully-told story, and the sorrows of Lady Isabel have been set forth in a way that engrosses the audience from first to last. The arduous part of Lady Isabel falls to Miss Ethel Royale, who displays dramatic gifts of a high order. She presents the pathos of the rôle with irresistible feeling, and the emotional tones of her voice lend additional effect to the conception. There is room, perhaps, for more passion and power in her denunciation of the unscrupulous Levison, but her management of the difficult scene at the end is very poignant and impressive. Mr. George Mitchell is the Archibald Carlyle, and his portrayal of the husband whose manhood is crushed by an injustice beyond repair is quite complete. Mr. Mitchell's appearance is well in keeping with the part, to which his vigorous delivery gives added significance. Miss Leslie Dane is a winsome Barbara Hare, acting with sincerity and well-studied emphasis, and compelling the sympathy of all. A sound performance of Lord Mountsevern is given by Mr. Adam Alexander, who acts with rare delicacy in the affecting scene with the betrayed Lady Isabel, and Mr. James Jarrett cleverly affects the roving characteristics of Richard Hare. A polished rendering of the heartless Captain Levison is given by Mr. Hamilton Stewart, who impersonates the refinement of villainy, and his insidious tempting of his intended victim is combined effectively with the bitter malevolence which he has later to assume. The lighter element of the piece remains in the hands of Miss Corny Carlyle, a part in which Miss Esther Carthew develops a rich vein of drollery. She is an actress of great experience, and every humorous point in the part is made to tell. Assistance in the provision of fun is derived from Mr. Trueman Towers as the splenetic Justice Hare. He is skilfully made-up, and so well is the character acted that an explosion on the part of the worthy judge seems for ever imminent. Mr. Arthur G. Brown presents an amusing travesty of Lawyer Dill, and is responsible for much laughter; and as Obadiah Stiggins, the provision merchant, Mr. Angus Alexander reveals an aptitude for low comedy. Miss Jessie Dunbar is a neat and comely Susanne, speaking her lines piquantly, and Miss Jessie Goodman is vivacious and well-spoken as the maid Wilson. Miss Florence Melville brings out to distinct advantage the sentiment of the part of the devoted Joyce, and the Afy Halijohn of Miss Kathleen Maitland is also commendable. Willie Carlyle is prettily impersonated by little Mabel May, and little May Darling gives an engaging impersonation of the youthful Isabel. Mr. E. Richard Mansfield is the John Halijohn, Inspector Johnson is played by Mr. W. J. Mitchell, and the cast is completed by Mr. James Bowen and Mr. C. F. Jameson.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, May 7, the Comic Opera, in Three Acts, entitled
"LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE."

The attraction here this week is the popular comic opera Les Cloches de Corneville, which is admirably presented by Mr. E. St. Alban's opera company. The acting and singing throughout are of a very high order, and the approval of the audience on Monday evening was expressed in hearty cheers. Mr. E. St. Alban quickly impressed the audience by his powerful delineation of the miser Gaspard. Bringing his ripe experience to bear on the part, Mr. St. Alban acquitted himself with great success, and his acting in the château scene was the leading feature of the play, arousing the audience to great enthusiasm. Mr. Geo. A. Fox as the Marquis de Corneville gave a very natural representation, and delighted the audience with several songs, which fully earned the applause that greeted them. The talents of Mr. William Everard are fully employed in the rôle of Grenicheaux, a fisherman, and his excellent voice was heard to much advantage in his duet with Germaine. Mr. Fred Dark gave an excellent picture of the bumptious Bailie, and kept the audience in continuous merriment throughout. He was ably seconded by Mr. Richard Martin as Gobo. An ideal Germaine was seen in Miss Marion Ayling, who played the part with pronounced success. Possessing a beautiful voice, Miss Ayling rendered her songs with great expression, and altogether contributed a pleasing performance. Miss May Bradbury was an exceedingly vivacious Serpolette, and her singing and acting gained much applause. Miss L. Rhodes was thoroughly satisfactory as Christophe; and the Misses Seymour, Humphries, Carmens, St. Clair, Templeton, and Smithson were excellent as "village girls." Much of the success of the play was due to the efficient chorus, whose rendering of the concerted pieces left nothing to be desired, and reflected great credit on the musical director, Chevalier Legrand. Mr. J. Capell is the courteous acting-manager for Mr. E. St. Alban.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, May 7,
Charles Gounod's Opera,
"FAUST."

This is the second week of the Moody-Manners Opera company's visit to Notting Hill Gate, and it is gratifying to record that they have been received with intense enthusiasm, and crowded houses have been the order of the day. Let us hope equal success will attend their enterprise in the summer season at the Lyric. The performance of Gounod's charmingly melodious opera of Faust, in which the roses of romance, scattered broadcast, relieve the dull grey tints of tragedy, proved most delightful and engrossing, and repeated encores testified to the approval of the audience. Mme. de Vere is a most graceful and charming Margarita, and contributes a very beautiful and moving embodiment of the hapless girl. Her high notes are deliciously clear and bell-like, and her lower compass remarkably powerful, proving the wonderful range of her voice. Her rendering of the "Jewel Song" provoked tumultuous applause; her love duets in the garden scene, and her passionate outburst in the prison scene were gems of melody. Mr. Wilson Pembroke, as Faust, not only sings exquisitely—his rendition of "Oh, dwelling pure and lowly," among others, being superb—but he acts with artistic fancy and dramatic fervour. Mr. Charles Manners is a magnificently imposing and saturnine Mephistopheles, with his mocking laugh and his haughty mien, and his singing of the drinking-song in Act II., and the serenade in Act IV., stamp him as a finished actor as well as a fine singer. Mr. Lewys James is an exceptionally good Valentine, acting with dramatic power, and singing delightfully; and Miss Olive Westwood is a most engaging Siebel, and sings her two songs very sweetly and sympathetically. Miss Alexander is well in the picture as Martha; and Mr. G. King is good as Wagner. So excellently was the spirited soldiers' chorus given in Act IV., that it had to be repeated. Mr. Cuthbert Hawley conducted. On Tuesday Mme. Fanny Moody and Mr. Wilson Pembroke appeared in Lohengrin, Il Trovatore (Mme. de Vere and Joseph O'Mara) on Wednesday, Carmen (Mme Zelie de Lussan) on Thursday, Eugene Onegin (Mme. Fanny Moody, and Messrs. Wilson Pembroke, Lewys James, and Charles Manners) on Friday, and to-day's matinée Tännhauser (Mme. de Vere, Messrs. Joseph O'Mara, and Wm. Dever) and evening The Bohemian Girl (Mesdames Kate Anderson and Olive Westwood, and Messrs. John Child, Lewys James, and Charles Manners). Mr. Chapman Huston is the genial general-manager of the company, of which he is justly proud, and Mr. J. H. Batson is a most efficient stage-manager.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, May 7,
the Operetta, in Four Acts, by J. Lateiner, with Music by Fridzel, entitled
"GABRIEL."

The Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company presented on Monday evening Lateiner's operetta of Gabriel, which had a fine reception from a well-filled house, the audience following with keen interest the story in its many stages of progression. Although the piece is somewhat impressive, it gives many opportunities for acting of the highest order, of which the members of the company are fully capable. The music is bright and tuneful, and the well-drilled and large chorus give ample evidence of careful rehearsal; while the scenery and mounting, together with the picturesque Austrian dresses, all help towards making the play one of the most successful given during the present engagement. Mme. Rose Waxman wins great favour as Dinele, her forcible, clever impersonation being most effective, and gaining warm appreciation. Mr. Marinhof gives a vivid and stirring portrayal of Herzog Albricht the First, whose scheming adviser Adrian is ably interpreted by Mr. J. Fineberg. The comedy of Mr. J. Scherman is bright and unforced, and by his characterisation of the Court jester Fritz creates much merriment. Mr. M. D. Waxman scores a great success as Gabriel, his strong, manly exposition meeting with warm approbation. Miss Bryh imparts plenty of humour into the part of Chinke, and Mr. S. Schilling is amusing, although slightly tedious, as Pinke. A capital character-study of Dr. Abrahams is given by Mr. Shtreng, and a vigorous and handsome Ralf is seen in Mr. Raitz; while the necessary dignity as the Judge is well expressed by Mr. Katz. Good performances of Benhador, The Broken Hearts, The Hero of Jerusalem, The Jewish Hamlet, and Sulamith, have been given during the week.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, May 7,
the Comic Opera, in Three Acts, by Patrick Bidwell, Composed by Clarence Lucas and K. Ernest Irving, entitled
"PEGGY MACHREE."

Peggy Machree is paying a return visit to the Alexandra this week, the company being under the direction of Mr. Charles E. Hamilton. Since the opera was last seen here, with Miss Marie Dainton and Mr. Denis O'Sullivan in the principal parts, it has undergone considerable alteration and revision. The opera is played in three charming scenes, and the picturesque and handsome dresses add materially to the production. Miss Claudia Lasell now appears in the title-rôle, and, judging from the applause bestowed upon her, evidently plays the part to the entire satisfaction of her audience. Mr. Vernon Davidson makes a picturesque and romantic hero of Barney Trevor, and sings adequately. Mr. Ralph Lynn succeeds in extracting a fair amount of humour from the part of Sir Lawrence Borthwick; and a sound and amusing performance of the piper Michael comes from Mr. Dan Fitzgerald. The singing of Mr. John Morley as Sergeant Bampton is among the most agreeable features of the production, and he scores with every musical number that is allotted to him. The uncanny Scot, Alexander M'Dougall, of Mr. Milroy Cooper is an artistic and clever performance; and Mr. Marc Macdermott imparts the necessary domineer and swagger to Captain de la Cour. Miss Blanche Astley plays, sings, and dances with considerable vivacity as Molly; and as Mme. de la Cour, Emily Pryor, and Moira, Misses Doris Kelvey, Dorothy Garden, and Madge Avery do satisfactory work. The chorus and musical arrangements are under the direction of Mr. K. Ernest Irving.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, the Drama, by W. G. Wills, entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

The company from the Scala Theatre is appearing here this week in this powerful play, which continues to command good houses. Thanks to the general excellence of the artists and the effective staging of the play, Kingston playgoers have had the opportunity of seeing it at its best. The part of the Emperor Napoleon, around whom the interest chiefly centres, is played by Mr. Frank Lister, who not only looked "le petit caporal" to the life, but gave an exposition of the part that would have satisfied the most exacting students of the character of that great man. Miss Edith Cole appears as Josephine, of whose conception of the part it is almost impossible to speak in terms of too high praise—praise that was unstintingly bestowed upon her by the onlookers. Another successful bit of acting was that of Miss Clara Earle as Stephanie; and Miss Elizabeth Watson acquitted herself well in the part of Marie Louise. Commendation was also earned and bestowed upon Miss Irena Ford, Miss Joan Vaughan, and little Miss Marion Ryder, the latter of whom made a very creditable appearance as the boy King of Rome. The success of the play was materially assisted by Mr. T. P. Haynes as Grimaud, the innkeeper; by Mr. Geo. W. Cockburn as the Marquis de Beaumont; and by the Misses Edith Wilsden and Helena Meadows, and Messrs. George Howard, St. George Frere, and Frederick Powell, who ably filled subordinate parts.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, May 7, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Miles Wallerton and Frances Gilbert, entitled "AN ABANDONED WOMAN."

Mr. Harry Foxwell and company are presenting the above drama this week, it being the first visit to this theatre. The authors have been content to construct a drama built on conventional lines, which will doubtless commend itself to that large section of the playgoing public who derive enjoyment from this class of play. A good company has been engaged by Mr. Foxwell. Miss Georgette Thierry as Ninon (the title-rôle) gave an intense and faithful portrayal of an unpleasant type of woman, and was the recipient of much applause. Eleanor Dean, the heroine, was sympathetically depicted by Mrs. Foxwell, who made much of the part. Miss Ruby Romer as Sally Sloper was responsible for the lighter element in the play, and was very successful in her efforts to amuse. Mr. Harry Foxwell as Captain Seaton gave a bold and manly impersonation of the much-tried hero, his acting making a favourable impression. Mr. G. Gormley as Seaton's father acted a small part very commendably. Mr. J. Buller as Phillipe Malvoisin gave a capital performance. Mr. Norman Morris as Pierre and Mr. Nelson Ford as Robert Saunders were adequate in small parts. Mr. Russell Boyne as Paddy Boyle was amusing in an Hibernian rôle; and Mr. Fred Park as Sammy was a valuable ally in provoking hilarity. The remainder of the company were satisfactory, and the scenery and mounting on an exceptionally lavish scale. A fairly good house witnessed the performance, and extended a cordial reception to the play and players.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, May 7, the Drama, by Sutton Vane, entitled
"THE SPAN OF LIFE."

This week we have a return to exciting melodrama in Mr. Sutton Vane's well-known piece The Span of Life. The production is admirably played by Mr. Arthur Carlton's company, and proves greatly to the taste of the audience. Mr. Sanderson Moffat gives a manly and convincing portrait of the hero, Richard Blunt, and meets with a deservedly favourable reception. Mr. R. S. Trelawney submits a capital impersonation of Dunstan Leech, a villain of the deepest dye; Mr. Walter Dale supplies a welcome element of comedy as Nutty Brown, and is responsible for much merriment. He also introduces a capital song. Mr. Edwin T. Kisby gives a neat character sketch as the lighthouse-keeper, Joshua Gurnet; Messrs. Fred Almo, John Almo, and Alix Almo made the most of the parts of Dismal Brown, Tipton Brown, and Dapper Brown respectively, and arouse the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm in the third act when they form "a human bridge" to enable the heroine to escape over the chasm. Miss Phyllis Hamilton plays well as the hapless Kate Heathcote, thoroughly enlisting the sympathy of the audience by the excellence of her acting; Miss Kitty Russell is lively and amusing as the faithful Shrove Tuesday; Mrs. H. Russell is a dignified Mrs. Jelf; Miss Phyllis Graham proves herself a clever child actress as Cecil Jelf; and Miss Mary Moffatt presents a pathetic picture as little Cecil Blunt. Neat character sketches are given by Mr. Bob Bogan as Inspector Ferguson, and Mr. J. Petersfell as Ayrek. The scenery and effects are quite beyond reproach.

GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, May 7, the Play, in Four Acts, Adapted by Birkett Winning, from Alphonse Daudet's Novel, entitled "SAPHO."

The play at Fulham this week is a new stage-version of Daudet's famous novel, specially prepared by Birkett Winning, in which Miss Annie Bell and her company are appearing. Miss Bell assumes the title-rôle, and does well enough in this difficult and exacting part, bringing out the complex character of the woman with much care. Mr. Pringle Roberts as Jean Gaussin, the young man from the country who falls into her toils, supports her ably, putting plenty of spirit into the scenes of love and jealousy. As Father Legrand Mr. Oswald Lingard scores a success, and raises many a laugh. Mr. G. Antley is to be congratulated on a highly finished performance of Cesaire, his impersonation of Jean's gay uncle being as clever a piece of work as anything in the whole play. Mr. H. Langford as Flamant, Mr. R. A. Greene as Caoudal, and Mr. Lawrence Kingley as Déchelette, are all satisfactory, particularly the last-named. Little Miss Doris Graham as the child Joseph acts with spirit and ability; and Miss Florence Graham acquits herself well as Machaume.

LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, May 7, the Drama, by Arthur Jefferson, entitled
"LONDON BY DAY AND NIGHT."

A play full of thrilling incidents, relieved by occasional flashes of humour, cannot fail to be appreciated, and therefore this week's drama at the Lyric is being played before large audiences with great success by the stock company. The part of Richard Thorneycroft (one which requires careful handling) is excellently acted by Mr. C. F. Collings. Admirable, too, is Mr. Bert Morley as Captain Edgar Thorneycroft. Miss Ida Taylor as Dick, the boy waif, acts with great pathos, and quite wins the hearts of the onlookers. A very fine piece of acting is given by Mr. Lewis Gilbert, in the character of Gideon Snake, a solicitor of shady reputation. He is ably assisted by Miss Marie Clavering, as Gideon's wife. The humour is supplied by Mr. Harvey White, who, as Nicodemus Sneezer, keeps the audience in roars of laughter; and Miss May Seton, who, in the part of Marie Pink, causes much amusement. Miss Madge Morley is a pathetic, yet charming, Beatrice Thorneycroft; while Mr. A. P. Kane deserves great praise in his rôle of her sailor lover. In the hands of Mr. J. E. Manning and Mr. Fred Waller are placed the parts of the Governor and Warder of Portland Prison; they give them an excellent rendering. A word of commendation is due to Mr. George Ellis, who is responsible for two or three of the smaller characters, and also to Messrs. Ashton Winslow, Albert Sumner, and Misses Bertha Baker, Nell Gilmore, and Julie Adams, who, in minor parts, give able assistance.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, May 7, the Moral Play, by Nita Rae, entitled
"THE SINS OF A CITY."

Miss Winifred Maude and company, under the direction of Mr. Victor Du Cane, presented on Monday evening, at the Dalston Theatre, the play entitled The Sins of a City. The performance was repeated on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and at the Thursday matinée. Miss Winifred Maude, known first in the play as Seaweed and subsequently as Norah, proved to be one of the most interesting—if not actually the most interesting—personage in the piece. Her acting gained for the worthy woman she represented the sympathy and goodwill of the audience. Miss Marie Lyons played Lesbia with good effect; Miss Jessie Mason made a typical Scotch fisherwoman; and Miss Jenny Hackett cut a quaint figure as Midge, an eccentric maid-servant. She embellished her impersonation with a song and dance. Mr. Royce Carleton was quietly effective as Sandy McDonald; Mr. Edward Smith was Donald McIvor; and Mr. Norton Shields appeared first as Joe Woodleigh and subsequently as Jasper Woodleigh, his twin brother, representing the second-named character with the requisite force. Mr. Austin Milroy as Ralph Blackwater, and Mr. Victor Du Cane as Isaac Levi respectively embodied the concentrated villainy and comicality of the play, Mr. Du Cane being at times quaintly diverting as the Jew. The second piece played during the week has been the musical comedy drama, by Tom Craven, entitled The Stowaway.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, May 7, the Drama, in Five Acts, by Wilson Barrett entitled
"THE GOLDEN LADDER."

Considerable interest has been aroused this week at the Standard by the performance by Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds' company of the above exciting and heart-touching drama. The majority of the hard work falls upon the shoulders of Mr. Beresford Whitcomb as the Rev. Frank Thornhill. This part suits him admirably, and his presentation of it is much appreciated. Mr. Joseph Rowlands, a droll Samuel Peckaby, raises many a hearty laugh by his humour. A better portrayal of Michael Severn could not be wished for than that supplied by Mr. J. Milne Taylor. The callous nature of the man is effectively pictured, and Mr. Taylor's whole performance is a conspicuous success. Mr. Graham Winsford ably depicts the rascally Greek adventurer, Peranza; and Mr. Harry Belford is well placed as Jim Dixon. Mr. T. Lionel Ellis has but a short part in that of Mr. John Grant, but does all that is possible with it. A careful character-study is contributed by Mr. Edward McLean as the Yorkshire manufacturer, Noah Learoyd; Mr. Eric Thompson is a satisfactory Rao; Mr. Hartland Rowe fittingly portrays Lieut. Valnois of the French Navy; Captain Jackson finds a capable exponent in Mr. Frank Martin; and Mr. Stephen France speaks his lines clearly and well as the Rev. W. Stanley. Miss Eva Moss scores a success as Lilian Grant; Miss Nellie Graham provides plenty of amusement as Mrs. Peckaby; Miss Teresa Haynes plays with energy and skill as Mrs. Dixon; Victoria Alexandra Peckaby is humorously portrayed by Miss Jessie Gillette; and a charming performance is provided by Miss Holly Haslewood as Lily.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, May 7, the Play, in Four Acts, by Hall Caine, entitled
"THE PRODIGAL SON."

The first visit of Mr. Arthur Collins's company in the famous Drury Lane production is proving very attractive. The piece is admirably acted by an exceptionally strong cast, and is meeting with a most flattering reception at each representation. Miss Alma Murray as Anna gives a powerful and highly artistic rendering of the part, and her ability is warmly recognised. Miss Lily Hall Caine plays the dual rôle of Thora and Elina (mother and daughter), being particularly good as Thora. Miss Cecil Cromwell is an excellent Helga; Miss Mima Renouf plays Margaret well; and Miss Emily Grove is very good indeed as Marta. Miss Fisher as Madame Pandher and Miss Kathleen Kellie as Gudrun are both well placed. Mr. Henry George as Stephen plays in his usual powerful and incisive style, and makes an excellent impression. The same remark applies to Mr. Henry Renouf, who is responsible for Magnus. Mr. Renouf has a high reputation among the frequenters of this theatre for the sterling work he has done. Mr. Norman Partriege presents a clever and attractive portrait of Oscar Stephenson; Mr. Frank Collins is very good indeed as Oscar Neilson; Mr. Howard Russell as Dr. Olsen is excellent; as is Mr. Fred Grove as the Pastor.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, May 7,
the Comedy, in Three Acts, by R. C. Carton, entitled
"PUBLIC OPINION."

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, in Public Opinion, is this week paying a first visit to Stratford, and the highly amusing situations which arise out of Pansy Bligh's love affairs are being keenly enjoyed by local playgoers. Mr. George Giddens, in his original part of Horace Wibsey, brings much ability to bear upon a rôle which suits this clever comedian immeasurably. Mr. William Hargreave's ripe experience enables full justice to be done to the part of Mr. Mulley; and Mr. George Mallett makes the most of his opportunities as Sir Babbington Mulley. A capital performance comes from Mr. Ernest Ruston as the blustering, peppery Spencer Traughton; Mr. Harold West smartly enacts Viscount Poffley; and Lord Percy Kilgour is very appropriately played by Mr. Andrew Jones. Miss Emma Hutchison plays with fluency and distinction as Lady Diana Colonshaw; and Miss Lilian Hallows is always vivacious and pleasing as the coquettish Pansy Bligh. Miss Mary Mallalieu makes a charming and graceful Phyllis Dagenham; and Miss Alice Burnett does well as the servant, Charlotte. A comedietta, in one act, entitled The Strategem, serves admirably as a curtain-raiser, the characters in which are capitally undertaken by Miss Lilian Hallows as Angela Pinker; Mr. Harold West as Lord Bernard; Mr. Templar Powell as Mr. Rennell Paton; Mr. C. J. Barker as a butler; and Mr. C. B. Wentworth as a chauffeur.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, May 7, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Fred L. Connynghame and Frank Price, entitled
"A MOTHER'S LOVE."

With a tender title like A Mother's Love, it is only to be anticipated that a story of domestic interest is unfolded rather than the portrayal of sensational incidents, and this popular theme proved much to the liking of those present at the Stratford Theatre Royal on the night of our visit. The piece is well written and cleverly contrived, though one rather discordant note is the somewhat crude presentment of a complete grave in the churchyard scene, which could with advantage be modified by having the grave reversed, as the scene has also to do duty for a comic interlude. Mr. Arthur Rose plays with expression and conviction as the Rev. Paul Wingate; and Mr. Charles Draycott portrays the villainous Geoffrey Mannering in light, cynical style which is very galling to the occupants of the gallery. Mr. Fred L. Connynghame as the ubiquitous tramp, Mat Ruddock, has abundant scope for his drollery, and keeps the audience in the best of humours. Miss Violet Macaree contributes an entirely sympathetic and resourceful performance as the much-wronged Winnie Wingate; and Miss Laurie A. Pardy very charmingly enacts Ellaline Mervin. Mr. W. Barrett makes a smart and alert Joe Jackson; and the subsequent Mrs. Joe Jackson has a bright and amusing exponent in Miss Dorothy Monkhouse. A very intelligent performance as the child Marjorie comes from Miss Bertha Christobel, and minor parts are well played.

THE BRIXTON.

On Monday, May 7,
Shakespeare's Tragedy, in Five Acts, entitled
"OTHELLO."

Devotees of Shakespeare are attending in large numbers this week at the Brixton, where Mr. Edmund Tearle and his capable company are appearing in a round of Shakespeare's plays. On Monday evening Othello was presented, Mr. Tearle giving an admirable rendering of the title-rôle, speaking his lines with telling effect. The Iago of Mr. Wm. Gunning was a realistic interpretation and the audience frequently paid a well-deserved tribute to his clever performance of this difficult character. Mr. V. O. Crabtree gave an excellent rendering of Cassio; Mr. Spencer Geach was an ideal Roderigo; Mr. T. W. Benson must be congratulated on his spirited performance of Brabantio; the Duke of Venice was well represented by Mr. J. A. Keogh; and the Montano of Mr. John Victor merits great praise. A very charming portrait of Desdemona was presented by Miss Esther Tearle, who cannot be too highly commended for the delightful manner in which she presented one of the finest of Shakespeare's heroines. The Emilia of Miss Mary Campbell is another fine performance which won abundance of applause. Amongst the other artists who call for mention are Miss Mary Cleveland; Miss Clare Armitage as a messenger; Mr. Herbert Tawse as Lodovico; Mr. Saxon Thomas as Gratiano; and Mr. Richard Melton as Antonio. The scenery and dresses were elaborate, and the staging meritorious. On Tuesday Macbeth was produced, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday The Three Musketeers formed the bill, and for to-day's matinée Julius Cæsar is announced.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

On Friday, May 4,
Wagner's Opera, in One Act—Four Scenes,
"DAS RHEINGOLD."

Wellgunde	FRAULEIN BURCHARDT
Flosshilde	FRAULEIN GRIMM

The first performance of the first cycle of Der Ring der Nibelungen was given on Friday, May 4, in the presence of a large audience. In the mystical opening scene at the bottom of the Rhine the music of the Rhine Maidens was delightfully sung by Mme. Agnes Nicholls, Fräulein Burchardt, and Fräulein Grimm; while Mme. Kirkby Lunn's fine voice gave distinction to the part of Erda, Frau Knüpfer-Egli and Frau Reinl appearing to great advantage in the characters of Freia and Fricka. Herr Braun, who possesses a voice rich in quality and of ample power, undertook the part of Wotan in place of Herr Whitehill, and a newcomer, Herr Jörn, as Loge, gave a striking picture of the God of Fire, although his voice required greater flexibility to do full justice to the character. Herr Lieban again made a most effective Mime, and Herr Zador, aided by a powerful voice and fine presence, as well as an admirable make-up, made a dramatic and excellent Alberich. The ponderous music of the giants, Fasolt and Fafner, was well rendered by Herr Knupfer and Herr Raboth; while the splendid orchestra, under the watchful care of Dr. Hans Richter, did full justice to the imaginative music.

Saturday, May 5, Wagner's Opera
"DIE WALKURE," in Three Acts.

Siegmund	HERR KONRAD
Wotan	HERR WHITEHILL
Hunding	HERR KNUPFER
Brünnhilde	FRAU REINL
Sieglinde	FRAU KNUPFER-EGLI
Fricka	FRAULEIN GRIMM
Gerhilde	FRAULEIN BURCHARDT

Siegrune	MISS EDNA THORNTON

Rossweise	MISS WINIFRED LUDLAM

There was a disappointment for the early comers at Covent Garden on Saturday afternoon last, when Die Walküre, the second performance of the first cycle of the Ring, was given. It appeared that Frau Wittich was indisposed, and a substitute had to be found, and Frau Reinl undertook the part of Brünhilde. Although the absence of Frau Wittich was severely felt, justice must be done to Frau Reinl, who sang the music well, and acted with great intelligence. Herr Konrad, from the Cologne Opera, was the Siegmund, and made a successful first appearance, although showing a tendency to force the voice at times; his rendering of the character was manly and dramatic. The fine portions in the second act, where Siegmund is informed by Brünnhilde of his impending fate, were given with great expression, but the beautiful dawn duet in the first act suffered by the artist unduly striving after power. The pathetic part of Sieglinde was admirably realised by Frau Knüpfer-Egli, and Herr Whitehill, though not in his best voice, gave great dignity to the part of Wotan, his finest effort being made in the last act. Herr Knüpfer also proved a capital Hunding. Fräulein Grimm as Fricka and Mme. Agnes Nicholls as Helmwiege were thoroughly satisfactory, and the choruses of the Valkyries were given in a most brilliant manner. The stage effects reached the high standard to which the syndicate at Covent Garden has accustomed its patrons, and this year a great improvement has been made in the scenery of the second act. Throughout the evening the orchestra, under Dr. Richter, were in their finest form, the perfect balance of tone in the stormy passages and the delicate portions of this fine score being worthy of great praise.

Monday, May 7, at 5,
Wagner's Opera, in Three Acts,
"SIEGFRIED."

Brünnhilde	FRAU WITTICH
Erda	FRAULEIN GRIMM
Waldvogel	MME. AGNES NICHOLLS
Mime	HERR LIEBAN
Der Wanderer	HERR WHITEHILL
Fafner	HERR RABOTH
Alberich	HERR ZADOR
Siegfried	HERR KONRAD

On Monday evening Siegfried was given at Covent Garden, in the presence of a very large audience. Although musically Siegfried is the least fascinating in its earlier portions than the other dramas of the Ring, yet this only serves to enhance the extreme beauty of the forest music and the brilliant and majestic last act. Dramatically Siegfried contains many striking features, such as the forging of the magic sword and the famous fight with the dragon. One feature of Monday's performance caused some surprise—the auditorium remained lighted after the curtain was raised. No doubt this was done at the wish of a certain number of subscribers, who object to the Bayreuth traditions; indeed, a special notice has been put in the programme that "Owing to numerous complaints members of the audience are requested not to use electric lamps during the performance." The auditorium was, however, darkened during the third act. The performance on Monday was of all-round excellence. Herr Konrad, as the young hero, acted in a manly and effective manner, even if his vocal abilities did not reach any great height, while as Brünhilde Frau Wittich was brilliantly successful in the beautiful love duet. Herr Whitehill, as before, appeared to great advantage as Wotan, while seldom has a more fierce and dramatic Aberich than that of Herr Zador been seen at Covent Garden. Herr Lieban again won golden opinions for his excellent performance of the malicious Mime, and Mme. Agnes Nicholls sang charmingly as the Bird, Fräulein Grimm being equally good in the part of Erda. The stage manager may also be heartily commended, for his dragon proved the best ever produced. With fiery jaws, flaming green eyes, and smoke or steam issuing from its nostrils, it was indeed a "fearful wild-fowl," and its fight with Siegfried proved a most realistic and effective affair. The fire-girt rock in the last act also deserves praise. The fine orchestra, under the care of Dr. Richter, did full justice to the beautiful music Siegfried contains.

Wednesday, May 9, at 4.30.
"DIE GOTTERDAMMERUNG."

Siegfried	HERR BURGES
Gunther	HERR WHITEHILL
Hagen	HERR RABOTH
Alberich	HERR ZADOR.
Brünnhilde	FRAU WITTICH
Gutrune	FRAULEIN BURCHARDT
Waltraute	MME. KIRKBY LUNN
Woglinde	MME. AGNES NICHOLLS
Wellgunde	FRAULEIN KNUPFER-EGLI
Flosshilde	FRAULEIN GRIMM
1st Norn	FRAULEIN GRIMM
2nd Norn	FRAU KNUPFER-EGLI
3rd Norn	MME. AGNES NICHOLLS

On Wednesday afternoon Götterdämmerung, the majestic closing drama of the Ring, was given at Covent Garden. The Dusk of the Gods has one drawback, that of extreme length, the prologue and first act lasting two hours; but the solemn grandeur of the final scenes in the Ring and the beauty of the music, containing such fine passages as the funeral music attending the death of Siegfried, and the grand closing scene where Brünnhilde casts herself on the hero's funeral pyre, as well as the delightful song of the Rhine Maidens, make Götterdämmerung indeed a colossal work. A fine performance was heard on Wednesday, the superb orchestra under Dr. Richter giving every detail of the difficult score with the utmost finish, and all the resources of the stage-management of Covent Garden employed to make the scenic effects as perfect as possible. It was unfortunate that Herr Konrad was unable to appear owing to indisposition, as his place had to be taken under somewhat short notice by Herr Burges, and considering that Herr Burges had sung the part of Tristan the night before, it would be obviously unfair to severely criticise his performance of Siegfried. Frau Wittich did ample justice to her great vocal powers in the character of Brünnhilde, and Mme. Kirkby Lunn succeeded admirably in the part of Waltraute. Herr Whitehill appeared as Gunther, and sang with great intelligence, although it was evident that the artist was not in his best voice. Herr Raboth made a dramatic Hagen, if not quite vocally equal to the task, and Fräulein Burchardt proved a fairly efficient Gutrune. Herr Zador again made a striking Alberich; and the minor characters were effectively undertaken by Mme. Agnes Nicholls, Fräulein Knüpfer-Egli, and Fräulein Grimm.

"LUCKY 'LIZA."

A New Farcical Musical Play, in Three Acts by Fred Locke, Produced, for the First Time on any Stage, at the Paisley Theatre, on Monday, May 7.

Silas Slim	MR. DICKIE CLARE
Peter Pettitoe	MR. JAMES CHIPPENDALE
Paul Pettitoe	MR. LEONARD MAITLAND
William Biffins	MR. WILLIE REID
Barnaby Blatherwick	MR. A. W. THOMPSON
The Judge	MR. GEO. MINTO

P.C. McGurke	MR. BERT COLLINS
Marie Pettitoe	MISS BELLE RUSSELL
Virginia Blatherwick	MISS MADGE LOCKE
Eliza Bird	MISS GERTIE DOUGLAS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

For the first time on any stage there was produced at the Paisley Theatre on Monday a new farcical musical play, in three acts, under the above quoted title. The author is Mr. Fred Locke, of pantomime fame, and although the situations are at times pantomimical, the fun is not too boisterous. It, nevertheless, proves of a mirth-provoking character, but the quality depends quite as much upon the interpretation given to the various parts as on the subject matter itself. There is no story to speak of. Peter Pettitoe, a lawyer, possesses a servant in the person of Eliza Bird, who is heiress to a considerable fortune when a certain condition made in her uncle's will has been fulfilled. That condition is that she marries either before his death or within six months thereafter, and it is on the close of this six months that Pettitoe sees in his son Paul a way of securing the fortune. Unfortunately, the latter has formed an attachment for a brother lawyer's daughter, and, refusing to break it, Silas Slim walks in and scoops the pool as it were. At this point, however, it is discovered that Paul also has been left money, and so the scheming parents are left to be their own consolers. The scene opens in two villas up the Thames, and is entitled "A Nice Peaceful Afternoon." That it is eminently so is apparent when Blatherwick (the lawyer's) gardener, proceeds to skimp work by disposing of clods over into the neighbouring garden. Mr. Pettitoe happens to be the sole recipient, and the gardener having decamped, Blatherwick himself has to bear the brunt of the ensuing trouble. Matters are complicated by the substitution of other characters, and the fun waxes fast and furious till the curtain falls. In Act II. a breach of promise on the usual burlesque court lines is the attraction. Biffens, the gardener, has played havoc with 'Liza's heart, not knowing that there was a fortune with it, of course, and as defendant he succeeds in covering himself with glory as the mirth-provoker. The witness, Paul Pettitoe (the lawyer's son), who is one of the favourite dude characters, is also one of the amusing characters of this scene; whilst the judge himself is so irrelevant as to be extremely funny in his attempts to even up admiration for the pretty plaintiff with his notions of law. Act III. represents the Hotel Pomme de Terre, Dover, whither Slim and Eliza, and Paul and Virginia Blatherwick (the lawyer's daughter), have eloped. The irate parents arrive on the scene, but with a little manipulation and interchange of characters they are baffled, and the two couples are happily united in wedlock; Biffins, the gardener (now waiter), being meanwhile "biffed" into the bargain, after all his levying of tips for information.

Miss Gertie Douglas takes the title-rôle in a vivacious and thoroughly interesting manner. Her general air of knowingness is well suited to the part, and in her solos she had to respond with encores. Miss Madge Lock as Virginia Blatherwick, likewise took her part in a manner that showed careful study, and though of a different nature from the upholder of the title-rôle, her songs were infectious from a gallery point of view. Mrs. Pettitoe, the lawyer's wife, was played by Miss Belle Russell in approved old lady fashion, the tyrannising over old Pettitoe being hugely enjoyed. Mr. Dickie Clare was very successful in his rendering of Silas Slim. The part called for a good deal of innate humour, but it was capitally rendered. As Peter Pettitoe, a lawyer, Mr. Jas. Chippendale acted cleverly, and displayed considerable humour. Mr. Leonard Maitland impersonated the flaccid and idiotic Paul Pettitoe, the son, with considerable brilliancy. His perception of a dude's part was very clever, and called forth symptoms of the keenest appreciation. Mr. Willie Reid had the low comedy part of Biffins, into which he managed to put a good deal of humorous knockabout work. In the second and third acts he proved extremely funny, and was given a most appreciative reception. Mr. A. W. Thompson as Barnaby Blatherwick was on a par with Peter Pettitoe. He impersonated the crusty old gentleman with great ability, and in the various situations sustained the fun admirably. Other minor parts were well rendered, and the Astor trio of vocalists and dancers completed a cast which brought the merits of Lucky 'Liza before the public in a most effective way.

"LE ROI AVEUGLE" is the title of a two-act musical play brought out at the Opéra Comique, Paris. M. Hugues Le Reux, the librettist, was inspired by a Scandinavian legend, and shows us an old blind king seated on the rocks by the side of Hilda, his daughter. She sings to him, and whilst he is listening to her chant a Viking, charmed by her beautiful voice, scales the rocks and carries the girl off. Whilst the king is lamenting the loss of his child, the Viking reappears, holding Hilda in his arms, offering her to go back to her father or to stay with him. Hilda does not hear her father's voice nor his supplications. Her arms are round the neck of the handsome youth, and the two disappear for ever. To this story M. Février has written some appropriate music. Some of the numbers, especially "The voices of the sea," were much applauded, and the orchestration is in every way excellent.

THEATRICALS IN AUSTRALIA.

CHAT WITH MR. ALFRED DAMPIER.
(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

When a man has travelled in one country for thirty years, whatever he has to say about that country should surely be looked upon in the light of ex cathedrâ statements. Mr. Alfred Dampier, the well-known Australian actor and manager, tells us that he is acquainted with practically every plot of the ground between Port Elizabeth and the Gulf of Carpentaria. There is hardly a theatre in the wide region indicated that he has not played in.

And now Mr. Dampier is on one of his few-and-far-between visits to this country, bringing with him his wife and son and daughter. It is nine years since he was last here.

"Do you see much change, Mr. Dampier?"

"Scarcely any in the theatres, though of course some new ones have been built within a comparatively recent period. But take the actors—I still see the old faces. There is Henry Neville, looking as sound as ever; James Fernandez, with whom I had an engagement just before I left for Australia; and my old friend Edward Terry. No; it seems to me that in England the older the actor gets the more popular he becomes with the public. Even the managers appear to prefer the established favourites, so that the actors who have the good fortune to get into London can stay here."

"But in Australia the people like our prominent players?"

"Artists who have made a name in England may be sure of a welcome there. It is a curious thing that although Australia is such a young country and has such a small population, yet everyone goes to the theatre."

"I suppose you don't intend to settle down in England?"

"Well, I promised to go back to Australia, and would like to keep my word. Still, if anything turned up whereby I got an opening in England for one of my Australian plays I should be only too pleased to stop awhile. Although I have taken the trip over here by my doctor's orders, all the same, I do not want to rush away again without having done anything."

"You have not yet entirely given up acting, Mr. Dampier?"

"I was acting up to just before Christmas, and then had to relinquish it in consequence of ill-health. I travel with my own company throughout Australia, taking the theatres as I want them. If you ask me to mention one theatre in particular, I should say that I have been mostly associated with the Criterion, Sydney. My répertoire consists of drama and Shakespearean pieces, among them being Robbery Under Arms, The Bush King, The Power of Wealth (a dramatisation of Marie Corelli's 'Vendetta'), Monte Cristo, The Merchant of Venice, Hamlet, and Othello. My son, Alfred Dampier, jun., is a comedian, and both he and my daughter and wife take part in my plays.

"The Australian theatres? They are quite equal to anything we have here—magnificent places, even in New Zealand. The leading manager in the colony, as far as drama and musical comedy go, is Mr. J. C. Williamson, who holds the best theatres. Mr. Harry Rickards is the principal vaudeville manager. He and I are great friends, and I understand you will see him over here again in April. Up to the time of my sailing affairs theatrical were very bright. But I can assure you that anything which is well done in Australia is bound to prove remunerative. Managers there only run the successful London pieces, and they don't buy failures.

"'Australia,' says Mr. Dampier, 'is the land of romance.' He realises that in the bush and backblocks of Australia one might meet men of a type of character seldom seen elsewhere—shearers, station hands, boundary riders, shepherds, and the rest. Taking one remarkable instance, he mentions a mysterious recluse who had buried himself in the solitude of a station away in the back districts of New South Wales, on the banks of the Murray, and resolutely shut up his life's history in a sealed book. When the actor and his friend, the owner of the station, drove out to visit him one day, he was not at home, "but within the humble hut," says Mr. Dampier, "I noticed a complete set of Bohn's Classical Library, while on the table, lying open, face downward, was a well-thumbed edition of Homer." Nobody knew who this stranger was, hidden away in the solitudes, surrounded by his books, and making a livelihood by catching "love birds" and parrots, and sending them to the Sydney market for sale. The names in the books had been carefully erased, but there was enough to show that at one time he had occupied a higher and far different position in the world. Some years afterwards he was found lying dead in the bush, with his head on the stump of a tree, and his beloved Homer lying open on his breast. The man's history was never revealed, and no one knew even his name.

"And this is only one of many such instances. A little volume of Shakespeare, containing 'Macbeth' and 'Romeo and Juliet,' was once given me which had been found in the midst of a heap of bones away in the Northern Territory, in a desert. The poor fellow had probably died of thirst, and the only thing left to tell his story was this little book. What he was doing in that trackless waste nobody knew, but into that desert region he had taken his Shakespeare. All the interest of Australian life is not confined to bushranging stories merely. A friend once asked me 'What is there in the Australian bush to write about, where everything is so new?' My reply was simply that he should just go and see it, and come within the influence of its fascination. It is quite true that in the Old World you have an immense mass of material for the dramatist—you have the Napoleonic period, for instance, which has exercised so much influence upon dramatists and novelists—but I believe that Australia has its romances also."

Just before Mr. Dampier left Australia he was made the object of a popular demonstration on the part of playgoers and actors, a testimonial matinée being organised in his honour at Her Majesty's Theatre, Sydney. A huge crowd attended this "send-off" performance, and a big list of attractions was presented. Upwards of three hundred ladies and gentlemen associated with the Sydney theatres offered their services, among them being Mr. Harry Rickards' Tivoli Theatre company, Mr. W. Anderson's pantomime company, Mr. C. Holloway's dramatic company, and Mr. J. C. Williamson's Royal Opera company. Mr. Williamson, in a speech on the stage, stated that the idea of the matinée arose from the spontaneous desire of the leading Sydney managers to recognise in cordial fashion the departure from their midst of a highly esteemed colleague. The co-operation on the part of artists, musicians, and theatrical staffs had been unanimously hearty.

I HEAR from Vienna that a new drama, by Adolf Schwager, was produced at the Bürger Theatre in that city with the best results. It is another play written round a senior grammar-school boy, and dealing with the woes of early youth, of which type of piece we have been overdosed of late. The construction of Die Sittennote—the name of the drama—is reported to be particularly skilful, and the development of the plot interesting. At the Carl Theatre, Vienna, Hugo Kobler's new operetta, Der Rosenjüngling, met with a very cordial reception, the music being bright and melodious.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, May 10.—This is one of the best things in operettas we have heard for some time. It has been given for months past, both in Hamburg and Vienna, and it was reserved for the Hamburg Carl Schultze Theatre Company—under the management of Herr Monti—to introduce it to Berlin. Lehár's music is always pleasing and never trivial. There is a good deal of originality in The Lively Widow, as well as delightful melody, and there is not a dull moment from start to finish. The plot is hardly sufficient for three acts, but what there is of it is above the average. Hanna Glawari is the gay young widow of the title. She comes from the mystic land of Pontenegrin, and is at present in Paris to recruit herself with the twenty million francs her union with the aged Glawari has brought her. Hanna's experiences and adventures in the French capital are many. Baron Mirko Yeta, the Pontenegrin Ambassador, has orders to see that the native millions do not permanently leave—so to say—the land of their birth, and his diplomatic powers are tried to the utmost. Fortunately, however, Hanna comes across her former lover, Count Danilo Danilovitch—one of the secretaries at the Pontenegrin Embassy at Paris—and their whilom relations are gradually renewed. Danilo had not been able to marry Hanna when she was a penniless girl, and she fears that it is only her millions that attract him now; but after various tests of affection—through which Danilo comes out victorious—she accepts him, to their mutual happiness, and the chagrin of all the remaining suitors. Woven in between are plenty of amusing little episodes, and the fun never ceases. The interpretation was first rate, Fräulein Ottmann giving a delightful account of the name-part, while Herren Gustav, Matzner, and Kutzner proved themselves tenors of unusually good quality, and Herr Deutsch—an old favourite here—evinced his customary broad humour in the rôle of Baron Mirko. The mounting was exceedingly tasteful; all in all the evening may be written down a huge success. Herr Lehár conducted, and, together with artists and manager, received unbounded applause, a number of floral arrangements and laurel leaves being handed up.

ANOTHER operetta—the term burlesque is rightly added—has been produced at the Central. It is entitled, without any reason whatever, Das Narrenhaus (the madhouse), and is in three acts. The author and arranger is Herr F. Hopp, who has conceived the astonishing idea of wedding an utterly impossible book with music, after motives by Johann Strauss, sen. Were it not for the charming melodies of the "Waltz King," the work would have fallen terribly flat, for there is neither point nor fun in the libretto. An old curmudgeon of a guardian shuts up his young ward—whom he wants to marry—in his tumble-down house, from which she, of course, escapes. Fräulein Mia Werber—our original Geisha—scored her usual success in the chief rôle, and the remaining characters were mostly adequately sung, acted, and danced respectively.

AT the Deutsches one of Goethe's earliest plays has been revived with good results—Die Mitschuldigen, a one-act comedy, written with all the precocity of youthful genius, which Goethe, at a riper age, did not disclaim. It was capitally acted by Fräulein Höflich and Herr Engels, and Von Winterstein in the chief parts, and warmly applauded. The shorter play was followed by Molière's Tartuffe, which made a less favourable impression. Herr Frank Wedekind gave the name-part with as scant success as he acted in his own enigmatical play, Hidalla, at the Neues some months ago. Tartuffe itself has not escaped the ravages of time, and the character acted by Herr Wedekind was thoroughly uninteresting and unsatisfactory. Fräulein Wangel, too, played her rôle less naturally than usual; the best rendering of the entire cast was that of Dorine by Fräulein Heims. The piece met with a cordial reception, but the audience did not applaud it so heartily as they did Goethe's work.

SIGNOR SILVANO ISALBERTI, of the Scala Theatre, Milan, has been giving a very short season at the Theatre des Westens. He commenced his four performances with Giordano's opera Fedora, giving the part of Count Loris Ipanoff with quite exceptional fire and temperament. The young artist's voice is a powerful and well-trained tenor, the upper tones being particularly pleasing. Some of the German musical critics place Isalberti in the same rank with Tamagno and Caruso. He met with enthusiastic applause, which was only a just tribute to his admirable impersonation. The remainder of the cast sustained their respective rôles in a praiseworthy manner, the rôle of Princess Feodora Romazoff being especially well rendered by Miss Noxy King. This talented singer hails from South America, but she has studied here, and sings the language like a native. Miss King is the fortunate possessor not only of a beautiful voice, but a handsome face, and what is known as a good stage presence. Her career bids fair to be one of much success.

THE Royal Schauspielhaus is indulging freely in "guests." The latest is Fräulein Ria Ressel, a young actress of a good deal of promise, who has appeared in the rôles of Juliet and Gretchen to the satisfaction of public and critics. In the latter part she made the greater hit, and if appearances do not deceive, Fräulein Ressel will join the Royal Schauspielhaus company before very long.

A YOUNG English lady, Miss Helena Hartley, made a very successful début here recently, playing the part of Ophelia at the Berliner Theatre to Ferdinand Bonn's Hamlet. It was a matinée performance, and the large house was crowded, the audience proving very appreciative. Miss Hartley, who has studied with Fräulein Lindner—one of the leading actresses of the Royal Schauspielhaus—gave the rôle with much sympathetic expression and distinct histrionic talent. Her voice is thoroughly English in its well-rounded musical tones, and her appearance exceedingly pleasing. When one remembers the difficulties of what Mark Twain calls the "awful German language," the fact of a young English woman acting Ophelia in that tongue, faultlessly and intelligently, is alone worthy of comment.

HERR GEORG ENGEL'S latest play is a three-act comedy entitled Die Hochzeit von Poël. It has been accepted by Herr Schmieden, the new manager of the Neues, and will be simultaneously produced at the Deutsches Schauspielhaus in Hamburg.

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—In your notice of the Gaiety, Dundee, in last week's issue, you said the part of Dick Spencer was played by Lois Patey. It should have been—Yours faithfully, PATTIE FAIRLEY, Gaiety Theatre, Dundee.

THE AUSTRIAN EXHIBITION.

Earl's Court has been once more called into life and gaiety by the opening of the newest exhibition, in which all the principal features of Viennese and Tyrolese life are depicted. The exhibition was opened in state on Saturday by the Lord Mayor, who was accompanied by the Lady Mayoress. Arriving shortly before noon, the Lord Mayor was greeted by the Committee of Reception in the vestibule of the Warwick-road entrance; and, after proceeding to the Imperial Court, where the formal ceremony of inauguration took place, the civic party, with several distinguished visitors from abroad, made a partial tour of the grounds. The weather was all that could be desired, and large crowds availed themselves of the opportunity of making acquaintance with the Austrian Tyrol, the picturesque beauties of which have often been enlarged upon. Mountain, valley, and waterfall have all been realistically reproduced, and the jodelling and dancing of the mountaineers are everywhere to be heard and seen. The scenery is remarkably beautiful and well executed, the panoramas being the work of the Brothers Kautcky and the Brothers Rottenara. A salt mine and a brine lake are also available for exploration.

A panoramic description of the battle of Isel Mountain—the famous fight by Tyrolese Volunteers in defence of their country against French and Bavarian invaders in August, 1809—is graphically presented in the Western Gardens. Another formidable attraction is provided in the Cavern of the Sirens, where visitors are to be spellbound by a vision of beauty. The great lake on which peasant maidens propel home-made boats is sure to become popular, and by the Great Wheel, which stands in its customary position, visitors may still rise to dizzy heights. A bust of the Austrian Emperor stands in the Ducal Hall, and both here and in the Prince's Hall there is an extensive and imposing display of Austrian art, products, and manufacture which is sure to command interest and admiration. The food section includes a Vienna model bakery and a shop where sausages are made.

A Burlesque Operetta, entitled
"VIENNA BY NIGHT,"
Was produced at the Summer Theatre, on Wednesday afternoon.

Graf Niki Nikelburg	HERR HUBERT NEUMANN
Baron Rudi Zeiselburg	HERR WILLY HELFER

The production of this operetta by Herr Gabor Steiner's company should entice a goodly crowd of visitors to the Summer Theatre at Earl's Court. The music, arranged by Herr Joseph Hellmasberger, formerly orchestra leader of the Vienna Imperial Opera House, is of the most tuneful and lively order; we get catchy typical Viennese songs and most sprightly and enchanting dances.

The scene shows us an elegant Vienna night-resort, in which guests of all classes, and especially Viennese laundry girls, are passing the time in singing and dancing. When the guests have departed the proprietress, Minna Violetti, and her manager sing a charming love-duet, after which Lux, a private detective, comes in search of a runaway couple. In a short prose scene he asks the proprietress to point out some place in the establishment from which he can see all that goes on. Later, Countess Mizzi and her footman Jean appear, and in a spoken scene we learn that Mizzi has decided to go on the spree and have a good time with a stranger prior to her engagement. So it is to this night resort that her footman has secretly brought her. The young Count Niki, who has been for some time following the Countess without becoming aware of her identity, also turns up. The Count has no idea that he is in the presence of the bride who has been selected for him, and falls in love with the Countess. After Mizzi has sung a song characteristic of the peculiarities of Vienna ladies, fresh guests enter, among them being a gay spark, Draesike, who is also desirous of passing a lively evening. Of course, after a great deal of merry-making, all ends as it should do. The Countess throws off the mask before the Count, and gives him her hand in lasting troth, the curtain falling to the strains of Johann Strauss's waltz, "The Blue Danube."

Fräulein Ferry leaves a very pleasing impression with her performance of Minna, and her duet, "Seit ich dich geseh'n," with Herr Kraus, who takes the part of the manager, is a particularly delightful vocal effort. Then we have a very tuneful whistling performance by Herr Georg Tramer, who succeeds in putting character into his work, which, by the way, forms the accompaniment to a very attractive dance executed in smart fashion by fourteen young ladies attired in old-fashioned Vienna costume. Fräulein Koss is extremely vivacious and light-hearted as the Countess, and Herr Tuschl makes one laugh with his whimsicalities as the footman Jean. The duet, "Mizzi und der Jean," sung by these two artists, furnishes an agreeable vocal item, and is amusing withal. Another happy feature of the operetta is the rendering of "Nimm mich mit" by three good male voices. The dresses worn by the ladies are both beautiful and picturesque, and the scene from time to time affords an exceedingly pretty spectacle. For an hour's bright entertainment we can heartily commend Vienna by Night.

"HOUNSLOW HEATH."

Drama, in One Act, by H. F. Maltby, produced for the first time at the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, on Monday, May 7.

Cadbury	MR. H. F. MALTBY
Lindley	MR. ERNEST NOBLE
Pagley	MR. REGINALD FAVELL
A Traveller	MR. A. E. WYN WEAVER

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The above dramatic curtain-raiser went exceedingly well on its production at Plymouth on Monday. The rising of the curtain reveals the interior of a wayside inn on Hounslow Heath in the eighteenth century, and the conversation of the occupants—Lindley, the host, and Pagley, a hanger-on—turns upon the questionable exploits of the notorious highwayman, Cadbury. Soon after, amid a storm of wind and rain and the creaking of the gibbet chains outside, Cadbury arrives, and tells the tale of his early life. He nurses a bitter hatred against his whole family, with the exception of his twin brother, for whom he has the warmest affection on account of bygone kindnesses. During the conversation, when the storm is at its height, a well-dressed stranger seeks shelter at the hostelry. Cadbury, whose cupidity is excited, picks a quarrel with him, and a fight ensues. The stranger is killed, and, by a birthmark on his arm, Cadbury recognises his twin brother. The finish was well worked up by the performers, who deserve every credit. Mr. H. F. Maltby acted the highwayman with conspicuous feeling and sincerity; the brother was played with delicacy and finish by Mr. A. E. Wyn Weaver; and Messrs. Ernest Noble and Reginald Favell played the other parts admirably.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

THE flower of the theatrical profession will unite in the testimonial performance to Miss Ellen Terry, which is definitely arranged to take place at Drury Lane on Tuesday, June 12. All the members of the family bearing the honoured name will appear in the second act of Much Ado About Nothing, Miss Terry, of course, playing Beatrice. Mr. Beerbohm Tree will appear as Benedick, Mr. George Alexander as Claudio, Mr. Hermann Vezin as Leonato, and Mr. H. B. Irving as Don John, while many of the most prominent jeune premiers of the London stage will take part in the dances.

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM, supported by a "star" cast, will appear in scenes from The School for Scandal, and another interesting item will be Trial by Jury, which will be given by permission of Mr. W. S. Gilbert and Mrs. Carte. Mr. Gilbert has also undertaken to stage-manage the performance and to appear in the part of the Associate. Mme. Melba has kindly consented to sing during the afternoon. The prices of seats are as follows: Private boxes, 10 to 100 guineas; stalls, 5 guineas; grand circle, 2 to 3 guineas; first circle, 1 to 2 guineas; balcony, 7s. 6d. to 1 guinea; pit and amphitheatre (unreserved), 5s. and 2s. 6d. The box-office will be opened on the 21st inst., and in the meantime applications for seats by letter will be dealt with in priority of application.

EXAGGERATED statements have appeared in certain papers with respect to the last days of Miss Olga Brandon, whose death took place at Camden Town last Tuesday. Miss Brandon had somehow fallen "out of the running" in her profession, and had been for long out of engagement; but in her last years she was helped and comforted by many loving and faithful friends, and her suffering was not from want, but from the pangs of disease, which she bore with heroic fortitude.

MR. CYRIL MAUDE has finally settled upon Monday, May 21, for the production of Shore Acres in conjuction with the Messrs. Shubert. Mr. Maude will be supported by Messrs. Edmund Maurice, Frank Mills, Cooper Cliffe, W. Cheeseman, Wm. Calvert, F. Percival Stevens, Owen, Edmund Lea, Masters Walter Cross and Reggie Andrews, and Misses Mary Rorke, Augusta Haviland, Edith Barwell, Kate Harwood, Betty Green, Maisie Richardson, Dolly Stamp, Francis Welstead, and Alice Crawford.

The scene of the popular American play is now laid in Cornwall. The commissariat department is an important one, realism being secured at the Waldorf by the inclusion in the "properties" of a hot roasted turkey, with equally genuine cranberry sauce and vegetables, which will be served to the company in one scene. An electrical cooking apparatus has been specially installed for the purpose.

THE secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund gratefully acknowledges the receipt of £2 10s. from the Misses Davies Webster and Rose Cazalet, that sum having been devoted to the Fund from a collection made at a private dramatic and musical entertainment promoted by the above-mentioned ladies in their desire to assist the theatrical charities.

MR. GEORGE ALEXANDER has given his reasons for advocating the abolition of the shilling gallery at morning performances. "I think matinée audiences," says Mr. Alexander, "are drawn from people who go to the pit and gallery and could afford to pay a great deal more. I would not on any account raise the price of the gallery at the evening performance. It is then that the workers come. They cannot afford to pay more than a shilling for their enjoyment." Mr. Alexander favours the opinion that the pit should be abolished in favour of the American plan of arranging the floor seats in theatres. "The whole floor should be given up to the more expensive seats," he said. "In American theatres the floor seats are often at a uniform price, and whenever back rows are sold at less than the front rows the difference in price is not very great. Some such plan as that, I think, should be adopted here."

MR. LENNOX PAWLE who, by the exigencies of his part in The Little Cherub and A Girl on the Stage at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, has had to appear in wet clothes, as the result of a plunge into the water, carried out the incident realistically on Tuesday. He was out at Hendon, and a fence at the water's edge against which he was leaning gave way, and the popular comedian fell in. Mr. Pawle was not fished out with a boat-hook, as report says, but did his own swimming and floating; and after pulling himself out he lost no time in getting dried. Curiously enough, only a few hours before he started for Hendon it was arranged at the theatre that the wet clothes' incident should be omitted.

MR. BEERBOHM TREE will produce Mr. Michael Morton's new play, Colonel Newcome, at His Majesty's, on Tuesday, the 29th inst. The principal characters will be played by Mr. Tree, Mr. Basil Gill, Mr. Lyn Harding, Mr. Hubert Harben, Miss Marion Terry, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, and Mrs. Tree. The run of Nero will terminate on the 26th, and during the intervening days the theatre will remain closed.

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER will occupy the chair at the sixty-first annual dinner of the Royal General Theatrical Fund, which will take place at the Hôtel Métropole on the 24th inst. The Church will on this occasion become associated more closely than usual with the stage, the toast of "The Drama" being entrusted to the Bishop of Ripon. Sir Squire Bancroft will respond, and other speakers will include the Marquis of Granby, Mr. J. Comyns Carr, and Mr. Edward Terry. This old-established fund, one of the most beneficent of all public institutions, deserves the hearty support of the theatrical profession at large, and it is to be hoped that this year's function may establish a record.

MR. JAMES WELCH has happily recovered from his recent indisposition, and will go on tour on Monday, starting at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle. A new play by C. H. E. Brookfield, entitled Dear Old Charley, will be produced, preceded by The Lady Burglar. Mr. Welch's tour, which will embrace Sheffield and other towns in the Midlands, will last about seven weeks.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY'S annual London season, which commences at the Imperial Theatre on Saturday with the production of Boy O'Carroll, is strictly limited to four weeks. Subsequently the favourite actor will take a well-earned holiday, prior to the commencement of his lengthy autumn tour of the provinces, a feature of which will be an elaborate revival of The Corsican Brothers.

MR. W. D. FORSDIKE, the managing-director of the Alexandra Theatre, Sheffield, asked the Plays Committee at the Annual Licensing Meeting recently if they would remove the restriction prohibiting smoking in theatres. The committee considered the matter, but stated that they could not see their way to grant the concession asked. Mr. Forsdike, however, made another appeal, and at a meeting of the City Council on Wednesday the chairman of the Stage Plays Committee stated that the committee had unanimously agreed at a meeting that day to reconsider the question.

WE regret to announce the death of Mr. H. J. W. Dam, who will be well remembered as the author of The Shop Girl, the forerunner of many musical comedies produced by Mr. George Edwardes at the Gaiety. Mr. Dam, who also wrote several other pieces for the American stage, was a Californian by birth, and died at Havana from cancer. He married, in 1892, Miss Dorothy Dorr, an American actress, who, with two sons, survives him.

IN the Court of Bankruptcy on Thursday, before Mr. E. L. Hough, Official Receiver, the first meeting of creditors was held under a receiving order made in the case of G. H. W. Burroughs, theatrical lessee, carrying on business at the New King's Theatre and the White Horse Tavern, Pitfield-street, Hoxton. The debtor attributed his insolvency to falling off in the theatre takings owing to competition, also to losses in other theatrical enterprises, and in a wood-pulp venture. He stated that the New King's Theatre held 1,500 persons, the following being the prices:—Gallery 2d., pit 3d., balcony 4d., and circle 6d. A statement of affairs was not lodged, but the liabilities were estimated at from £1,300 to £1,500, and the chairman said he feared that it was a hopeless case for creditors. The debtor consented to an adjudication, and the matter remained in the Official Receiver's hands.

MR. EDWARD TERRY has accepted from Mr. Julian Rochefort a new farcical comedy, entitled The Good Old Firm, the production of which he has in view during his autumn tour. Mr. Terry will be seen in the character of a highly respectable country solicitor, who is thrust by fate into the midst of a race meeting, where the misadventures which befall him are of the most mirthful description.

MR. CHARLES FRY will give the second of his series of Shakespearean matinées at the Court Theatre this afternoon, when The Merry Wives of Windsor will be presented. The programme for next Saturday will consist of King Richard the Third.

Two important premiers are underlined for this evening, which will witness the production at the Savoy by Miss Lena Ashwell of The Shulamite, the cast of which was given in this column last week. The play, it may be added, will be produced by Mr. Edward Sass. The other novelty, particulars of which have already been given here, is that of Raffles, the successful American play, which will make its first appearance in England at the Comedy to-night.

THE Princess Louise has been primarily instrumental in organising four amateur dramatic performances in aid of the Regimental Homes and Benefits Agency, of which Her Royal Highness is president. The first two take place at Aldershot on Tuesday, and the next will be at Daly's Theatre (by kind permission of Mr. George Edwardes), on Thursday, followed by a matinée at Windsor on Friday. The programme on each occasion will consist of Mr. Alfred Sutro's duologue, A Marriage Has Been Arranged, and Justin H. McCarthy's comedy, My Friend the Prince. At the matinée at Daly's Theatre Miss Adrienne Augarde, Miss Zena Dare, Miss Edna May, Miss Olive May, Miss Olive Morelle, Miss Gertie Millar, Miss Denise Orme, and Miss Ruth Vincent have kindly promised their services in the selling of programmes.

THE King was present at the Royal Opera on Tuesday evening, and listened to part of the performance of Tristan und Isolde. This was His Majesty's first visit to Covent Garden this season.

MR. H. B. BRANDRETH has been appointed by Mr. Robert Arthur acting-manager of his Kennington Theatre. Mr. Brandreth has had a varied experience, his record including sixteen years with Mr. William Greet, stage-manager to Sarah Bernhardt, general-manager at the Bouffes Parisians, and considerable service under Mr. Tom B. Davis.

MISS RUTH VINCENT, who made her appearance at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Saturday in A Girl on the Stage, the new version of The Little Cherub, was so overpowered by the excitement consequent upon the new production that she fainted on the stage. The popular young actress was just about to begin in the last act her song "Laughter and Love," for which the stage had been cleared, when she was seen suddenly to sway to and fro and fall to the ground. Willing assistance was promptly forthcoming, and the lady was carried to the wings. Miss Vincent, who had scored quite a triumph in her new part, speedily recovered, and was able to reappear before the end of the play, when she received a sympathetic ovation. "Laughter and Love" has since been sung by Miss Vincent with her customary charm.

SHAKESPEARE in the school was the subject of the conference held under the auspices of the London Shakespeare League, at University College, on Saturday afternoon. Dr. Kimmins, chief inspector of the Education Department of the London County Council, who presided, said he thought it was of extreme importance that they should take carefully into consideration the marvellous natural romantic instinct of young children, and see how best they could take advantage of it. It was a melancholy fact that in many cases the first introduction which a boy or girl had to Shakespeare in the school was that of reading up a play, together with copious notes, for examination purposes. An amusing and instructive address was given by Professor Israel Gollancz, who said the question which they had to consider was how Shakespeare could best be made a real living and happy possession of all the boys and girls who attended school. He read a letter from a teacher in a secondary school who said that he knew of a master who always set his imposition in Shakespeare, and the boys spent their wet evenings in writing out Macbeth, and sold the manuscript to their comrades at 1d. per hundred lines. There could be no doubt about it that too often the text of Shakespeare's books became a mere pretext for wasted learning. Every school ought to have its yearly Shakespeare festival.

DR. W. H. CUMMINGS, principal of the Guildhall School of Music, presided on Saturday at the third annual conference of the Girls' School Musical Union, the object of which is "the advancement of music in secondary schools for girls throughout the British Empire and the discussion of matters connected therewith." The meeting, which was a representative one, was held at the Guildhall School. Mr. W. H. Hadow, who was unable to be present, was re-elected president for the ensuing year. Dr. Cummings, dealing with the question of "The Training of Taste," which was to have formed the subject of Mr. Hadow's presidential address, observed that taste was a matter of education and environment, and must be entirely influenced by what people were accustomed to. In cultivating taste it was necessary to take the best and acknowledged models of the past and study them. The modern product should be measured by these standards. Mr. Plunket Greene delivered an address on "The Choice of Songs," in the course of which he said that there were a number of institutions producing splendid musicians who had to starve or give the British public the shoddy it required. The British public did not want good music.

MME. KIRKBY LUNN, the English artist, made a great success in Tristan und Isolde on the first night of the opera season at Covent Garden. Mme. Lunn is a pupil of that celebrated teacher Mr. Albert Visetti who is Professor of Singing at the Royal College of Music.

AN Elizabethan Fair and Fête is to be held under Royal patronage in Lincoln's Inn great hall and grounds from the 23rd to the 25th inst., in aid of King's College Hospital. A feature of the fair will be a reproduction of Cheapside as it appeared in the days of Elizabeth, and the stall-holders and assistants will be dressed in the costume of the period. There will also be processions in costume, with old English and Maypole dances. The tobacco stall at the fête will be in the charge of Miss Ellen Terry, Mrs. Arthur Bourchier, Mrs. Cyril Maude, Lady Burnand, Miss Ellaline Terriss, Miss Adrienne Augarde, and Miss Lena Ashwell. "Ye Boke of ye Fayre" stall will be brightened by the presence of Miss Viola Tree. Mrs. Geo. Alexander, Mrs. and Miss John Hare, Miss Lyell, Mrs. F. H. Mellor, Mrs. Nigel Playfair, Miss Playfair, Miss Audrey Playfair, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, and Miss Irene Vanbrugh will share in the supervision of the Antique and Modern Art Stall.

MR. W. S. GILBERT will act in his own play of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, the cast of which will include Capt. E. Marshall, Mr. Wyndham Birch, Mr. George Skilbeck, Mr. Leo Trevor, the Hon. Rosamund Tufton, Mrs. Charles Crutchley, and Miss Gertrude Kingston. A new play by Maeterlinck, translated by Mr. Sutro, will be produced under his direction, with Miss Rosina Filippi in the principal part. Another play, entitled Hero and Heroine, by Herbert Swears, will be given by Mr. Arthur Playfair and Miss Kate Cutler. Miss Constance Collier will sing some 17th century love lyrics, and among other people who have promised their assistance are Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Gertie Millar, Miss Mary Moore, Miss Marie Studholme, Miss May de Sousa, Mr. Willie Edouin, Mons. George Malini, and Mr. Huntley Wright. An old English dance, arranged by Mme. Katti Lanner, will also figure among the attractions.

THE matinée in aid of the funds of the Seaside Convalescent Hospital, Seaford, will be held at the Coronet Theatre, by the kindness of Mr. Robert Arthur, on Thursday, the 24th inst. A new comedy in one act, by Mr. Forbes Dawson, entitled Her Grace, will be included in the programme, Miss Kate Phillips appearing in the title-rôle. Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Miss Carrie Moore, who will be heard in "The Sandow Girl" song from The Dairymaids, aided by the Symmetrion Girls from the Apollo Theatre, Madame Alice Esty, Mr. George Robey, Mr. Charles Capper, the well-known whistler, Miss Margaret Cooper, and Mr. Frederic Pedgrift have been added to the list of those who have definitely promised to assist.

MR. LOUIS CALVERT has taken the New Theatre for the autumn season, and will produce a new musical play there early in August. This will be the first production of a musical nature at this theatre, and it is hoped that the introduction of such a popular form of entertainment will well repay the enterprise of Mr. Calvert, whose experience, both as actor and manager, is wide and comprehensive. The new piece, which is by Mr. Frederick Fenn, is in two acts, and recalls the days of the early Egyptians.

MR. CHARLES J. CAMERON, who successfully created the part of Major Yarington in Boy O'Carroll at Newcastle, has been retained by Mr. Martin Harvey to play the part in his forthcoming production at the Imperial Theatre.

GOLF is enthusiastically taken up by the members of Mr. Frank Grans' The Other Man's Business company, no fewer than eight devotees of the game being included in the combination who play every day, be it wet or fine. The nimble golf ball sometimes takes peculiar directions in its flight, and often proves disastrous to the feathered tribe. Playing on the Stockton racecourse two weeks ago, a ball driven by Mr. Grans struck a small bird and broke its wing, and last week at Southport Miss Lilian Hubbard and Mr. Grans played at Birkdale, when Miss Hubbard drove a ball into the rough, and it was eventually found in a lark's nest side by side with the broken eggs.

MR. S. A. COOKSON—who is to appear as the Duke in Mr. Waller's matinées of Othello, at the Lyric—has just been engaged to support Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Irving in their forthcoming provincial and American tours. Miss Ada Mellon (Mrs. Cookson) will also be a member of "H. B.'s" excellent company. Oddly enough, Mr. Cookson and his wife have never before had the opportunity of acting together. Miss Mellon was with Sir Henry Irving, off and on, for six years, and will resume many of her old parts. It will, however, be her first visit to the United States, for it was always agreed between herself and Sir Henry that any contract she made with him did not include American journeys, as she would not leave home for so long a period. Mr. Cookson was ten years at His Majesty's, and played King Henry IV. during Shakespeare Memorial week on the anniversary of the day Mr. Tree first saw him in the same part at Manchester, and offered him an engagement that proved so satisfactory on both sides.

THE annual meeting of the Royal Liver Friendly Society is taking place this year in Jersey, there being at present about three hundred delegates and officials in the island. On the 4th inst. the members of the Society attended the Opera House to hear the celebrated Besses o' the Barn Band, which is appearing there.

MR. J. DEWHURST, who is retiring from the position of lessee and manager of the Theatre Royal, Leigh, after eighteen years' service, will have a complimentary benefit at that theatre on Monday and Tuesday next.

AT the Royal County Theatre, Bedford, on Wednesday last, before a crowded house, at the end of the second act of Brother Officers the members of the Bedford Amateur Dramatic Society presented Mr. Edward Graham-Falcon with a handsome silver rose-bowl as a token of their appreciation of his services on their behalf.

SIGNORA ELEANORA DUSE is, unhappily, still ill, and will probably be obliged to cancel all her engagements. After undergoing a fortnight's cure at Champel-les-Bains for nervous prostration, she has now gone to Milan, accompanied by a nerve expert.

THE DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND duly appeared in her rôle of theatrical entrepreneur on Wednesday, when a crowded audience was drawn to the Theatre Royal, Hanley, at popular prices, to witness a performance of Diplomacy, produced under the management of her Grace. All the furniture used was brought from Trentham Hall, and the dresses worn by the amateur actresses were magnificent. Countess Zicka was admirably played by the Countess of Lathom, and the Hon. William Goschen distinguished himself in the part of Count Orloff. The play, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the Potteries Cripples' Guild, met with an enthusiastic reception.

MR. HENRY A. LYTTON, who lately has been playing in The Little Michus at Daly's Theatre, is now sustaining Lionel Mackinder's part in The Spring Chicken at the Gaiety Theatre. He undertook the rôle at two days' notice.

BABY BETTY, now rehearsing at the Waldorf for Mr. Cyril Maude's production of Shore Acres, has been re-engaged by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow for the autumn of 1906 and spring of 1907, with the option of retaining her services till the end of 1908. Baby Betty will resume her part of the child in their American play At Cripple Creek.

MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL will begin her season at the Criterion Theatre about May 22 with The Whirlwind, an adaptation by Harry Melvill from the French of Henry Bernstein, which was recently tried at Birmingham. In addition to Mrs. Campbell herself, the cast will consist of Messrs. Frank Worthing, Charles Groves, Denis Eadie, A. G. Poulton, George Bealby, C. B. Vaughan, and Robert Entwistle; Miss Kate Wingfield and Miss Mabel Beardsley. A few days after the production of The Whirlwind it will be preceded by the first act of Mr. W. L. Courtney's Undine. Mrs. Campbell has also in contemplation the production of a new romantic costume play by the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, entitled The Macleans of Bairness.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN will swell the sum-total of this month's productions by presenting The Lion and the Mouse at the Duke of York's Theatre on May 22. The play, which deals with the power of finance in the United States, will be presented in London by a company of English and American performers. Mr. Charles Klein, the author of the piece, is in London superintending the production for Mr. Frohman. All of a Sudden Peggy will be given for the last time at the Duke of York's on Saturday evening, after which Miss Marie Tempest will take a short rest.

MR. SAMUEL JAMES will produce, at the Lyric, Hammersmith, on Monday, a new drama, As Good as Gold, which he is sending on tour in the autumn. The play is written by Fredk. S. Jennings, author of the sketch The Power of Music, which created such a sensation on its production at the Tivoli on May 5.

MISS LUCY WILSON, who goes touring in The New Magdalen, will shortly be seen in a prominent part in a new play to be produced at an early date in one of the West End theatres.

THE second annual benefit of Mr. James Sinclair, Mr. William Bailey's courteous acting-manager, at the Royal West London Theatre, was a great success in every way on Thursday evening last. Sandwiched between the acts of Oliver Twist, many of the leading lights of the music-hall world lent their generous aid. Foremost was Mr. George Robey, who was in his best form, and gained a rousing reception. One Billy Farrell made a big hit with his inimitable dancing; Mr. Austin Rudd convulsed the audience with a witty parody on "The Little Wooden Hut," rendered in his own peculiar way; Mr. Charles Pastor made the house rock with merriment at his antics; and Edward Cranston and company pleased all in a cleverly-acted sketch, True to His Trust. Miss Amy Clevere sang with tasteful effect; Miss Maud Nelson renewed her pantomime triumphs in two well-chosen ditties; Miss Alice Sinclair sang and danced with much graceful ability; and little Dolly and Madge McCalla received several encores for their spirited efforts. Space will not permit mention of all who appeared, but each one individually did his or her best towards making the evening the most enjoyable in Marylebone for some long time past.

THE fourth installation of the Green Room Lodge was held with great success on Friday, the 4th inst., at the Imperial Restaurant, Regent-street. Mr. Herbert Leonard was installed as the Worshipful Master in a most impressive manner by his predecessor, Mr. Gerald Maxwell, after which Mr. Leonard appointed and invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Messrs. Akerman May, S.W.; H. Nye Chart, J.W.; W. S. Penley, P.G. Treas., treasurer of the Lodge; Charles C. Cruikshanks, Ass. G. Std. Br., secretary; E. H. Bull, S.D.; Charles Macdona, J.D.; Hubert Willis, I.G.; James W. Mathews, D.C.; Edward Jones, organist; J. H. Ryley, 1st S.; Stanley Pringle, 2nd S.; Blake Adams, 3rd S.; Luigi Lablache, 4th S.; and Samuel Ellis, Tyler. The meeting was a highly representative one, and Mr. Herbert Leonard is to be congratulated upon being selected to rule as the Master of such a successful Lodge, which, although in its infancy, numbers many prominent men amongst its members.

AT the conclusion of interesting ceremonies in Lodge, the members dined together, and were entertained with a fine programme of music under the direction of Mr. Edward Jones. The customary toasts were honoured, and during the evening Mr. Herbert Leonard, in a well-chosen speech, on behalf of the Lodge, presented Mr. Gerald Maxwell, the outgoing Master, with a very handsome Past-Master's jewel, which was accepted and acknowledged in very graceful terms. Many visitors attended, and received a hearty welcome from the Worshipful Master, officers, and members of the Lodge, and at an advanced hour a memorable gathering was brought to a close.

"THE WALLS OF JERICHO" will re-visit the King's Theatre next week with the same company which recently played the piece at The Hague and in the chief Royal and State theatres of Holland. The visit is for one week only, with a matinée on the Thursday, and the big auditorium of Mr. Mulholland's theatre should be crowded at every performance. It is interesting to recall that considerably before Mr. Sutro came into his kingdom in the West End, Mr. Mulholland produced one of his plays, a farce in three acts, entitled Arethusa, at the King's.

MR. J. MURRAY HERRIOT, who is leaving the Brixton Theatre to take up the management of the Marlborough, was the central figure of a select gathering of prominent residents of the district on Thursday, when he was made the recipient of a token of the warm esteem in which he is held. The presentation, which took place in the foyer of the theatre, was made by Mr. Albert Kendal, who said Mr. Herriot's many good qualities and very marked efficiency as a manager had resulted not only in his securing friends, but in making the habitués of the Brixton Theatre comfortable, and giving them the best theatrical fare. Another strong feature of his undeniable success had been with regard to the many touring companies that had visited there, the managers of which had personally expressed their high appreciation of his kindness, forethought, and courtesy. The presentation of a substantial purse of gold was only from his most intimate, personal friends, who felt that Brixton's loss would be another district's gain.

MR. HERRIOT, in reply, said he was no orator, and hardly knew how to put his feelings into words. They all, moreover, knew how awkward it was for a Scot to say "Thanks." He was both surprised and grateful at the compliment paid him, and the very substantial proof of their esteem. He felt there was more than a friendly spirit actuating that acknowledgment of his services, and it really seemed incredible that his leaving Brixton should have caused regret, and that he had made so many good friends during his three years among them. He could assure them all that his work in Brixton had been an absolute pleasure, and he was proud indeed to find he had made so many real friends. The success of the Brixton Theatre was not alone due to his efforts, but to the loyal support always received from his successor, Mr. R. W. Allum, and every individual member of the staff. He asked them kindly to receive his very grateful thanks, and although it was rather a stereotyped phrase, they would believe him when he said "this is the happiest moment of my life." Mr. E. V. Page, who was associated with both the Brixton Theatre and the neighbouring Empress, was present, with Mrs. Page, at the pleasing ceremony.

A MEETING of the special committee of the Actors' Association was held on Saturday last. There were present Messrs. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Clarence Blakiston, C. Hayden Coffin, Arthur Holmes-Gore, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary). A question as to actors' rights in personal photographs was discussed, also matters connected with payment by photographers of fees to sitters. Other subjects affecting artists' rights were considered, and the secretary reported arrangements for the reception of a deputation from the committee by the executive of the Professional Photographic Association.

THE usual meeting of the council was held on Tuesday, when there were present Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Mr. A. E. Drinkwater (deputy chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Miss Kate Phillips, and Messrs. Cecil Barth, Clarence Blakiston, Burton Cooke, Arthur Holmes-Gore, Quinton McPherson, M. R. Morand, Algernon Syms, Spencer Trevor, Frank Vernon, and Charles Cruikshanks (sec.). The hon. solicitors reported that they had advised several members, and they were requested to brief counsel to appear at the trial of an action to recover damages for alleged breach of contract. A case of alleged bogus management was under consideration, and the secretary received instructions. The report of the finance and general purposes committee was received; also the report of the special committee. A former member was nominated for reinstatement. The suggestion-book was considered and an entry made. Cecil H. Raymond, Eric Maturin, and Lionel Bevans were nominated.

THE Finance and General Purposes Committee held a meeting on Tuesday, there being present Messrs. Arthur Holmes-Gore (in the chair), M. R. Morand, C. Aubrey Smith, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary). Several questions of routine were discussed, and the secretary received instructions.

MESSRS. WALTER AND FREDERICK MELVILLE have added to their numerous enterprises by the purchase of the following dramas, which emanated from the pen of the late F. A. Scudamore:—Dad, A Beautiful Avenger, Is Life Worth Living? Dangers of London, Nature's Nobleman, Settling Day, The Destroying Angel, and A Bad Character. Most of the above pieces will be included in Messrs. Melville's list of plays for stock seasons, odd weeks, touring, &c., controlled by these energetic entrepreneurs.

THE beautiful Marlborough Theatre has started most auspiciously under the new control. Mr. Mulholland, who is more than any other man responsible for the wonderful development of the suburban theatre as we know it, is chairman of directors, and has sole control of the bookings. As will be readily understood, the latter is of the first importance, and practically all the chief attractions have already been booked.

MR. G. BRYDON PHILLIPS will stage Our Boys for Mr. W. Bailey at the Royal West London Theatre next week, and has secured Messrs. E. Story-Gofton, J. G. Grahame, jun., C. Herbert Hewetson, Fred Grove, also Mesdames Blanche Stewart, Christine Stuart, Lucie Evelyn, and Alice Brookes to interpret the comedy.

AT the Ilkeston Theatre, on Tuesday, an explosion occurred, resulting in serious injuries to a boy named Edmund Aldred. Joseph Aldred, the father, who works the limelight, had placed a retort on a stove under the stage, and suddenly a loud report was heard, when it was found that the retort had exploded, and had injured the boy, who was standing near. The boy was immediately removed to the Borough Hospital, where he lies in a critical condition from burns and shock to the system. The accident is a mysterious one, as the plant was new in August last, and has worked well since.

MR. PERCY PITT, who was appointed to direct the first representation in London of Herr Edward Poldini's The Vagabond and the Princess on Friday, is the first Englishman for many years to conduct an opera at Covent Garden. Mr. Pitt was born in London in 1870, and when he was sixteen he went to Leipzig, where he studied under Jadassohn and Carl Reinecke. Three years later he proceeded to Munich to receive instruction from Rheinberger. In 1892 he returned to London. His compositions attracted the attention of Mr. Henry J. Wood, and when the Promenade Concerts were started at Queen's Hall in 1894, a suite written by Mr. Pitt was played with great success. Later he was appointed organist and pianoforte accompanist to these concerts, and since then he has been steadily winning popularity and fortune. A few years ago he became associated with the staff at Covent Garden, and one of his duties now is to visit the Continental opera houses to discover singers for the management.

THE theatrical profession in America has contributed generously towards the relief of the sufferers by the San Francisco disaster. Mr. Charles Frohman gave the entire receipts of the 200th performance of Peter Pan at the Empire, Miss Maude Adams added 1,000 dols., and every person employed contributed the night's salary or wages, even the ticket offices and speculators adding their profits. The result was a sum of 3,500 dols., which was promptly forwarded. Other managers and performers were no less generous. George Cohan sold papers in the streets, paid 1,000 dols. for the first copy and turned in over 1,441 dols. Marie Dressler opened a department store in the Gilsey House. Every article was given, and prices ranged from 25 cents to 2,500 dols. Klaw and Erlanger wired a large donation direct. Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and other society ladies organised an entertainment that netted 31,500 dols., the boxes and stalls selling at from 100 dols. to 500 dols. each.

DAVID BELASCO telegraphed funds and arranged for a joint benefit. James H. Hackett and Mary Mannering gave a Sunday night benefit at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. Manager Lawrence, of the Madison Square, contributed the receipts of three days' performances. Tony Pastor diverted the proceeds of the annual vaudeville benefit for the Actors' Fund to the relief of stranded performers, Daniel Frohman, president, concurring. Elsie Janis arranged for a benefit at the Metropolitan Opera House, and Jules Murry's companies all agreed to give benefits on tour. The English players in America were equally liberal, a special fund being raised under their auspices.

"MISS ANGEL," a new comedy, founded by Miss Averil D. Furniss and Miss Mildred D. Gibbs on Miss Thackeray's well-known novel of that name, was produced at the King's Hall, Covent Garden, on Thursday. The performance was given in aid of the Christ Church, Oxford, Mission, and of the Mother Cécile Memorial Fund, and it is anticipated that a substantial sum will be realised. The authors have done their work well, and have constructed an interesting piece, in the story of which such notable personages as Dr. Johnson, his faithful follower Boswell, David Garrick, and Sir Joshua Reynolds figure. The love story of the accomplished and beautiful Angelica Kauffmann has received sympathetic treatment, several strong scenes with the false Count de Horn being provided. The play was produced by amateurs, Miss Alice Leigh, Miss Mildred Gibbs, Major Sellar, Captain Browning, Colonel Simpson, Mr. Frank Morris, the Hon. Walter Fremantle Gaunt, and Miss Mary Malone taking the chief parts.

Mr. George Edwardes has "overhauled" The Little Cherub, and the result is a much pleasanter, funnier, and more attractive piece. When English authors choose French plays of the Palais Royal sort for the foundations of their librettos, they should always remember that the great paying public prefers clean and honest fun. Sir F. C. Burnand's adaptations were most successful when, taking the situations of the original, he boldly purged his adaptation of all that was unsavoury, indecent, and suggestive. The Cuckoo, an almost literal reproduction of Decoré, was a failure at the Avenue. Now that the "cocotte-ish" element has been ejected from The Little Cherub, that the Rajah of Calcutta has been removed from the list of personages, and that Miss Molly Montrose merely flirts with the Earl of Sanctobury in order to secure his consent to her marriage with his son, the result is more, and not less, amusing than before. In A Girl on the Stage Mr. Edwardes has given his patrons an entertainment full of fun, frolic, gaiety, and beauty.

There have been some important changes made in the cast since The Little Cherub was produced at the Prince of Wales's last January. The part of the Earl of Sanctobury, originally performed by Mr. Fred Kaye, is now in the hands of Mr. Willie Edouin, a comedian of such ripe and certain accomplishment that everything he does is certain of success. Mr. Edouin's cool confidence and quaint individuality are strong factors of this favourable result, and the almost boyish elation of the Earl when, for the first time, he embarks upon a perfectly harmless "spree," is irresistibly amusing. The rôle is not less funny, but much funnier, than in the original version; and Mr. Edouin's acting in the scene in which the adventurous Earl has a "row" with the Alderman, and is taken off to the police-station, is intensely comic, his trouble about his lost collar-stud being a detail of the most diverting kind. Mr. Edouin makes the part of immense importance, and his contribution to the general result is very valuable indeed. Miss Ruth Vincent plays Molly Montrose quite in the key of the new version, and her rendering is full of grace, ease, and refinement. She is an excellent vocalist, and she treats that exceedingly clever song, "Experience"—either a French chanson or a wonderful imitation of one—with a delicate tact which makes it doubly effective. Her rendering of the ditty is encored again and again. Mr. Lennox Pawle as Algernon Southdown bears the burden of sustaining a character whose connection with the plot is rather hazy; for, of course, the life-saving incident, which is significant in the French piece, is quite superfluous in the English version. However, it gives Mr. Pawle an opportunity of appearing in a suit of clothes that is too small for him, and of creating a vast amount of merriment by his clever depiction of stolid—and solid—stupidity. Mr. W. H. Berry, the representative of the valet, Shingle, has a light touch and an excellent method, and his topical song in the last act goes as well as ever, being redemanded with enthusiasm. Mr. George Carroll is quaintly comical as Ethelbert, and his vivacious impudence appeals to the audience very strongly. He and Miss Doris Dene, a dainty dancer and a pleasing and expressive actress, make themselves immensely popular. Mr. Spencer Trevor repeats his very praiseworthy performance as Captain Hereward, and Mr. Ralph Roberts contributes a really clever little character-sketch as Grimble; Mr. Colin Coop being irreproachable as Alderman Briggs, and rendering his song in the second act with all the necessary "swagger" and self-importance. Mr. Edmund Cooper does creditable work as Sir George Monteith, and Mr. Lionel Mackinder's Lord Congress is just what the jeune premier of a musical play should be—well-groomed, well-dressed, active without effusiveness, and alert without being fidgety. His "Supper Girl" song again delights his audience to the extent of enthusiastic encores. Miss Zena Dare and Miss Gabrielle Ray, as the Earl's daughters, bring down the house with their duet with comic business, "I should so love to be a boy." Miss Dare is the ideal of healthy English girlhood, and Miss Ray's appearance as Cupid can only be described as bewitching. Miss Kitty Hanson is in every way satisfactory as Mrs. Briggs, and the bevy of pretty ladies who embody the actresses from the Dunbridge Theatre do most adroitly the dances and chorus business so skilfully arranged and invented by Mr. Willie Warde and Mr. Sydney Ellison.

The spectacular part of the production "beggars description." The groupings and arrangements of the chorus in some of the scenes are dreams of exquisite colour harmony and contrast. Every dress is a work of art, every dance a thing of dainty delight. It is a mistake to suppose that the patrons of the musical play demand Palais Royal impurity or gay and cynical expositions of Parisian vice. What they really like is a slight, amusing story of a simply farcical sort, plenty of droll incidents, and a liberal supply of mirth, melody, and beauty. These they are certainly offered in A Girl on the Stage, and the rapturous delight with which they accept them is the best proof of Mr. Edwardes' skill and judgment.

PRINCESS HENRY OF BATTENBERG, Princess Ena, Prince Leopold, Prince Maurice, and suite, witnessed the performance of The Bond of Ninon at the Savoy Theatre, on Saturday evening.

A NEW drama, adapted by Mr. George R. Sims from his novel, "For Life—and After," will be produced at the Fulham Theatre on Monday.

"OLF AND THE LITTLE MAID."

A Comedy, in One Act, by M. E. Frances (Mrs. Francis Blundell), produced at the Haymarket Theatre on Tuesday, May 8.

Olf Joyce .....MR. SYDNEY VALENTINE
Farmer Inkpen .....MR. P. L. JULIAN
Annie Inkpen .....MISS MONA HARRISON
Maggie Fry .....MISS RUTH MAITLAND
Kitty .....MISS DOROTHY MINTO

There is quite an idyllic flavour about Mrs. Blundell's little first-piece. It disarms criticism by its simplicity and its unpretentiousness; and, as it is remarkably well acted and mounted, it forms a very pleasing prelude to the still successful Man from Blankley's, which is going better than ever. Olf (or Alfred) Joyce, a poor farm labourer, draws a thousand pounds in a lottery; and having been snubbed by two country girls, Annie Inkpen and Maggie Fry, he proposes marriage to a little "workhouse girl" called Kitty, who does the drudgery at the farm, in Dorset, where the incidents occur. He finds, however, on investigation, that the lottery is a "swindle," but Kitty is still willing to wed him, and they make a match of it. There is no attempt to idealise rustic views of life. Kitty frankly states that she marries chiefly to escape from scrubbing other people's floors; and Olf's method of courtship is extremely primitive. Withal, there is a feeling of tenderness and truth about the little play which makes it agreeable and interesting; and Mrs. Blundell should be very grateful to the interpreters of her work. Mr. Sydney Valentine plays Olf Joyce with remarkable ease and naturalness, making every characteristic point very cleverly, and endowing the rustic with all the necessary sincerity and a touch of pathos. Mr. P. L. Julian is admirably stout and sturdy as the farmer; and Miss Mona Harrison and Miss Ruth Maitland are bold and buxom representatives of the two country girls. A very sweet and winning reading of the rôle of Kitty is given by Miss Dorothy Minto, whose quaint unconsciousness and gentle naïveté prove winning and agreeable. Mr. Bruce Smith has painted a pretty farmhouse scene, with a charming landscape-distance. Olf and the Little Maid had a quite cordial reception.

MOODY-MANNERS ACADEMY.

PERFORMANCE OF "TWELFTH NIGHT."

The Coronet Theatre was pretty well packed on Sunday evening, when a private performance of Twelfth Night was given by pupils of the Moody-Manners Academy of Music, assisted by Mr. Charles Magrath, Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, Mr. Thomas Stewart, and Mr. Chapman Huston.

During an interval Mr. Charles Manners came before the curtain and delivered an interesting address. "We are here," he said, "as amateurs for the future of the National English opera—or, rather, of the national opera in English—for I hope we will have the composers to give us national English opera. I feel sure that it is in a certain measure necessary to come before you. If someone does not do something, then we shall still keep on in that benighted way in which I am afraid we have been, and are still, continuing. On the Continent there are over 350 opera companies, and they are often all playing the same night. We in this country have four—two of my own, the Carl Rosa, and Mr. Turner's. Now, with certain exceptions, everyone you have seen on the stage this evening sings every night in the chorus. Those exceptions are Mr. Charles Magrath, who is my popular principal bass; Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, one of the conductors of this company; Mr. Thomas Stewart, the treasurer; and Mr. Chapman Huston, the manager, who are all very kindly giving their help this evening to help on others. Now I would like to tell you that every day some ten or fifteen people sing for me, and the difficulty I have is to make them understand that they must commence their profession at the very beginning. The cost of joining this academy of music is £50. Most of this amount is paid to the masters; but if there is anything left out of the £50, after paying railway fares, &c., then I return it to the pupils. I really want to try and get good voices. So far I have been able to select one out of sixty or eighty. That one is a baritone, and he has appeared in Lohengrin and Faust. Some people say that once they get in the chorus they cannot get out of it. Now every year six of my people leave the chorus to become principals. It is to my advantage to take them out of the chorus if they are good enough, because I am thereby saved the expense of heavy salaries."

The performance last Sunday of Twelfth Night did one thing—it gave evidence of the careful training which the pupils receive from this touring academy. There can be no doubt that even chorus work teaches the novice the first elements of the actor's art. It shows him how to conduct himself on the stage, and by closely watching the principals in the company he learns how to make a physical as well as a vocal expression of passion. Considering that the performance under review was the work of amateurs, and, moreover, that it was described as a private performance, it would scarcely be fair to hold forth too high a standard in criticising their efforts Taking all the circumstances into consideration—Mr. Manners informed us that there had been four full rehearsals—the play was on the whole creditably presented. Some exquisite music had been specially composed for the occasion by Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, and the running accompaniment to some of the scenes and the selections played during the intervals were a delightful feature of the production. As to the acting, we had as Malvolio Mr. Charles Magrath, and very skilfully did that gentleman depict the comical conceit and absurd dignity of the officious and self-impressed steward. Mr. W. M. Chapman Huston was effective as Orsino, the agreeable and courtly manners of the Duke being interpreted in good style. Miss Norah Jenkin as Olivia gave us a most engaging personage, her easy charm of demeanour combining with clear enunciation. Miss Hilda Grundy submitted a capital presentment of Viola. She was irresistibly vivacious and light-hearted, and her work gave some evidence of considerable histrionic ability. The fantastic sayings and doings of the weak-minded Sir Andrew Aguecheek were made the most of by Mr. George King, who can be congratulated upon what was a clever piece of acting. Mr. E. Glynn-Renshaw furnished an admirable performance of the mischievous and bibulous Sir Toby Belch, and Mr. Frank Rowe appeared to advantage in the rôle of the manly and virile Sebastian, and gave an admirable rendering of the verses, "O, Mistress Mine." The quips and cranks of Feste were delivered in lively manner by Miss Margaret Carter, whose impersonation of the clown received great favour with the audience. Mr. Thomas Stewart proved himself a capable exponent of the rôle of the bold and vigorous Antonio, and Miss Nellie Child was piquant and merry as Maria. Miss Nora Long, who appeared as Curio, enchanted the house with her singing of "Come away, death," and "When that I was." Mr. J. W. Knight did good service as stage-manager.

"TWO LITTLE VAGABONDS" is to be the attraction at the Brixton next week. The theatre will then close for a few weeks to enable the usual renovations to be carried out.

THE REHEARSAL CLUB.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The St. James's Theatre presented an animated appearance on Tuesday afternoon at the annual general meeting of the Rehearsal Club. Every part of the house was taken up by well-dressed folk, ladies, of course, predominating, while the stage was occupied by well-known theatrical and society people. Sir Squire Bancroft took the chair, and additional interest was lent to the proceedings by the presence of their Royal Highnesses Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein and Princess Victoria. A bouquet was presented to Princess Christian by Miss Pamela Maude, and another to Princess Victoria by Miss Lilian Braithwaite's little daughter. Among others seated around the chairman were Viscount Halifax, Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. A. W. Pinero, Miss Constance Collier, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Mrs. Beerbohm Tree, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Mrs. Cyril Maude, Miss Carlotta Addison, Mrs. J. T. Grein, the Countess of Bective, Lady Dorothy Nevill, Lady Trevelyan, Hon. Mrs. Henry Corry, Mrs. Philip Walker, Mr. Augustus Spalding, Mrs. Mayne (hon. treasurer), and Mrs. George Marjoribanks (hon. secretary).

The report of the committee was as follows:—

In presenting their report for 1905, the committee have to record with deep regret the loss they have sustained in the death of their eminent patron, Sir Henry Irving, whose generous and personal patronage was a sufficient guarantee for the usefulness of the Rehearsal Club.

The committee, in issuing their fourteenth annual report (with duly audited accounts), deem it almost unnecessary to dwell upon the need for such an institution, since the keen appreciation of its advantages displayed by the members must be a proof of its supplying a real want.

The club was founded in 1892 with the view of furnishing a quiet retreat to which minor actresses might resort between the hours of rehearsals and matinées and the later ones of evening performance. Many of these actresses live too far from their work to admit of their returning home during the interval; and, in such cases, warm, cheerful rooms where rest and shelter from inclement weather can be obtained, together with refreshments at moderate charges, must be an invaluable boon.

Among those accustomed to view the theatre only from the auditorium and to derive pleasure from the gay scenes on the stage, few perhaps realise the amount of hard work involved in the rehearsal of an important piece, or can imagine the strain on nerves, brain, and body often necessary to produce the precision of "ensemble" and brilliancy of effect which they have so much admired. It has been the endeavour of the Rehearsal Club to afford the much-required repose and shelter to those for whom health means livelihood.

Is it not the duty of each and all of us to assist the hardest-worked members of a hard-worked profession by endeavouring to make their lives less difficult; remembering that their exertions have often helped to distract our minds from our own cares and anxieties?

It must be evident to all that the Club never can be self-supporting, and that a central position is an imperative necessity and a costly one; so the committee are obliged to depend on outside help.

The members' subscription is 2s. per quarter. The club is open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., and contains comfortable reading and refreshment rooms, the former well supplied with papers, magazines, and games. Anyone who would like to see the club and its arrangements would be gladly shown over by one of the committee or by the matron

The annual subscribers' meeting was held on May 23, in St. James's Theatre, when a letter was read from H.R.H. Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein regretting her inability to be present.

Again the committee have gratefully to acknowledge Mr. George Alexander's courtesy in lending his theatre for the purpose, and also that of Mr. Arthur Bourchier in presiding. Their sincere thanks are due to Mr. George Alexander, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Lady Dimsdale, Mr. Grein, Miss Annie Hughes, Miss Eva Moore, and the Rev. Russell Wakefield, who all spoke warmly of the great benefits conferred by the club. In the absence of Mr. Welch, who was to have seconded the vote of thanks to Mr. George Alexander, Sir Squire Bancroft kindly took his place at the last moment.

The club is much indebted to the kindness of Lord Burnham and the Hon. Harry Lawson for a daily copy of the Daily Telegraph newspaper; and warm thanks are tendered to all those who by special gifts have shown personal interest in the club.

Subscriptions and donations may be paid to the hon. treasurer, Mrs Mayne, 101, Queen's-gate, S.W.; or into the Victoria-street Branch of the London and Westminster Bank, "to the credit of the Rehearsal Club."

THE CHAIRMAN, in opening the meeting, said:

I am sorry my first note must be a sad one, but I feel you would not like the occasion to pass without my mentioning that since the last meeting held here we have lost our dear Irving. Of his untiring help to all his brothers and sisters, big and little, every word has been eloquently spoken, every thought has been generously uttered. I will only add we miss him very much. The printed report of the Rehearsal Club, which is in your hands, leaves little need for a long speech from me, especially as you will have the privilege of listening to far more interesting, far sweeter voices. My remarks, however, if brief, will be sincere. The theatrical profession—alluring, enchanting, I grant—is among the most arduous. In no other calling, perhaps, are there so few prizes and so many blanks. It is on behalf of the young and struggling in a trying life that I ask for your sympathy and your help; for bright and hopeful girls who do not live always in the glare of the limelight, and who have a hard fight of it in the simple homes which are often miles away from the stage door—a fact which makes it necessary for our club, however admirably and economically managed it may be, to serve its purpose and be of real use to have its home in the heart of theatre-land, and there, you know, rents are very high. We were recently face to face with a difficulty. Our lease was fast expiring, and I had the pleasure to be of a little use in turning towards our faithful friend and honorary solicitor, Mr. George Rowe, owing to whose great interest and kindness—not forgetting the kindness of the landlords—we are now safe for another twelve years, on terms for which we are much and truly obliged. You will be glad to hear that in the last twelve months forty-nine new members have joined the club, coming from different theatres, including Drury Lane, His Majesty's, the Garrick, Wyndham's, Daly's, the Lyric, the Vaudeville, and the Empire. I must, however, ask you to remember—and a pleasant duty I find it—that the little Rehearsal Club is only a baby, and cannot yet be trusted to run alone. The baby, though, has many delightful nurses, some of whom you see around me now. One, who is, unfortunately, absent—my wife—was unable to get up from the country in time to be here; but Lady Bancroft is very much attached to this baby. My message to all the dear nurses is, as Hilary Jesson, under this roof eight times every week, says so charmingly of sweet women, "God bless 'em!" But the nurses have a large family of theatrical children to look after, and they want you to help them with this little fellow. He is a deserving little chap, believe me, and cheerfully does his best to help himself, so any presents you may give these dear ladies for him later on will not be thrown away. If I might venture to tell you what would be the most valued gift of all—because it does not readily wear out—I would say an annual subscription, however small; for instance, just the cost of two tickets at a theatre—of two stalls, if you like, or even of two seats in the pit. Our devoted honorary treasurer, Mrs. Mayne, would thank you for them with every beat of her warm heart. Do something of this sort for our struggling girls, that I may say to you with Shakespeare, "Here are none but friends."

VISCOUNT HALIFAX, in proposing a vote of thanks to H.R.H. Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, said: The great obligations under which this club lies, both to Sir Squire Bancroft and Mr. George Alexander, are increased to-day by Sir Squire Bancroft's willingness to take the chair, and by Mr. George Alexander's readiness to place his theatre at the disposal of the members of the club for the purposes of this meeting. There is one other matter which it would ill become me to forget on the present occasion. Since the last general meeting the club has lost its eminent patron, Sir Henry Irving. Members of the club, and all who are concerned in the welfare of the theatrical profession, will long remember with gratitude his generous patronage.

MISS LILIAN BRAITHWAITE, in seconding, said: I am here this afternoon in the humble capacity of understudy to Miss Lena Ashwell. The final rehearsals of her forthcoming production preclude her being present, and she sends her regrets and apologies. As one of the profession for the benefit of whose members the Rehearsal Club was founded, I speak with the greatest gratitude of the interest her Royal Highness takes in the institution. Her interest is not confined to honouring us with her presence to-day. Not so long ago her Royal Highness made a visit to the club and had tea with the girls. I have been asked to tell you, madam (addressing her Royal Highness) that the girls constantly speak with delight of your visit to the club, and it will always be remembered with pride in the annals of the club. I thank you most gratefully and sincerely for the interest you have displayed in the club; and most heartily I second the vote of thanks to her Royal Highness for her presence here to-day.

MISS CONSTANCE COLLIER, in proposing a vote of thanks to the committee, said that the good ladies of the committee were responsible for this most excellent institution, which was the outcome on their part of kindness, energy, and instinctive sympathy.

MR. GEORGE ALEXANDER, in seconding said: I have very great pleasure in seconding the resolution proposed by Miss Constance Collier, and I would also take this opportunity of expressing our gratitude of her presence. I am sure that the work of this club is done very well, and the balance sheet is one that will always bear the strictest investigation. I have just been casting my eye around this theatre, and I may tell you that I know exactly how much money would come if everyone of you had paid for his or her seat. I have counted the number very carefully, and I shall be very much disappointed if I do not see a very good sum of money lying in the boxes at the door. I will read a letter I have received from Lady Bancroft. She says: "I wish I could have been at the meeting to-morrow, for I am deeply interested in the Rehearsal Club, and I know how earnestly you will be all pleading for it. If eloquent appeals from the charming ladies who are to speak will be of great value, I know you will have success. Pray present my humble duty to her Royal Highness." Now, Lord Halifax mentioned the name of an old actress named Miss Woolgar. In her prosperous days Miss Woolgar was sensible enough to invest some of her money in the Royal General Theatrical Fund, and in consequence of her wisdom she now, in her old age, has a competence which saves her from living on her friends. I mention this because it is so necessary that my brother and sister artists should act on this intimation, and without delay become members of the Royal General Theatrical Fund. I have now much pleasure in asking Mrs. Tree to tell us what the committee have been doing during the year.

MRS. TREE, in responding to the vote of thanks, said: My committee asked me to say that any work they have done for the Rehearsal Club—and some of them have really toiled hard in its interests—has been a labour of love. And they asked me also to express their gratitude to the theatrical profession for having shown so much sympathy and interest in the club in a way that has immensely forwarded its prosperity. It is a matter of the greatest gratification to us that the numbers and the attendances of the members have shown a tremendous increase. And it is very pleasant to the committee and to Lady Louisa Magenis, who first founded the club fourteen years ago, to know that the influence of the club is extending. They wish to express their great gratitude to the members of the Press who have given us such a helping hand. Quite recently I decided to make an experiment with the club myself; so I went to a butcher—I found him a most delightful man—and purchased a chop, determining to take it with me to the club after I had enacted all the tragedy and woes of Agrippina. Well, one Saturday afternoon I set forth from the theatre, but I had not proceeded very far when I was touched by someone. "An autograph, I presume?" I said to the stranger. "No, madam," was the reply; "you have dropped your chop." And so I had; it was useless to deny it. Later I found myself at the Rehearsal Club, where the excellent matron (Mrs. Burns) had already prepared for my visit. I took two girls with me. We had capital mutton chops for 4½d., and altogether the meal for the three only cost two shillings. I advise all young ladies who belong to the profession to join the Rehearsal Club. I thank you for the vote of thanks.

MR. EDWARD TERRY, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. George Alexander for the use of the theatre, said: I am sure we are all delighted to hear of the success of the Rehearsal Club. I am particularly pleased to hear of it, because I was almost at the birth of this club-baby. I had just assisted at the burial of a moribund fund, and I was glad to be at the birthday of this new one. I think there should be branches of this Rehearsal Club spread over the country in such large centres as Glasgow, Edinburgh, Liverpool, and Manchester, where they want it very badly; and if I can, in my humble way, bring forward the subject in those places, I shall be pleased to do so. Your secretary is indefatigable in good work. On the present occasion my duty is to thank Mr. George Alexander for lending the theatre on this occasion. I think it must be every year since the inception of the club that Mr. Alexander has rendered us a similar service.

MRS. JOPLING-ROWE, in seconding the vote, said how charmed she was with a visit she paid to the Rehearsal Club. There was plenty of fresh air and every possible convenience. She suggested that there should be a room where the young ladies could see their fathers and brothers, and even their sweethearts.

MR. A. W. PINERO, in proposing a vote of thanks to the chairman, said: I have the privilege of proposing a vote of thanks to Sir Squire Bancroft for his characteristic kindness in presiding here this afternoon. It is a great mistake to suppose that Sir Squire Bancroft's retirement from the stage means rest. In his case retirement meant giving up working for himself in order that he might work for others. I venture to say that there is hardly a day in the week, hardly an hour in the day, in which Sir Squire is not occupied upon some scheme for benefiting those who are struggling along the road he has travelled so triumphantly and so prosperously.

MRS. CECIL RALEIGH seconded, and the chairman's acknowledgments brought the meeting to a close.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, May 10.—The Théâtre du Palais Royal has followed the example of the Grand Guignol and the Capucines, and has given us what is called here "Un spectacle coupé"—several small plays in one act. Two of these are intensely funny, and had a great success. One is called Les Grenouilles, and is from the pen of M. Max Mauray. Alice, a young, pretty woman, has made the acquaintance of Hector, and has accepted his invitation to dinner in a restaurant. After dinner she has brought him to her house; but once there she suddenly feels ill, and declares that the frogs they have eaten have upset her. At her request, her maid, a respectable elderly woman, fetches a doctor, and at the same moment someone calls with a receipted bill for 500fr. Alice being too unwell to attend to the matter, Hector reluctantly puts his hand in his pocket and pays the money. The doctor comes. He informs Hector that the lady wants absolute rest, whereupon Hector, who had hoped to spend a pleasant evening, departs grumbling. When he is gone the doctor kisses the patient, who is his wife; and the respectable servant takes off her white apron. She is Alice's mother. Alice is well and hearty, and has invented this ingenious trick to make 500fr. without being unfaithful to her husband.

LESS peppery, but equally funny, is Gonzague, by M. Pierre Veber. M. and Mme. Mouchel have invited some friends to dinner. At the last moment three couples send word they cannot come, and Mme. Mouchel discovers that they will be thirteen at table; whereupon the master of the house settles the difficulty by inviting the piano tuner, Gonzague, at work on the instrument in the drawing-room. Gonzague is delighted, for not only will he receive 10fr. extra, but he will have a good meal—a rare event with him. Among the guests are a M. Brizard and his wife. The husband looks furious and madame is trembling with fear. And no wonder. Brizard has found a letter proving that his wife has a lover. The letter, typewritten, is signed "X.," and Brizard wants to know who is the mysterious "X." who wrote to Mme. Brizard that he would meet her that evening at the Mouchel dinner. Brizard scans the guests, and suspects them all, with the exception of his bosom friend, La Chambotte, who happens to be the guilty party. When Brizard sees Gonzague—who has been introduced to the company as the Marquis de Gonzague—he thinks he has found the villain. And his suspicions become a certainty when, having asked Gonzague for his card, he sees that the man's Christian name is Xavier. Dinner is announced, but Mme. Brizard, sick with fright, asks to be allowed to remain for a while in the drawing-room. This reduces the number of guests again to thirteen, whereupon M. Mouchel tells poor Gonzague that he cannot come to the table. Brizard wants to kill the man who has the audacity to remain behind with madame. Fortunately, a silly, romantic girl confides to Brizard that Gonzague passes himself off as a piano-tuner in order to be able to meet her occasionally, as he is too bashful to declare his love. La Chambotte, moreover, promises Gonzague a large sum if he acknowledges that he is in love with the romantic young lady. The piano-tuner is only too delighted to do as he is told; and thus secures a nice income and a pretty little wife in the bar gain.

"LA PITIE."

Play in Three Acts, by M. Maurice Leblanc, produced at Antoin's on May 7.

Jacques .....M. CAPELLANI
Robert .....M. LEON BERNARD
Jean .....M. VERMEIL
Germaine .....MLLE. VAN DOREN
Marie Anne .....MLLE. DE VILLIERS

The author has portrayed in his new piece the misfortunes of a littérateur, a man of talent, to whom marriage has become a curse because his wife's love for him has turned her brain. Jacques is a writer of talent who could make a great name for himself. But he married Germaine, and from that moment he has no longer been able to work. Germaine is jealous—jealous of his friends, of everybody who approaches him. It is a repetition of what M. de Porto Riche has shown us in Amoureuse; but Jacques suffers more because Germaine is foolish and wicked. She prevents him from working; she burns one of his manuscripts; and she ruins the marriage prospects of Marie Anne, Jacques's young cousin. Why, then does Jacques not leave her? It is because he pities her. Her wickedness is the outcome of excessive love, and the husband hopes that by kindness he may yet be able to tame this shrew. Human patience, however, has its limits; and Jacques's patience has been superhuman; and it is almost with a feeling of relief that we see him walk out of the house, unheeding his wife's entreaties, curses, and threats. In trying to prove too much, M. Leblanc has proved nothing. If Germaine had been only jealous we might have watched with interest the husband's hesitations, whether, under these conditions, he was justified in leaving his wife. In making Germaine needlessly wicked, the author did not pose a problem. The woman's place is in a lunatic asylum, and Jacques's misplaced kindness is as exasperating as his wife's evil disposition. It was excellently played by Mlle. Van Doren, who made us think of Hedda Gabler; by Mlle. de Villers, and by M. Capellani.

THE Théâtre Molière has given us Nos Salariés, a piece in five acts and six tableaux, by Mme. Tola Dorian, a society playwright. With every respect to the fair sex, it must be said that even if the work had not been signed we would have known that it emanated from the pen of a woman. When describing love on the stage ladies go gently to work; but the moment they touch upon social questions they become violent, and blindly hit at everything that comes their way. The story, moreover, is most intricate, full of long-winded speeches that generally miss their mark. According to Mme. Tola Dorien, there is a justice for the poor and one for the rich. Ernest Verneuil, a young cavalry officer, has shot his mistress, and is arraigned before a court-martial. Being the son of a State Minister and highly connected, he is acquitted. His father and his friends agree with this verdict, but not so Thérèse Maltet. Thérèse, who has been brought up by old Verneuil—and very badly too—has advanced opinions on all questions of the day. She consider Ernest's acquittal an abominable miscarriage of justice, and for once we agree with her. When Ernest returns home he is embraced by his family, whilst Thérèse greets him with the remark that his place is under the knife of the gullotine. Thérèse altogether is sick of the "upper classes," to which she belongs; and, although rich, has engaged herself to a young farmer. The family, however, and especially her cousin, the cavalry officer, are strongly opposed to the marriage. We assist at a dispute between the farmer and Ernest, ending in a duel, wherein the officer is killed; and the farmer, committed for trial, is sentenced to ten years' transportation. There was sufficient material for a good play, but Mme. Tola Dorian missed her opportunity.

IN Le Paradis de Mahomet, an operette in three acts by Robert Planquette, the principal rôles will be sung by Mlle. Méaly, Mlle. Jeanne Saulier, Mlle. Diéterle, M. Baron, M. Max Dearly, and M. Henri Defreyn.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. Willie Carson, the acting-manager of the Queen's Theatre, Keighley, was last Saturday the delighted recipient of a handsome cigarette case from Miss Florence Baines, of the Miss Lancashire, Limited company.

THE AGENCY FRAUDS.

At the Central Criminal Court, on Saturday, May 5, before the Recorder, Charles Henry Houghton, 40, salesman, and Hedley Howard, otherwise Gays, 38, dealer, were indicted for conspiring together to cheat and defraud such persons as should apply to them in response to advertisements for persons seeking theatrical and music-hall engagements. Other counts in the indictment charged the prisoners with obtaining money by false pretences.

Mr. Charles Mathews, Mr. Arthur Gill, and Mr. Arnold Ward appeared for the prosecution; Mr. Vaughan Roderick defended Howard; Houghton conducted his own defence.

The hearing of the case was begun on Thursday, the 3rd inst., and was concluded on Saturday. It was alleged by the prosecution that the prisoners had conspired to defraud persons by professing to be able to find them theatrical and music-hall engagements. In December, 1905, Houghton was carrying on business as a dramatic agent in Waterloo-road. Miss Ribler, a Rumanian, called at his place of business in response to an advertisement which she had seen, and asked him if he could get her an engagement on the stage. He replied that he would do so if she paid him a fee of £2 10s. She demurred to paying so large a fee. He told her that she would get 30s. a week salary. Miss Ribler suggested that he should keep the £2 10s. out of her salary, but he declined to do that. Houghton informed Miss Ribler that he would get her an engagement in a sketch called My Wife, to be produced at the Shakespeare Theatre, and that she would have to play the part of a Russian princess. Miss Ribler paid Houghton £2 10s., and he gave her the part of the Russian princess to learn. The sketch, he said, was to be produced after the termination of the pantomime, and he remarked that he would return the £2 10s. to Miss Ribler if, after she got on the stage, she did not like the profession. Miss Ribler, however, did not get the promised engagement, and it was stated that Houghton had no authority to engage players for the Shakespeare Theatre, and that no sketch entitled My Wife was to be produced there. In March last the prisoners began business at 62, Strand, as dramatic agents, under the style of the Empire Dramatic, Variety, and General Agency Company. They inserted an advertisement in a theatrical paper of March 15, in the following terms:—"Wanted, 24 chorus ladies and gentlemen for leading West-end music hall and suburbs. Ten weeks' engagement. Also ladies and gentlemen for dramatic parts. Call or address, Empire Dramatic and Variety Agency Company, 62, Strand, London." Forms of contract were printed, at the bottom of which were the words, "No play, no pay." Gays was stated to be the managing director of the agency, and Houghton the assistant manager. Evidence was given by several witnesses as to having called at the offices of the agency in response to the advertisement and paid the prisoners sums varying from 15s. to 30s. as fees for engagements which Houghton said he could get them. It was stated that the prisoners had no authority to engage players for the Palace Theatre or music halls mentioned by Houghton.

Mr. Percy Murray, an actor and sketch producer, said that in March he told the prisoners that if they had a lady who would suit him they could send her to Woolwich, where he was playing in a sketch. He also asked them if they had any choristers. He said that, subject to his seeing them and approving and his conductor hearing their voices, he would engage them. The prisoners had no authority from him to engage any players for the Palace Theatre, the Metropolitan Music Hall, or the Royal Music Hall. The witness was not about to produce a sketch at those establishments. The prisoners had no authority to make any definite engagement with any player until he had seen the player.

Detective-inspector Dew gave evidence as to arresting the prisoners. They denied the charge and Houghton said that everything was quite straight. A book was found at their office containing a number of names and addresses. The witness said that he found nothing which, in his opinion, indicated that a business was being carried on.

Houghton said that there was a large number of orders at the office for players.

Inspector Dew said they were not there when he called.

At the conclusion of the evidence for the prosecution,

Houghton addressed the jury for his defence. He had, he said, been in the dramatic agency business since he was a child, and he read out a long list of persons for whom he had obtained engagements, and produced testimonials as to his success and his business capacity. The agency which he and Howard started in the Strand in March was a perfectly genuine and bond-fide business.

Howard was called as a witness in his own defence, and said he had carried on business as a naturalist and had also had a goldfish breeding farm. He explained that Houghton, whom he had known for some time, suggested to him the idea of starting a dramatic and variety agency, and, after consulting an expert in the matter, as to the business prospects of such an agency, he started the agency in the Strand in March. Houghton was to be a servant and to receive at first £1 a week and 2½ per cent. on the turnover. He believed that if the money was found by him for the agency Houghton had influence to find engagements for players. The business was a perfectly honest one. He denied that the name of the Palace Theatre was ever inserted in the contracts. The sums paid by the persons complaining in this case only amounted to a total of about £6, whereas he was £50 out of pocket over the business.

The Recorder said he understood that Howard's counsel had withdrawn from the case.

On Saturday Howard called a witness for his defence, and he also called his solicitor to speak to his good character.

Addressing the jury in his defence, Howard said he had the misfortune to have a fire at the premises where he carried on business as a naturalist, and he and his son succeeded in escaping from the burning building dressed only in their trousers. They afterwards returned to the premises and rescued as many of the animals as they could. He was not insured, as insurance companies would not insure live stock. Houghton suggested to him that they should carry on business as dramatic agents. He did not know anything about the theatrical business himself. He found the money for starting the agency, and believed that Houghton, from his having been in business as a dramatic agent so long, was able to find persons engagements at theatres and music halls. He denied emphatically that it was a bogus agency. It was a perfectly genuine and bond-fide business.

The jury found the prisoners guilty.

Inspector Dew said that he had made inquiries, and had learnt that Houghton had been carrying on some sort of a theatrical and music-hall agency business for twenty-five years. He had done some genuine business, but it was alleged that he had been concerned in this sort of thing for some time. In 1900 he obtained premiums from several persons for pantomime, but they were left stranded at Dorking. A short time ago he sent a company down to Wolverhampton, and they were left stranded also. The prisoner Gays' goldfish farm consisted of a seven-room cottage near London, in the garden of which five holes had been dug, which had been coated with cement. Gays had advertised for a partner for his goldfish business.

The Recorder, in passing sentence, said that, so far as this case was concerned, it was a mere swindle, and he had no doubt it would have gone on for some time if the police had not stopped it so promptly. He sentenced the prisoners each to 12 months' imprisonment with hard labour.

ALLEGED AGENCY FRAUDS.

At Bow-street Police-court, on Tuesday, before Mr. Marsham, William Cecil Watson, a young man described as an elocutionist, was charged, on remand, with obtaining money by false pretences in connection with the Northern Dramatic Touring Syndicate (Limited), 63-64, Chancery-lane. Mr. Williamson, who prosecuted for the Treasury, said the prisoner would be further charged with conspiring with a man named Dawson, otherwise Blackburn, to cheat and defraud. Dawson had not yet been arrested. Miss Nita Lebrun, of Streatham-hill, said she answered one of the syndicate's advertisements, which was to the effect that ladies and gentlemen without experience were required to take small parts in a new London production. On March 29 she had an interview with the prisoner. She asked him whether he thought she would do, and he said she would do nicely, and that he would give her the part of Dora Sunnyside in The Octoroon, which was to open at Redditch on April 16. She was to pay a fee of £8 for coaching and dresses, and her salary would be £3 10s. a week. A few days afterwards witness paid the £8, and Watson gave her a book of the words of The Octoroon, and instructed her to learn her part. The next day she told him that she did not think she could manage it, and said she would be willing to take a part which merely involved "walking on." Dawson, who was present at this interview, said, "You must do that part; I want you for it. You must learn it." She promised to try, and the next time she called the prisoner said, "You will be all right. If you don't do in this company, I will give you something in a musical comedy at New Brompton." Subsequently witness was told that the production of The Octoroon had been postponed until April 23 or 30, when it was to be played at Hastings. After this she called at the office three or four times, and went through her part, which consisted of forty or fifty lines. Eventually Dawson said another young lady had been engaged, at a very high salary, to play her part for a week, during which time she was to study under her. Witness felt annoyed at this, and prisoner said, "You had better come and have a cup of coffee." She replied, "I don't want any coffee; I want my money back." Dawson was then "kind of rude," saying, "Do you want the earth? Do you want to be a star right away?" She repeated that she wanted her money back, and she then went away and consulted her solicitor.

In answer to the magistrate, witness said she had received no money back—nothing except a cup of coffee for her £8.

Albert Macintyre Dorrow, a law writer, of Colebrooke-road, Islington, also gave evidence as to going to the prisoner in response to the same advertisement that attracted the previous witness. Watson, he said, told him that he had two parts to offer him, one that of Dr. Manette in A Tale of Two Cities, the premium for which would be £2 2s. and the salary £2, and the other that of Captain Howard in a sketch called Diamond Cut Diamond, the premium for that being £5 5s. and the salary £3. The sketch was to tour the London halls for six months. Witness chose the part of Captain Howard, and handed five guineas to the prisoner, who gave him a receipt in the following terms: "Received from Mr. McDorrow the sum of £5 5s. for the part of Captain Howard in sketch Diamond Cut Diamond, and coaching for same." Witness memorised his part, but when he commenced to repeat it in the presence of the prisoner and Blackburn (the name by which he knew Dawson) he was stopped at the third line by Watson, who said he must throw more light and shade into his words. That was practically all witness received for his money.

Answering Mr. Doherty, witness denied that he paid the five guineas for elocution lessons. He paid it to get a part.

Charles Hawkins, a vocalist, of Northwood-road, Highgate, said he paid the prisoner £3 3s. on being offered the part of Frederick in a play called The Jew, which he was told was to be produced in the North of England. Witness repeated his part on several occasions to the prisoner and a young lady, a Miss Milner, who was employed in the office.

Cross-examined, witness said that undoubtedly he was a fool; he saw it now, but he didn't then. He considered that he was as capable of catering for the British public as a good many.

Mr. Doherty: You haven't a very high opinion of the actors and actresses of the present day, have you?—Witness: Of some.

You think you are capable of taking any part?—No, but since leaving Watson I have taken part in a play, and I was told I was a fool to have paid any money for lessons.

Leonard Walter, a young man, said he "assisted his mother in the public line"—in other words, he was a barman at the Eagle Tavern, New-road, Gravesend. He answered one of the syndicate's advertisements, which stated, among other things, that "refinement is more essential than experience. Splendid opportunity to enter the profession." Prisoner offered him a part in The Octoroon, saying he would have to pay £10 for costumes, and would receive a salary of £3 10s. a week. Eventually, witness paid Dawson £7, but shortly afterwards he found that Watson had been arrested, and the office was closed. Witness's part was a "thinking" one. He was the auctioneer's clerk, and, according to the stage directions, he merely had to sit at his master's feet. The prisoner was again remanded in custody.

The proposed Shakespeare Memorial was discussed at a conversazione given by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, at the Mansion House, on Wednesday evening, to meet the members of the London Shakespeare League and the Memorial Committtee. The guests numbered 900, and included the United States Ambassador, the Lord Chief Justice, Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., and Sir Francis Burnand. Professor Gollancz made a statement as to the present position of the proposed Shakespeare memorial in London. The competition for the design would shortly be thrown open to artists throughout the world on terms to be announced by the Advisory Committee of experts, Mr. Richard Badger's extra donation of £1,000 being assigned for prizes. The designs would be exhibited next year. The movement would, it was hoped, be not merely national, nor yet confined within the broader limits of the Empire and America, but would be truly international. The city of Venice had asked to be permitted to contribute, and other foreign municipalities would follow its example. The memorial should be an accomplished fact by 1916, the tercentenary of the poet's death.

SHAKESPEARE'S BIRTHPLACE.

The annual meeting of the trustees and guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace was held on Monday afternoon in the Trustees' Room at the birthplace ticket-office, Stratford-on-Avon. This was the first time that the trustees had met in the new Board-room, which is a large chamber, with a lofty timber-beamed roof, on the first floor of the restored cottages in Henley-street, which Mr. Carnegie presented to the trust some years ago. Mr. Sidney Lee presided; and among others there were present Lord Hertford, the Mayor of the borough (Mr. W. Pearce), Mr. F. R. Benson, Mr. Lionel Cust, and Mr. A. D. Flower.

The annual report of the Executive Committee stated that during the year 33,587 persons had paid for admission to the Birthplace, of whom 25,205 also paid for tickets to the museum and library, 18,335 visited on payment Anne Hathaway's cottage, 512 the museum and foundations of New Place, and 27,196 persons signed their names in the visitors' album at the Birthplace. The balance-sheet showed that the expenditure had amounted to £1,932 14s. 11d., and the income to £1,911 16s. 6d.

In moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, the Chairman said that they were offering the nation, in whose behalf they acted as trustees, an account of the manner in which they had sought to fulfil the dignified obligations that had been cast upon them, of guarding the only existing memorial that was truly national of the greatest poet and dramatist of the world. It might well become London, the capital city of the Empire, to erect a national monument to Shakespeare, the national poet. They would all rejoice if due success attended the recently revived effort to carry out such a design. But the public ought not to forget that the Birthplace trust was itself already a national memorial under the authority of an Act of Parliament.

Death had robbed them last October within a single week of two of their most honoured colleagues, the late Lord Leigh and the late Sir Henry Irving. Lord Leigh had been connected with the trust in his official capacity for just fifty years, and his name and fame would always be cherished by them. Sir Henry Irving had been a trustee for nineteen years, in virtue of his services to Shakespearean drama. One of his last acts in life was to send a small subscription to their funds and a banker's order for an annual subscription, which had been destined not to take effect. But the circumstance that his dying hand should have been uplifted in the support of the trust would not be easily effaced from their memories. In the course of the year Lord Leigh's place as ex-officio trustee in right of the office of Lord Lieutenant had been filled by the appointment by the Crown of Lord Hertford, an appointment especially welcome in Stratford, where he already filled the office of High Steward of the borough. Sir Henry Irving's vacant seat had been filled by their own choice of Mr. F. R. Benson, who had done as much in the way of spreading a knowledge of Shakespeare throughout England as any man living. Mr. Benson took his seat at their Board for the first time that afternoon. They hoped he might long join in their counsels.

In the internal affairs of the trust, continued Mr. Lee, they had entered on a period of peace, during which all their energies and attention might be concentrated exclusively on their great purpose of maintaining and improving the efficiency of the trust. The Executive Committee had finally carried out the directions given it for adapting the Horneby cottages—the gift to them by Mr. Carnegie—to the improved administration of the trust. He hoped that provision might be made in their new Board-room under proper precautions, such as were adopted at the Bodleian Library or the British Museum, and under fitting supervision, for the study of their books and papers by serious and responsible persons. There had been a gratifying increase in the number of paying visitors to the Birthplace, the Birthplace Museum, and Anne Hathaway's Cottage. The average receipts from the sale of tickets during the six preceding years had been £1,547; it now exceeded £1,820. Some 3,000 more American citizens visited them in the year than ever before. He regarded that fact with great satisfaction. The expenditure of the trust during the past year had been unusually high. The restoration of the cottages with the furnishing of the Board-room and the ticket-office proved rather more costly than was anticipated. But that was capital expenditure, though it had been wholly drawn from income, and seemed likely largely to increase their revenue. They had had to pay the somewhat heavy costs of their rejected appeal to Quarter Session in support of the certificate of exemption from local rating granted them by the Registrar of Friendly Societies. The case had gone against them, but a thorny question, which had to be decided one way or the other, was thereby settled. All these exceptional charges had been paid to the last farthing without drawing anything from their reserve fund. They had been unable to add much to their collections during the last year, but by the courtesy of the Duke of Rutland they had secured a new and interesting illustration of Shakespeare's biography. The Duke had permitted them to procure photographic reproductions of the newly-discovered entry concerning Shakespeare in a household book at Belvoir Castle kept by one of the Duke's ancestors. The Duke's ancestor paid Shakespeare and his great friend and acting colleague, Richard Burbage, on March 31, 1613, a sum of money for designing a sort of heraldic badge, which the Earl of Rutland displayed on his shield at a great tournament at Court. At the time, as far as they knew, Shakespeare was living in comparative retirement at his house, New-place, in Stratford, of which the site was their property. The discovery, though not much in itself, indicated that there were depositories of Elizabethan documents hitherto unexplored and imperfectly examined, where facts that might fill gaps in their knowledge of Shakespeare's life might yet come to light. In conclusion, Mr. Lee said they were anxious to get from the public all the assistance in their power, moral and material, in carrying out the purposes of the trust, and in the way of improving their collections. He thought they might fairly ask for more outside assistance than they at present enjoyed. Since he had been chairman he had endeavoured to render more operative Clause 6 of their Act, which authorised them to receive devises, bequests, donations, and subscriptions, annual or other, of land, buildings, money, books, pictures, and so forth. He feared they could not hope without such assistance to improve their collections very conspicuously or very rapidly.

Mr. A. D. Flower seconded the motion, and it was supported by Mr. F. R. Benson, who expressed his gratitude for the great honour conferred upon him in electing him as a trustee. Only a few days before his death Sir Henry Irving was in correspondence with him as to coming to the Shakespeare Memorial Festivals in order to act in the place from which he drew so much of the inspiration of his great life and work.

The motion was passed.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THACKERAY AND THE THEATRE.

MR. BEERBOHM TREE'S forthcoming production of a dramatic version of "The Newcomes" will be the second recent instance of a masterpiece of WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY'S being presented on the stage. Fresh in the memory and admiration of all is Miss MARIE TEMPEST'S appearance as Becky Sharp; and now Mr. TREE is to show us how effective on the boards a practised dramatist like Mr. MICHAEL MORTON can make another novel of THACKERAY'S. The great novelist would have hailed with delight the appearance of his work before the footlights. He was always a lover of the theatre; and, as a small boy, played Fusbos in Bombastes Furioso in a performance promoted by some of his schoolfellows at the Charterhouse. "Do you remember, dear M——, oh, friend of my youth," he writes in "Vanity Fair," "how, one blissful night five-and-twenty years since, The Hypocrite being acted, ELLISTON being manager, DOWTON and LISTON performers, two boys had leave from their loyal masters to go out from Slaughter House School, where they were educated, and to appear on Drury Lane stage, amongst a crowd which assembled there to greet the King?" Many years later, he asked a friend if he loved "the play," and was answered "Ye-es; I like a good play." He retorted, "Oh, get out! I said the play. You don't even understand what I mean." When he was in Germany he went with an actor to Erfürt to see Die Räuber, admired DEVRIENT'S fine performance as Franz Moor, and was afterwards introduced to him. From Paris he wrote home ironical accounts of Mademoiselle GEORGES and the number of crimes he had seen her commit on the stage, and laughed at Kean, in which drama DUMAS introduced Lord "Melbourn," "Sir Brougham," and "Sir Hardinge," and derided a shipwreck of the Medusa, in which officers in the English navy were represented wearing light green coats and top-boots. He thus summed-up the state of the French stage of the late thirties: "While the drama of VICTOR HUGO, DUMAS, and the enlightened classes is profoundly immoral and absurd, the drama of the common people is absurd, if you will, but good and right-hearted."

Most of the characters in his novels are playgoers. In "Vanity Fair," Cuff, who is thrashed by Dobbin, visits the opera, and knows the merits of the principal actors, preferring Mr. KEAN to Mr. KEMBLE. George Osborne, on the eve of his departure for Belgium in 1815, goes off at half-price to see KEAN as Shylock; and Dobbin, on his return from India, treats himself to a seat at the Haymarket. The interior of the Brussels Opera House, Mrs. O'Dowd thought, was not as fine as the theatre in Fishamble-street, Dublin; but at Brussels it was that Mr. and Mrs. George Osborne, Dobbin, and Mrs. O'Dowd occupied a box facing another in which were Mr. and Mrs. Rawdon Crawley and General Tufto. Becky had her box on the third tier of the opera house in London, and was cut in the "crush-room" by Lady Bareacres and Lady de la Mole. Her appearances in the private theatricals at Gaunt House must be well remembered by all readers of "Vanity Fair"; and it is supposed that, later on, she made a fiasco under the name of Madame Rebecque at Strasburg, in the opera of La Dame Blanche, in 1830.

Then there was the Pumpernickel Staats-Theater, where Amelia and her boy George, Dobbin, and Jos heard "those many unassuming, dear old operas in the German towns, where the noblesse sits and cries, and knits stockings, on the one side, over against the bourgéoisie on the other; and His Transparency the Duke and his Transparent family, all very fat and good-natured, come and occupy the great box in the middle, and the pit is full of the most elegant, slim-waisted officers, with straw-coloured moustachios, and twopence a day in full pay." And who is not familiar with the theatrical scenes in "Pendennis"—with Bows the first violinist, with Mrs. Dropsicum, who takes the money at the door; with Miss "Milly." Fotheringay; and with Bingley, who played the Stranger in light pantaloons and Hessian boots, and let his little finger quiver out of his cloak adorned with an imitation diamond ring which had belonged to QUIN. The hero of "Esmond" goes with Lord Castlewood to the Duke's Playhouse in Lincoln's Inn Fields, and sees Mrs. BRACEGIRDLE in a play of WYCHERLEY'S; and George Warrington, in "The Virginians," makes his first attempt in the dramatic style" in a tragedy called Carpesan, which is put very elegantly on the stage by Mr. RICH at Covent Garden. THACKERAY himself tried his hand at playwriting, and, in 1854, sent to BUCKSTONE at the Haymarket and to WIGAN at the Olympic a comedy entitled The Wolves and the Lamb. Both managers refused it with decision. "I thought I could write a play," said THACKERAY, "and I find I can't." So, very wisely, he altered it into a novel under the title of "Lovel the Widower." As soon as it was made into a book, someone proposed to turn it into a play. Hearing of this, THACKERAY wrote to the intending adapter, mentioning that he—THACKERAY—had written the book originally as a drama, and was going to have a private representation of the piece. In this performance, THACKERAY appeared with a cigar as the clerical father, and blessed the actors and the audience in dumb show at the fall of the curtain. In the cast were HERMAN MERIVALE, Sir CHARLES YOUNG, the author of Jim the Penman, and MORGAN O'CONNELL, son of the great Irish orator. The Diary of C. Jeames de la Pluche, Esq., was dramatised by Mr. F. C. BURNAND, and produced by Mr. JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD at the Gaiety Theatre in 1878. The Rose and the Ring was adapted by Mr. SAVILE CLARKE, set to music by Mr. WALTER SLAUGHTER, and presented at a matinée at the Prince of Wales's in 1890; and Mr. J. M. BARRIE'S version of "Vanity Fair" was tried at Terry's in 1893, with Miss JANET ACHURCH as Becky Sharp, Miss ANNIE HUGHES as Amelia, and Mr. EDMUND MAURICE as Jos Sedley. The dramatisation of "Esmond" has been attempted at least three times.

THACKERAY'S view of the stage was that of an indulgent but rather contemptuous patron. He had only a superficial acquaintance with its inner life, and no knowledge of its intimate trials and tragedies. Like DICKENS, he chose to describe the absurdities and pettinesses of fourth-rate provincial theatres, as they were in his youth. The dignity and estimation to which the drama has attained in the present epoch, the large sums invested in theatrical speculation, and the intellectual and social advance of the profession generally, he could not possibly foresee. But he had a genuine love for the stage, and in his treatment of it in his novels he was always friendly, kindly, and humorous.

MR. CHARLES KLEIN, the author of The Lion and the Mouse, who is at present in London, has views upon the American stage, which he declares is in a period of transition, converging towards the metaphysical. "The public," he says, "are tired of plays that do not appeal to their intelligence as well as their sense of humour. In London the attitude of the upper classes seems to be rather apathetic; and only the people in the more popular parts of the theatre apparently take the drama seriously. I don't know if this difference is due to the fact that in London the play is given after dinner. There seem to be so many 'class audiences' in London; whereas in America all classes go to the same theatre. Possibly that is why any new development in dramatic taste is more quickly apparent over there.

"THIS trend towards the metaphysical," continues Mr. Klein, "is, I think, the direct result of the American mind being concentrated on self-development. Everything in America is converging towards the metaphysical—as in mechanics, wireless telegraphy, and telephones. We no longer believe in the ideal hero," adds Mr. Klein. "He has to have failings; he must be human. That makes it difficult to establish contrasts, as it was formerly the villain who was supposed to have weaknesses of character or positive vices. Then, the injured heroine no longer creates the sympathy that she used to create. People to-day merely shrug their shoulders, and say she deserved a great deal of what she got. That is why playwrights have to turn to new backgrounds, new ideas, and new treatment for their plays. There are only thirty-seven dramatic situations in existence, you know, and they have all been used so many times that you cannot copyright one of them."

MR. CHARLES SANTLEY, the eminent vocalist, was one of the speakers at the Catholic Demonstration against the Education Bill at the Albert Hall on Saturday. Mr. Santley, who was enthusiastically received, spoke with great earnestness, and his magnificent voice, which has so often sounded in the hall in the rendering of ballad and cantata, easily reached the confines of the immense auditorium, his speech being heartily cheered.

IN honour of the coming visit of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London to open the new Grand Pavilion and Parades at Bridlington, Herr Sigmund Winternitz, the talented conductor of the Royal Viennese orchesta, has composed a march entitled "L'Entente Cordiale," dedicated by permission to the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress.

THE LONDON COLISEUM.

The report of the committee of shareholders of the London Coliseum was presented at the adjourned meeting at Cardiff on Thursday, over which Mr. Oswald Stoll presided.

The committee reported that they had ascertained that the present receipts, unless several economies were effected, were not sufficient to justify the expenditure, as the loss in working up to March 31 was very considerable. Since the debenture-holders stepped in the management had effected many economies in various ways, and the Revue, which was a very attractive performance, was being run now three times daily. There was no other building of its kind which would compare in any way with the Coliseum in magnificence, but experience proved that it was unsuitable for the class of entertainment which had hitherto been run. The committee was of opinion that after allowing for depreciation of fixtures, scenery, &c., payment of debenture interest, and a fair proportion of preliminary expenses, the net profit amounted to £4,000.

It had come to the conclusion that Mr. Brukewich's dealings in the shares had generally been to benefit himself, with very little regard to the company. Mr. Carey was justified in his remark that he had never bought or sold a share other than his original purchase on starting. Mr. Stoll had 3,100 shares; he now possessed 3,270 Ordinary Shares. Mr. Stoll's holding in the company at the present moment was £31,965 Debenture Stock, £5,000 Preference, and £16,350 Ordinary. Mr. Stoll's profit on the sale of the Coliseum site to the company was £30,000. The actual liabilities on March 31 were: Debenture capital, £114,088; guaranteed by directors, £53,813; various creditors, £35,741; total, £203,642. At the last meeting most shareholders understood that the directors had not received any remuneration for their services. The committee found that Mr. Brukewich and Mr. Carey had received £400 in fees, besides travelling expenses.

Mr. Stoll was correct when he said he had not received any remuneration for his services.

Mr. Stoll was of opinion that the the Coliseum would be made to pay after what it had passed through, and the experience gained in working, but the committee were of opinion that they must liquidate the present undertaking, and the same committee would look after the various interests of the shareholders. In the meantime, the committee proposed that the Revue should continue, and stated that Mr. Stoll had consented to act with other directors, to be appointed later, who would render him more assistance than he had hitherto received. By this means and economies which it was proposed to immediately effect Mr. Stoll was of opinion that the place would pull through its present difficulties and become of some benefit to the shareholders. The most optimistic must admit, however, it was stated, that they would have to raise additional capital.

The committee recommended that the resolution for voluntary liquidation by the directors be adopted, and that Messrs. R. H. Gillespie and H. S. Metcalf be appointed joint liquidators.

Mr. Matcham, the architect, said he was not responsible for the whole of the difference between the cost of the building and the original contract. A portion of the work was taken out of his hands entirely. He was responsible for £115,000. Mr. Stoll appointed an electrical engineer for certain work, and he carried it out. Mr. Matcham added he had not made any claim for commission on the excess work. The commission was disputed.

Mr. Carey said that the company's solicitors had taken counsel's opinion, but it was of such a nature that they felt they could not proceed with the claim.

Mr. Stoll said it was a matter of deepest regret to him that anyone should have lost money over a company of his, but no one could be a greater loser than himself. He had used his resources to the advantage of the company instead of to his own advantage. Neither time nor energy nor financial sacrifices had been spared by him to keep the ship afloat until it could keep itself and go into smooth water. He neither lacked confidence nor persistence even now.

Mr. H. J. Thomas said if the company was wound up voluntarily the control would still be in the hands of the committee, and further investigations might give them an opportunity of making suggestions to the shareholders.

The resolution for voluntarily winding-up was carried. The committee recommended that the liquidators should have power to add to their number, and they proposed to add Mr. Stoll. This was carried unanimously.

MUSIC-HALL CONTRACTS.

In the King's Bench Division on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Kennedy and Mr. Justice A. T. Lawrence, the appeal case of Jones v. Wakefield Hippodrome raised important points in music-hall contracts. The appeal was by Mr. W. C. Jones, proprietor of the troupe known as the American Comedy Four, against a decision of Judge Addison, at the Southwark County Court, who had entered judgment for the defendants.

Mr. W. Paine appeared for the plaintiff in support of the appeal, while Mr. Doughty opposed it on behalf of the defendants.

The question in dispute was the right of the defendants to cancel a contract by which the plaintiff and his troupe were engaged for four weeks, at £30 a week, to appear at the Wakefield Hippodrome. The contract was dated Feb. 28, 1905, and the engagement was to begin on Sept. 4 following. A condition of the contract was that the plaintiff was not to make any engagement within ten miles of Wakefield until after the date of the performance mentioned in the contract. It was further provided that in the event of the defendants closing the hall "through damage by fire or other unforeseen circumstance or in consequence of any strike of workmen in the district, or from any reason whatever, in their own absolute discretion," the contract should be null and void.

The plaintiff's case was that soon after the contract was made the hall was closed. Arrangements were made with Mr. Selwyn, of the Lyceum, London, to take over the Hippodrome, and in August the defendants notified by advertisement that the hall would not be opened by the Wakefield Hippodrome (Limited), and that the artists must make new contracts with Mr. Selwyn. Though Mr. Selwyn took over a number of the contracts, he could do nothing for the plaintiff and his troupe.

The plaintiff then brought his action against the defendants, and the county court judge held on the contract that the company discontinued to carry on the hall in May owing to a strike, which caused the collieries in the district to work only two days a week, and thus deprived the hall of the support of the colliers, on which it relied for success. Therefore, he said, the plaintiff's engagement was at an end, and Mr. Selwyn was in no way acting for the defendants.

The plaintiff now contended that the conditions of his contract as to strikes only referred to the week for which his troupe was engaged, and there was no obligation on the part of the defendants to keep the hall open at any time before Sept. 4. For the defendants it was argued that they were not liable under the terms of the contract.

Their lordships upheld the decision of the county court judge, and dismissed the appeal, with costs.

THE following subscriptions have been added to the fund instituted on behalf of Mr. Fred Locke:—Regan and Ryan, £1 1s.; Wal Croft, £1 1s.; M. R. S., £1 1s.; N. C., 10s.; J. Miller (219), 5s.; W. A., 2s. 6d.; W. G. Paterson, 2s. 6d.; A Friend, 1s.; J. B. Gordon, 10s. 6d.; Edwin Barwick, 5s. Mr. J. G. Crichton has the fund in hand.

"THE EXPRESS BABY."

Sketch, by Campbell Rae-Brown, produced for the first time in London at the Middlesex, On Monday, May 7.

Algernon Rippleton ..... MR. FRANK ESMOND
His Aunt ..... MISS KITTY DEASE
Flossie Rippleton ..... MISS EDITH EVELYN

Mr. Campbell Rae-Brown has taken the idea for his sketch from The Little Stranger at the Criterion. One Algernon Rippleton has been brought by his own and his wife's extravagance to the verge of bankruptcy. He could be made fairly well-to-do if he only had a son, for his aunt Alexandra has promised him the sum of £5000 as soon as an heir is born to him. Now Mrs. Rippleton is more fond of kittens than of the human baby. But, even if they haven't got a child, they must have money. A plan occurs to Algernon's none too conceptive brain. He will get Clarkson to make him a baby similar to that which is performing such good service at the Criterion Theatre, the scheme being, of course, to deceive what the impecunious couple consider to be a miserly old aunt. The baby arrives in due course from the costumier's, and the aunt arrives also. Algy has not informed his wife as to the bogus baby, the reason for this reticence on her husband's part being, as he explains it, that she simply detests children. One wonders, indeed, why the lady married at all. However, she has a remarkable affection for the lower animals. Her prize Persian has just been delivered of three kittens, so that when she arrives home one afternoon, and hears the aunt talking delightedly about the new arrival, she thinks that the old lady is referring to the kittens. Confusion inevitably ensues. Seeing her husband fondling a baby, Mrs. Rippleton threatens it with instant destruction, and the aunt snatches up the supposed infant and rushes out of the room with it. Then Algy, who has already secured the £5000, makes his wife a partner in the secret. During her progress downstairs the aunt slips, and the baby is somewhat battered when she returns it to its loving "parents." Algy announces its death, with expressions of grief, and Alexandra is so overcome that she offers to furnish any further sums of money they may require.

Miss Edith Evelyn, as the extravagant Flossie with a partiality towards the feline tribe, acts extremely well, and with easy naturalness simulates the character in all its phases. Mr. Frank Esmond enacts in capital style the rôle of the happy-go-lucky yet deceptive Algy; and Miss Kitty Dease submits quite a characteristic study of an old maiden lady.

"THE BURGLAR'S DOG."

Sketch, by R. A. Roberts, produced at the Cambridge, on Monday, May 7.

The Jeweller ..... MR. ARTHUR GOODMAN
His Daughter ..... MISS MAY
The Burglar ..... MR. MICHEL BRAHAM
His Dog

This sketch seems intended in large degree to show the cleverness of a dog called "Royal York," son of "Crawford King" and "Lady Lucy." Royal York is a fine specimen of a bull terrier, and we are informed that it has taken over three years to train him for the stage. The result of Mr. Braham's teaching, so far as the trifle produced at the Cambridge is concerned, is decidedly successful. The story is this. A jeweller has been entrusted by a rich lady with her case of diamonds. She thinks the jewels are safer in his unostentatious house than they would be in her mansion, especially as she is about to go upon a journey. She arranges with him to bring the case to her at five o'clock one morning. The jeweller shows the diamonds to his daughter, and while the latter is gazing at them a man and a dog look through the window and then disappear. The girl puts the case into a china cupboard, and she and the old man retire to bed. Then—enter the burglar, and also enter his dog. Once in the room the animal performs all manner of interesting feats. At his master's bidding he shuts the doors, and, indeed, seems to understand every order given. The burglar discovers the jewels, and places them in his coat pocket. Then, after partaking uninvited of some refreshment, he falls asleep. An alarm clock, regulated so as to arouse the jeweller at a certain hour, gives its warning, and the dog tries to awaken its master. The jeweller and his daughter come downstairs, and in a few seconds the unwelcome visitor is awakened. Fearing the dog more than the man, the jeweller shoots at it, but misses the animal and fatally wounds its master. The dog caresses the burglar, whose dying words are a request for kindly treatment of the faithful brute. In the playing of his part Royal York displays remarkable intelligence, and one may congratulate its trainer. Mr. Michel Braham gives us a characteristic study of a cockney burglar, and Mr. Arthur Goodman submits a capital presentment of an old man in the rôle of the jeweller, while Miss May is graceful and pleasing as the daughter.

"TAMING A HUSBAND."

This lively and amusing sketch has been delighting audiences at the Britannia during the present week. Frank Marlow has been wedded three months to a wife who carefully studies his likes and dislikes, and who is most attentive to him in every way. To his way of thinking she is too obliging, too considerate. The Marlows are visited by a friend, Colonel Adams, and the devoted Mrs. Marlow, with feminine curiosity, desires to learn what her husband has to say about her to their military visitor. So she hides behind a screen while the two men converse. Marlow tells the Colonel that his wife, though extremely charming in many ways, is rather boring at times. For a bit of a change it is suggested that the Colonel and he take a night out, and this they decide to do. When they have temporarily left the room Mrs. Marlow arranges a plan of revenge. The nice tea she has prepared for her husband shall be made nasty. She keeps the chop on the fire until it is as black as a cinder and about as tasty, and the addition of pepper and salt to his teacup will, she considers, impart to that hitherto delicate blend of beverage a flavour which her carping husband will scarcely appreciate. Nor does he. More than that, when he returns he is assailed in what to him is a most inexplicable manner. What does his good lady mean by bumping him down on his chair and forcing the tea-cosy on his head? What does she mean by threatening him and the Colonel with the poker, the tongs, and chasing them round the room with a murderous-looking knife, which a Red Indian of another day would have been proud to employ on the scalp of some hated paleface? The gallant Colonel would sooner have faced a hundred Afridi warriors than this ferocious female. However, after thoroughly convincing her husband that she is not, after all, such an extremely obliging wife, she departs, only to return a few minutes later. But her demeanour is changed. Her madness has vanished, and once more she is the sweet and complaisant mistress of the house. Would they like to take her to the opera? There is wonderful unanimity in their affirmative—for, has she not tamed her husband?

Miss Louisa Peach acts with much vivacity and forcefulness in the rôle of Mrs. Marlow, and the methods she employs to express her outraged feelings create intense merriment. Mr. Wellesley Draper depicts in capital style the disgust, surprise, and even terror of the man at the antics of the wife he had come to regard as the gentlest, the most amiable, and the most attentive helpmate. The part of Colonel Adams has an able interpreter in Mr. Conrad Clarke, who enters into the spirit of the thing with considerable zest.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Miss Vesta Tilley made her appearance at the Colonial Theatre, New York, on Monday, April 30, before a house packed from floor to ceiling with a representative society audience, and was received with immense enthusiasm. She sang five songs, "Lovers' Lane," "A Policeman's Duty" (her natty appearance as an English policeman tickling her audience), "The Royal Artillery," "The Seaside Sultan," and, in response to loud calls, "Following in father's footsteps." At the end of this song Miss Tilley was thrice recalled, and the curtain lowered for the next act, but the audience insisted upon her coming before the curtain again.

After repeated bows she was forced to say a few words, and in a feeling little speech thanked her audience for their appreciation, promising to produce several new songs during her six weeks' engagement with Manager Williams. She was cheered and cheered again, and eventually had to sing "Algy" before the house would settle down to the rest of the entertainment. The booking at the Colonial is phenomenal, and has beaten all records, so that Miss Tilley looks like adding further laurels to her already brilliant record in the States, and this in spite of the hot weather prevailing just now.

Mr. Malcolm Scott, who is figuring successfully in the London Pavilion programme as "the woman who knows," will leave England on Saturday, June 2, for South Africa to fulfil his first engagement out there with Messrs. Hyman. His brother, Percy Scott, has also been concerned with "engagements" in South Africa.

The coming of age of the Paragon Theatre of Varieties, Mile End-road, is to be celebrated on Thursday evening next. In a specially prepared and admirably compiled souvenir issued by Mr. George Adney Payne to mark the interesting event, the history of Mile End in general and the Paragon in particular is traced from the time of Wat Tyler's rebellion in 1381 to the present day.

The Eagle Tavern, upon the site of which the theatre stands, was probably erected in the reign of Elizabeth—about 1590—and the Eagle Gardens were opened as Lusby's Pleasure Gardens, December 4, 1673. Lusby's Summer and Winter Palace, which opened on April 2, 1877, was acquired by Messrs. Crowder and Payne on July 8, 1878, and was destroyed by fire on January 20, 1884. The new Paragon, which was opened on May 21, 1885, was incorporated with the Canterbury on June 17, 1887. The souvenir is illustrated with some excellent portraits of past and present managers and proprietors.

Mr. Alfred Butt, the manager of the Palace Theatre, has just returned from America, where he has secured several good turns, which will shortly be presented at the Palace Theatre. The first of these will be introduced on Monday, when Rose Stahl, the well-known theatrical star, will appear in The Chorus Lady, which has had an enormously successful run on the variety stage in the States. On the same evening Eltinge, who has created a furore in America, will appear for the first time in this country, and a great surprise is promised in connection with this turn.

Mr. Spencer Barry, the new stage director that has been appointed to the Empire, has been some years with Mr. J. C. Williamson in Australia, and has had a varied experience as a producer of Gilbert and Sullivan operas and dozens of musical comedies. He has recently been associated with a successful production of Véronique.

There will shortly be produced at the Palace Theatre a new Japanese play, dramatised by Mr. Cecil Newton from a short story by Sir A. Conan Doyle. The score has been specially written by the brother of Maurice Hewlett, the well-known author of The Forest Lovers, Mr. H. W. Hewlett, composer of the music to Maurice's fairy fantasy Pan and the Young Shepherd, recently produced at the Court. Mr. Cecil Newton will appear in the play, which is, we believe, something very novel in its particular line.

Londoners generally have no idea of the dual purpose of Mr. Frank Parker's great water spectacle, The Flood, at the London Hippodrome. Now that the summer is upon us, a real benefit to the public occurs. Firstly, the purification of the air in the building twice daily by the rainstorm, involving the descent of 10,000 gallons of water, which not only causes a vacuum, carrying away all odours and foul elements, should there be any, but, it may be explained, fulfils a most beneficent sanitary purpose in flushing the public drains by half a million gallons of water weekly, thus helping the local authorities to keep the neighbourhood sweet and wholesome, to the advantage of everybody.

Mr. Joseph Wilson after a few days spent at Mr. George Adney Payne's delightful home at Herne Bay, has come back to the Tivoli strenuous and strong, having entirely recovered from an indisposition that kept him away from his duties for ten days.

The London Pavilion Cricket Eleven are already showing excellent form. On Tuesday, at Tufnell Park, they scored a hollow victory over the Apollo Theatre team, scoring 235 runs to the 75 of their opponents. Of these G. Clegg, of the Pavilion orchestra, scored 120, and also took four wickets for 54, Mr. William Cobbett, the popular assistant-manager, securing five wickets for 30.

"The Power of Music," a romance in one scene, produced at the Tivoli on Saturday afternoon, tells a story of jealousy and revenge, revolving round the rival lovers of a beautiful girl. One of them is a violin player, whose prized instrument is broken by the other. The slight plot reminds the older playgoer of that graceful little piece, François Coppée's Le Luthier de Crémône, which has been several times translated for our stage—once by Jerome K. Jerome under the title of Fennel, and performed at the Novelty Theatre on March 31, 1888. In The Power of Music the clever and pretty Miss Dora de Winton, and her husband, Mr. John Saunders, appeared in conjunction with Jan Rudenyi, who won hearty applause for his violin solos.

Mr. Alf Abrahams, of the Coach and Horses, Wellington-street, Strand, brother of Fred and Michael Abrahams, of the Queen's, Poplar, had a record day on Tuesday fly-fishing in Hertfordshire, taking in two hours nine trout weighing 12½lb., the largest being 2lb. 9oz.

Mr. Charles Clifford, the clever harpist, is in town, after having fulfilled a long and successful provincial tour.

Mr. C. W. Adams, the resident-manager of the Holloway Empire, has just received a letter from his brother-in-law, Ted E. Box, the well-known comedian, who was in San Francisco at the time of the terrible earthquake. He is glad to be able to inform Mr. Box's numerous friends that the comedian and his wife are safe and sound, although they have undergone terrible sufferings, narrowly escaping being crushed to death in their hotel. They have lost everything, and, together with thousands more, are living on charity. Mr. Box, however, is not the person to be daunted even by earthquakes, and as soon as his nerves are somewhat recovered hopes to recoup all his losses, as his bookings for America are very big. He returns to England in August, en route for South Africa under contract to Mr. Edgar Hyman.

The news that the directors of the New Alhambra, Belfast, are prepared to receive offers for that old-established hall, has caused quite a mild sensation in Belfast. Our readers will remember that some few years ago the present directors purchased the hall from Mr. W. J. Ashcroft ("the Solid Man"), and immediately started the arrangement of two houses nightly—in fact, they were the pioneers of this system in Belfast.

Mr. Frank Macnaghten's Leicester Pavilion Theatre of Varieties presented a most animated appearance on Friday evening, May 4th, when, by the kind permission of Mr. Macnaghten, the two performances were given in aid of endowing two cots at the Children's Hospital on behalf of the licensed victuallers of the town. The pretty and cosy hall presented a charming appearance, and altogether the evening's entertainment was thoroughly enjoyable.

Mr. Frederic Baugh, Mr. Macnaghten's London manager, was present, and purchased the first programme sold at the price of two guineas. The acting-manager, Walter Lapworth, and the stage-manager, Joe Lawrence, rendered excellent service. Mr. J. Noble returned thanks on behalf of the licensed victuallers to Mr. Frank Macnaghten and Mr. Frederic Baugh for their kindness.

The hospitality of the Empire Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, was generously extended to the officers and about 150 members of the crew of the Japanese battleship Kashima on Friday evening, the 4th. Accompanying the sailors were the Mayor and Mayoress of Newcastle, the former sitting with the officers in the front row of the grand circle, whilst the Mayoress, members of her family, and a number of Japanese gentlemen occupied one of the boxes. The act of the Craggs family of acrobats and comedians delighted the visitors. The other turns, too, were keenly followed, the mental arithmetic of Jacques Inaudi being very heartily applauded. At a convenient opportunity the Mayor returned thanks on behalf of the guests for the entertainment provided. At the close there was a thrilling little scene. Mr. Richard Thornton, bearing the Japanese standard, and Lieutenant Sosa, proudly carrying the Union Jack, appeared on the stage, being greeted with continued cheers.

Mr. Walter Johnson, the musical director at the Hackney Empire, is responsible for the music of a scena presented by the Stella Troupe at that house this week. The scena has taken well since its first introduction. It has light, colour, and plenty of movement. The swing-time song rendered by the girls has a decided fascination about it. The music is most tuneful, and engenders the hope that still further evidence of Mr. Johnson's abilities as a composer and arranger may be forthcoming.

Mr. Leslie Reed, the well-known comic singer and song writer, has now become mine host of the Cremorne Tavern, Great Yarmouth, with which he has been associated for some time. Indeed, Mr. Reed is very popular in Bloatertown, having been with Mr. James Chappell at that veteran caterer's concerts for no fewer than sixteen consecutive seasons, and being re-engaged for the coming one. He will be pleased to see all professional friends.

The third annual Charity Carnival and Sports were held on Wednesday on the Bristol Rovers' ground on behalf of the Bristol Royal Infirmary. It was an extremely popular event, and the gloomy weather scarcely deterred spectators. The co-operation of Messrs. J. M. Chute (Prince's Theatre), Ernest Carpenter (Theatre Royal), Horace Livermore (Palace Theatre), B. Pearce Lucas (Empire and Hippodrome) had been obtained. These gentlemen were among the judges, the "bench" being enforced by Miss Lelia Roze, Miss Florrie Forde (who collected a goodly sum), and Miss Fanny Fields. There was a football match between a licensed trade team and Harry Freeman's team. Miss Florrie Forde gracefully kicked off at the commencement of the second half.

Fun was in the ascendant throughout the day. The Life of a Showman company from the Theatre Royal, attired in novel garments, provided the people on the gasworks side of the ground plenty of excuse for hearty laughter. Charles Coverdale, from the People's Palace, in a policeman's uniform, carrying a shillelagh, a motor-horn, a policeman's whistle, and an insinuating manner, enjoyed himself immensely and contributed to the crowd's hilarity—much accentuated by the quaint performances of the "McPhearson Band." Other comedians appearing in the local halls who helped in the afternoon's pleasure were the Danbys, one of whom appeared as a fat Tired Tim, and went through a series of William Tell operations with Coverdale. Mr. John L. Shine also acted in a most amusing manner as a Gilbertian judge who had to decide on the winner of the band competition for £10,000.

We regret to learn that Dr. Walford Bodie has been seriously ill. Last Saturday night, at the conclusion of his performance at the Hippodrome, St. Helens, he collapsed. Dr. J. H. Dow, St. Helens, was sent for, and found Dr. Bodie completely run down, and ordered him rest. He should have opened with Mr. Macnaghten at the Palace, Bath, but was unable to fulfil his engagement. This is the first time in eight years that Dr. Bodie has been compelled to abandon his work through illness, and it is a strange coincidence that St. Helens was the scene of his last serious indisposition. He has gone to his beautiful Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff, and is now enjoying the ozone from the Moray Firth. He is recovering rapidly.

Miss Cissie Curlette, who was to have starred at the Stockport Empire this week, has been unable to fulfil her engagement owing to the death of her father. In her bereavement the popular little lady has received much sympathy.

Mr. W. F. Frame recently had a great week in Edinburgh. His new song, "Dinni Man, Donal' Man," fairly tickled the Hielan' men in "Auld Reekie."

Mr. Henry Kemble, manager of the Palace, Cork, takes his second annual benefit on Wednesday, when a special programme of twenty-five turns will be given.

Miss Agnese and Mr. Arthur Lynch have been compelled to cancel immediate dates in consequence of the serious illness of the lady, but they hope to be able to resume on Monday.

Miss Lil Hawthorne made her initial bow to a Southampton audience this week at the Palace. Her artistic and cultured renderings of her latest songs by Lawrance and Gifford, "My cosy caravan" and "Don't cry, little girl," met with the heartiest approval, the audience singing them with evident delight.

Mr. James de Voye, who is the proud possessor of the calculating and arithmetical pony Billy, has sufficiently recovered from his operation to resume business.

The engagements of Miss Fanny Fields, the South-American comedienne, have had to be postponed on account of serious illness. The lady's health for some time past has given her friends anxiety.

The directors of Collins's have decided to run that hall on the two-houses-a-night system, beginning in August next.

The licence of the Cambridge has been transferred from Mr. Charles Hector to Mr. T. G. Richards.

A further reminder to our readers that Mr. Jesse Sparrow, who is resigning his position as general-manager of the Camberwell Palace, will take a complimentary benefit at that house on Tuesday, May 22. There will be a good muster of the Terriers, of which friendly organisation the popular Jesse is president.

Mr. Wal Pink's "workmen" have been adding to their reputation at Mr. Walter Gibbons' Clapham hall, where Repairs has been nightly received with roars by huge audiences. Mr. Pink is well represented as an author on the Gibbons circuit this week, as, in addition to Repairs at Clapham, played by his own company, Mr. Harry Tate is presenting Fishing at the Duchess, Balham, Miss Minnie Hunt and Mr. Rhys Thomas play Her Birthday at the Holborn Empire, and Mr. Joe Elvin's No. 2 company at the new Croydon establishment submits the evergreen attraction, 'Appy 'Ampstead.

Mr. Wal Pink is still busy scribbling, and bids fair to be as prolific as Sardou. Mr. Harry Tate is busy rehearsing Gardening, Miss Hunt and Mr. Rhys Thomas promise us The Wire and The Liar, and the genial Joe Elvin has just arranged to produce a new sketch at Whitsuntide—all from the same Pink pen. This wonderful industry proves conclusively that, despite reports to the contrary, the author does not spend all his time fishing.

Miss Kitter Rayburn, who has been winning golden opinions at the Granville, Walham Green, this week in an excellent song, "Come and make love to me," by Charles Wilmott and H. E. Pether, has a decided gift for comedy, and is most elegantly gowned. The accomplished soubrette, we should say, would shine in parts of the Lottie Venne type.

Mr. Alfred Butt has again secured Mr. Louis Bradfield for a new scena at the Palace, and that capital light comedian and agreeable singer will make his reappearance at the only variety theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue in the company of a cohort of pretty and beautifully-gowned girls. Mr. Bradfield, who is appearing as Aristide Vert in The Little Michus at Daly's, will not relinquish that part, but will just step out during the second act to delight the Palace patrons.

The following artists will leave Southampton per the Walmer Castle on Saturday to fulfil engagements with Messrs. Hyman at the Empire, Johannesburg, and the Tivoli, Cape Town: Mlle. Alexia (assisted by M. Orfeo), Boyd and Gilfain, Miss Kathleen Gray, Miss Yoland Noble, and Collins and Hawley. Amongst those arriving home on the same day will be Walter Emerson, the Strolling Players, the Borellis, the Bensons, and Miss Leonan Anderson.

Mr. Tom Woottwell is leaving town for the first time for thirty-five weeks for his annual Moss Tour, for which he has been engaged every summer since Messrs. Moss and Thornton joined hands. He has made arrangements whereby he will parcel out each year of the next four as follows: Six months with the G. A. Payne syndicate; three months on the Moss circuit; and three months in pantomime, with the exception of Christmas, 1907, when he will escape the rigours of an English winter by one more visit to South Africa, from November to Easter, 1908.

The Terriers have arranged their annual summer river outing to take place on Sunday, June 17. They will journey by train viâ Paddington to Reading. At the Berkshire riverside town they will board the steam launch La Burgoine, and come down the silver Thames, through forty miles of beautiful scenery, to Staines, travelling thence by train homeward. The secretary, Harry Lester, informs us that early application for tickets is necessary, as the great demand for them compels him to limit the number.

Miss Millie Legarde, who has deserted musical comedy for her old love the halls, is exclusively engaged at the Tivoli, and opens on Monday night with two new songs, "Entre Nous" and "The Storyette," by J. W. Tate, of which report speaks most highly. Miss Legarde appears in a chic shepherdess dress, voted by the ladies "a dream." Another new comer is Mr. Edward Lewis (comedian), with songs new and funny, whose success on the stage has been largely spread over musical comedy.

Mr. Harry Lauder had a great reception on Monday at the Tivoli on his reappearance after his month's absence through illness. A large crowd of his admirers had assembled to welcome him, and the cheering which commenced when his number went up was redoubled on his making his entrance, he being unable to start his song for several minutes. Among the new turns appearing on Monday at the Tivoli is the wonderful American soprano, Miss Edith Helena, who claims to have the greatest vocal range in the world To appear as leading prima donna in grand opera between two music hall engagements is, we believe, an unique experience for a music hall artist, but it happened to Miss Helena, who, after a three weeks' engagement at the Palais d'Eté, Brussels, was engaged to sing the part of Violetta in La Traviata with the French Grand Opera Company there.

Mr. Frank Lynne speaks in glowing terms of his trip to America. He is rebooked to return for a long tour in November next. Mr. Lynne opens at the Palace Theatre on Monday.

Mr. Paul Courtney's condition shows a slight improvement, but it will be some time before he will be able to resume business. Mrs. Courtney desires to thank Bella and Bijou, Mr. Tom Costello, Mr. Sam Barnard, Miss Gracie Grahame, Mr. and Mrs. Wisper, and all friends for their timely assistance.

Mr. Cyril Vernon will present at the Bedford on Monday night a new and original sketch, entitled A Marriage Broker, by C. P. Coughlan.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lucas have just concluded a most successful provincial tour, having been rebooked by every manager. Their scenes from "Martin Chuzzlewit" have proved most successful, and they open on Monday at the Duchess, Balham.

Miss Maude Mortimer has just accepted a new song for immediate production, entitled "When you're in love with somebody." This song will shortly be published by the Shapiro Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd.

Miss Ethel Ra-Leslie to-night finishes a tour of twenty-six weeks. This is her sixth year with the Moss and Stoll circuit, and she has signed another tour for next year. Miss Ra-Leslie commences her London season on Monday at the Cambridge and Middlesex.

Miss Kitty Malone, a charming Irish girl, who will shortly appear in town, made her first appearance on the stage in the child's part in La Cigale, when that charming opera was toured by the Chevalier Scovel. She has some good original songs, and will be gowned most elegantly.

The fiftieth performance of the Coliseum Revue was celebrated on Wednesday evening by a supper on the stage, given by Mr. Oswald Stoll to all those associated with the success of that brilliant production and to a number of gentlemen connected with journalism. It was some time after the witching hour of midnight that Mr. John Donald, the popular manager of the house, led the way to the supper-room, which scenically looked like the vast arena of some Roman amphitheatre devoted to the combats of gladiators.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Tom Honey, vice-chairs being filled by Mr. John Donald and Mr. Will A. Bennet, the chief of the Press Bureau at the St. Martin's-lane house. The toasts were intermittent—in fact, quite regular in their irregularity—but they were cordial and impulsive. Mr. Tom Honey made a genial and popular chairman, and, besides the loyal toasts, proposed "The health of Mr. Oswald Stoll," "Success to the Revue," and "The Ladies." Mr. Arthur Shirley responded in a few graceful sentences for the weaker sex, and Mr. Will A. Bennet spoke sympathetically of absent friends, referring especially to Mr. Walter Slaughter, who was away at Brighton in consequence of indisposition, and to M. Victor de Cottens, the French author of the Revue. Mr. John Donald and Mr. R. A. Northcott also spoke.

In the course of the proceedings Mr. R. H. Douglass, the well-known monologue entertainer, who has lately joined the cast of the Revue, playing the characters of Mr. Buggins and the Marquise, was brought to his feet. He related an amusing anecdote concerning the Lyceum and its production of Coriolanus. A scene-shifter who, with some of his mates, was looking at the announcement outside the famous house, read in contemptuous tones: "Sir Henry Irving as Coriolanus; music by Sir Arthur Sullivan; scenery by Sir Alma Tadema. Three blooming knights, and that's about all I give it." The guests had a "whirling" time both during and after supper, for Mr. Will Bishop initiated a "revolution" of the stage, and there was dancing of a very spirited kind. A Nestor of the Press asked for the privilege of dancing with a bonnie, bright-eyed British beauty of the ballet, and footed it merrily in a waltz. The happy party did not break up till after daylight.

The supper, supplied by J. Uccelli, of the Hotel Boulogne, 27, Gerrard-street, was excellently served, the two special dishes, "Cailles de vigne à la Moss"—a culinary compliment to Sir Edward—and "Bombe en surprise en Revue"—an iced creation—coming in for warm commendation. In the words of the menu, we "need not here dilate on their excellence." The spirit of Bohemianism prevailed, and the brothers of the pen will long remember the gaiety and jollity of a happily improvised function.

Among those present were:—Tom E. Murray, Billie Burke, Harry Corner, George Lupino, Harry Russon, Queenie Essex, Annie Braddan, Godwynne Earle, Rose Temple, Tilly Cunningham, Nellie Bowman, William Morgan, Charles Trevor, Dolly Corke, Beatrice Grenville, Dora Grattan, Rosa Bennett, Tessie Grattan, Norah O'Kelly, Violet Hope, Edie Stewart, Sybil Lonsdale, Dora Kennedy, Decima Chatteris, Violet Grazia, Ada Bishop, R. H. Douglass, Arthur Shirley, Will Bishop, Roland Carse, Harold Warren, Maurice Jacobi, R. A. Northcott, John Donald, Campbell Gray, Will A. Bennet, Isaac Seaman, Wallis Healy, Charles Berte, and H. Belcham.

Mr. Gus Garrick is to be seen in an extremely laughable new "act" at the Middlesex this week. We get a few jokelets and entertaining patter to begin with, and then he proceeds to imitate the various styles of comic singers. Standing in the centre of the footlights, and gazing at the conductor in a ludicrously dreamy manner, he depicts what he calls the Sam Mayo, or lazy sort of comedian. After singing a verse or two appropriate to the character, we are shown a comic singer of the rollicking, the Harry Champion order—vocalisation at express speed, hands and feet and body "on the move" at a suitable accompanying rate. A wonderfully quick change from frock dress to Highland costume, and we see a comedian of which Harry Lauder is the prototype. The audience laughs consumedly as Mr. Garrick whisks about the stage in his kilts as he sings "Oh, Sandy," and the effect is, to say the least, most comical.

Another change—this time into glaringly-coloured feminine attire—and we are entertained with an exceedingly grotesque burlesque of a famous Spanish dancer. The turn is one of the funniest things that have been seen at the Middlesex, and certainly forms a very popular feature of the programme. Even as he takes his wig off at the end Mr. Garrick secures a laugh, for the removal of the luxuriant female tresses reveals the fact that time has not dealt kindly with Mr. Garrick's topmost natural adornment.

Messrs. Francis and Day's twenty-fifth Song Annual will be published on June 18, and also the Dance Album, which has been co-existent a like number of years. To mark the occasion of the "quarter-century," many very special numbers will be included in each volume. To further accentuate the importance of the occasion, Mr. Sidney Kent, the well-known artist, has designed special titles and showbills symbolical of "The silver wedding of John Bull and Columbia," and furthermore the books will bear for the first time the famous firm's new and permanent New York imprint.

The contents of the Song Annual will include, among other popular numbers, "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you," "My Irish Molly O," "Rainbow," "In the shade of the old apple tree," "Molly, I love you" ("Molly, the jolly little lady"), "Who said 'girls'?" "Ain't yer gwine to say 'How do'?" "Don't cry, little girl," "My little buttercup," "Furniture on hire," "Little glow-worm," "My silent sweetheart," and "When the boys go marching by."

Some of the plums in the Dance Album comprise the "Casino" Lancers (Warwick Williams), "San "Sebastian" waltz (dedicated by its composer, Samuel Dodwell, to the King of Spain, by his Majesty's special permission), "Aldwych" quadrilles and "Hear the pipers calling" barn dance (Karl Kaps), "Enchantress" waltz (Chas. Coote), "Victoria Cross" military two-step (Gustav Howig), and "Rainbow" waltz (H. E. Pether).

Little Zola has produced at the Palace, Manchester, this week, an original song, entitled "Who ever would have thought it?" which proved an immediate success. The words are by Fred Murray and Walter Hilsbury, and the music by Orlando Powell.

Mr. Walter Slaughter has now recovered from his recent illness. He has been staying for a time at Brighton, and will return to work at the Coliseum on Monday.

Miss Fanny Robina and Miss Florry Cooper have been specially engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll to return to Glasgow, May 21, after only three months' absence.—Miss Emma Don, with the Black and White Comedy Quartette, returns to town, Monday, May 14, opening at the Chelsea Palace and the Ealing Hippodrome, after a seven months' tour in the provinces.—The Gilbert Girls, now on tour, have won considerable reputation by their brightness and vim in the song, "Wouldn't you like to spoon with me?"—Miss Constance Moxon opens on Monday at the Palace, Blackpool.

"Coppelia," the romantic ballet to be given at the Empire on Monday night next, is the second ballet—not the second work—composed by Delibes, following on La Source, and preceding Sylvia (June 14, 1876). It is generally considered his best. As now produced, it will be in two scenes, both painted by Harker, with accessories and costumes by Wilhelm to ensure correct Hungarian surroundings. In Coppelia Mlle. Genée made her debût as a première danseuse at the Opera House, Munich, and more recently danced in it at Copenhagen before the late King of Denmark and our Queen Alexandra. On this occasion her Majesty congratulated the dancer after the performance, and expressed a wish to see the ballet in London. It was owing to this gracious expression of the Queen that Mr. Alexander Genée was led to suggest its reproduction to the directors of the Empire.

It is in two scenes—the first, a Market Place in Hungary on the occasion of the presentation of a bell to the burgomaster and his wife at their golden wedding. Delibes' music in this ballet is well known, the most charming numbers in the first scene being a divertissement mazurka, the "Ear of Corn," based on Slavonic melodies and a Hungarian finale. The second scene takes place in the old doll-maker's house, where Svanilda takes the place of Coppelia—the doll—to the mystification of her lover Franz. The principal part, that of the village maid Svanilda, who is jealous of her lover, will be taken by Mlle. Adeline Genée; Coppelius, the doll-maker, by Fred Farren; Franz by Miss D. Craske; a vendor of mechanical toys by Mr. P. Sundberg, the clever Danish dancer; and Irma, his sweetheart, by Miss E. Clerc, the doll, Coppelia, being impersonated by Miss E. Collier. The ballet is produced under the direction of Mr. George Edwardes.

Mlle. Ghita Corri has been engaged by Mr. Frederic Baugh to reappear at the Lyceum from Monday next in her new and highly successful quick-change vocal scena, Waiting. This will make her third re-engagement at the house within five months. In this connection it is interesting to note that Mlle. Corri, among artists now on the variety stage, enjoys the perhaps unique distinction of appearing concurrently in grand opera, on the Halls, and in oratorio. During the past ten weeks she has given her fifth annual opera season at the West Pier Theatre, Brighton, appeared in London and the provincial theatres in her scena Waiting, and also rendered the soprano music of the Messiah, Samson, and Stabat Mater.

The 461st meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held at the offices in Wellington-street on Tuesday, when Mr. Fred Herbert was elected to the chair. There were also present Messrs. Charles Coborn, H. Griff, Geo. Preston, Arthur Rigby, Albert Voyce, Douglas White (hon. treasurer), and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and passed, questions arising out of them were dealt with. Instructions were given to the secretary in the case of a member who had repeatedly ignored applications for payment of a certain claim, and in that of a member who had refused to pay an excess fare due to a railway company it was decided to reimburse the company, and charge the amount to the member. It was agreed that all complaints with regard to railway companies' servants must be made direct to the committee.

The secretary reported the change of address of the agency at Rhyl, which would in future be in the hands of Mr. Harry Hunt, at the Mona Hotel; and the transference of the agency at Edinburgh to Mr. Frank Wilkinson, of the local Empire, was approved. A donation of two guineas was voted to a railway orphanage which did not participate in the annual distribution. The weekly statement was submitted showing that forty-one new members had joined, and the financial account of receipts and expenditure and the statement of receipts by the hon. treasurer were read and passed. Mr. Coborn commented upon the smallness of the attendance at the committee meetings, and the secretary was instructed to address a circular letter to the members of the executive informing them that Rule 23 would in future be enforced.

Eugenie Fougere, the French soubrette, who was found guilty of theft at the Clerkenwell Sessions on Thursday, was the defendant in an action brought at Westminster County Court on Monday by a firm of dramatic agents in respect of commission due for procuring contracts. It was arranged that the plaintiffs should take judgment for the sum of £5, with costs.

At the Palace Theatre, on Sunday, May 20, a concert will be given, by permission of the directors, in aid of the Charing Cross Hospital, Covent Garden, fund. The following artists have generously promised their services: Mr. H. Anning and Mme. Miro, Miss Margaret Cooper, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Charles Copland, Mr. Rohan Clensy, Mr. Tom Clare, Mr. Harry Dearth, Mr. Harry Fragson, Miss Gleeson-White, Miss Margaret Halstan, Miss Carrie Moore, Miss Alice Pierce, Mr. Arthur Prince, Mr. Robert Radford, Mlles. Eugenie and Virginia Sassard, Miss Carmen Sylva (the child soprano), Mr. Charles Saunders, Mr. William Short, Miss Evelyn Tyser, Les Trombetta, and Miss Ruth Vincent. The hospital is in urgent need of funds.

Mr. Herbert Blackmore writes from 11, Garrick-street, under date May 11, as follows:—"In The Era of last Saturday you publish a statement made by Mr. George Ashton, president of an association composed principally of music-hall and concert agents, which might lead the general public unacquainted with theatrical business to believe that only those agents who are members of the association over which he presides are fit and proper persons to whom novices should apply. This business has been in existence since 1869, and I have been personally connected with it since 1873, which gives me, I think, the right to state that, although I have no intention of joining the association in question, I am a fit and proper person for people to apply to for engagements on the stage. I have made countless engagements for all the most prominent members of the theatrical and music-hall profession, and this, together with the fact that I have the honour to be secretary to the Theatrical Managers' Association, makes me think it advisable, in my own interest, to ask you to be good enough to publish this letter, it being well known that this is the oldest theatrical agency, and the first one to do business on business lines."

The late Harry Diamond has left a little daughter totally unprovided for. The child, who is living at 3, Henry-street, Brighton, with her grandmother, an elderly widow without means, should certainly be got into an orphanage, and it is hoped that the friends of the late comedian will take the case up. Mr. John Gunn, of 143, South Wellington-street, Glasgow, is interesting himself in the little one's welfare.

Miss Violet Crossley, who, by the way, is not the lady of the same name who has played at Wyndham's Theatre, is to be thanked to a great extent for the prosecution of the heads of the Empire Theatrical Agency, who are now serving their sentences. It was Miss Crossley who informed the manager of the Palace that she had paid a fee to the agency in consideration of a promised engagement at that theatre. The assistant-manager, Mr. Fitzroy Gardner, followed up the case, and, having collected evidence, placed it in the hands of the Public Prosecutor, the Earl of Desart, Miss Crossley frankly undertaking to apply for the warrant.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE ALHAMBRA.

The Urbanora pictures bring the world before us day by day, and who shall say that they do not—in an infinitesimal measure, perhaps—by their enlightening influence make for international peace and amity by familiarising us with the joys and sorrows of other nations, and thus broadening the parochial outlook and making it Imperial? The wonderful enterprise that enables the Londoner to witness, within a few hours of their happening, occurrences in far distant lands, has, however, already been praised at length in these columns; and what we are particularly concerned about at present is the latest development of that enterprise—nothing less than the presentation of animated pictures that have been successfully taken by artificial light. The subject chosen is one that has absolutely engrossed the world of athletics for the last few weeks—viz., the contest between Hackenschmidt, the Russian lion, and Ahmed Madrali, the Terrible Turk, which took place at Olympia on April 28. The struggle between these two gladiators was undoubtedly genuine. The only disappointment about it was its extreme brevity, which robs it entirely of the right to be called Homeric. Nevertheless, it was an event that roused the hemispheres, and as it possesses no little historic significance, its reproduction in such an effective and telling manner is a triumph for the camera that should not be lightly passed over. The pictures, indeed, put all points of the struggle beyond dispute from the time the combatants enter the arena and spar for an opening until the victorious Hackenschmidt is seen playing the rôle of "upper dog" with the once formidable Oriental securely pinned beneath him. The display of wrestling craft, by force of circumstances, is not great, but the magnificent tactics by which the Slav giant turned the tables on his opponent in the second round is shown in interesting detail. Additional films, taken immediately before the match, afford a striking exhibition of the respective muscular proportions of the athletes. The man with the better brain undoubtedly won. Other interesting pictures in the current Urbanora series are the arrival of King Edward at Piræus, with a view of decorated ships at anchor, and the interesting doings of his Majesty at Athens during the recent Olympian games. A capital comic film is "The Lost Collar Button," a subject that appeals with direct force to the mind of the mere male. Altogether, the Urbanora pictures supply a highly appreciated interlude in the Alhambra entertainment, which Mr. George Scott is keeping up to the high artistic standard that has been the distinguishing feature of his management of the historic home of ballet.

A welcome return was made on Monday evening by Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, who have but lately returned from a most successful tour of Australia with the distinguished entrepreneur Mr. Harry Rickards. The trio manage to make their show of magical problems and illusions not only interesting, but humorous. Indeed, the lightsome spirit of mirth enters largely into their plan of entertainment, and this is largely the reason of its success—which on the night of which we are now writing was immediate and complete. One of the tricks, in which the three are concerned, may be called the inexhaustible saucepans, from which are extracted a whole yard of poultry. A most amusing illusion, too, is that in which the imperturbable Bosco apparently transposes the head of a duck and rooster, the hybrid fowls afterwards perambulating the stage, to the intense amusement of the audience. Following a clever exhibition of coin manipulation by Mdlle. Talma, that lady and her two partners have "larx" with some astonished spectators in front, from whose pockets they extract coins and cards. The lady carries on her amiable depredations in the stalls, Le Roy "filches" with cool imperturbability in the circle, and Bosco pursues his nefarious practices in the gallery. As a conclusion to their amusing and interesting entertainment the feat of levitation is performed, with Mdlle. Talma as the medium. Her sudden disappearance is a clever trick, that brings a most interesting and popular interlude to a conclusion.

The eccentric acrobatic performance of Keen and Waller is keenly enjoyed, and nothing in the way of animal training can surpass the performance of Richard Braatz's four-legged acrobats and pantomime performers. They share in a very amusing rally caused by the invasion of the privacy of the bedroom of a domestic canine couple by an interfering companion, who makes his entry by the chimney. The alarm is given by the violent barking of the disturbed pair at an upper window, and then there is a pretty to-do over walls, through traps, and round revolving doors. The dogs perform without any directions from their trainer, who takes a special call at the conclusion of the turn.

The Yiulians Family are responsible for the latest development of the Risley business. This consists of feet-to-feet balancing, while the adult performer, with soles uppermost, lies prone on the back of a companion, assisting at the same time a clever youth in the accomplishment of some difficult feats. The shoulder tumbling of the crowd, too is both intrepid and smart. Other attractions in the fine bill are Signor Armando Lecomte, a baritone from the opera houses, Italy, who sings in cultured style to the excellent accompaniment supplied by the band under the able direction of Mr. George Byng; a "scene in Holland," in which appear the Voldam Bros., the clever and whimsical Dutch eccentrics; and the Parisiana ballet.

HOLBORN EMPIRE.

The state of affairs at this place of amusement may be accurately summed up in one word—flourishing. The old Royal was always a popular resort, but its essentially up-to-date successor is far more attractive in every respect. In the current programme there are several items that are characterised by the charm of novelty, at least so far as London audiences are concerned. One of the turns, indeed, Miss Mollie Malone, on Monday made her first appearance not only in the metropolis, but in England; and the compiler of the programme poetically describes her as "a branch of merriment from the sparkling tree of comedy." Anyhow, the young lady from the Emerald Isle made a very favourable impression by her excellent rendering of a couple of Irish songs.

A cordial reception also awaited Mount and Corelli, who gave their new musical duologue, entitled The Master and the Maid. The lady resuming the character she formerly played in The Belle of New York, sings a song from that popular musical comedy, concluding with a smart dance. The gentleman, seated at the piano, gives a convincing evidence of his ability as a vocalist and mimic. The couple are recalled, and then the gentleman sings a ballad, in which he is joined by a boy seated in the gallery, whom, he informs the audience, he discovered in the streets of Liverpool. The lad then appears upon the stage, and the duet is brought to a conclusion amidst loud applause. Another little musical piece, called Her Birthday, is brightly presented by Miss Minnie Hunt and Mr. Rhys Thomas. The lady plays the part of a wife who believes she has reason to be jealous of her husband, her suspicions having been excited by a present which he has purchased, and which she suspects is intended for a rival. The innocent husband brings a counter charge against the lady, who is foolish enough to worry herself without any real cause; but the matrimonial sky is quickly cleared when on her birthday the present is placed in her hands.

Messrs. C. St. John Denton and George Rowlands have brought here their company of children in the scena entitled The Punch and Judy Girl. We have already borne testimony to the excellence of the entertainment given by these youngsters, whose training has evidently been of the most thorough description. Their dancing is remarkably good, particularly that of the clever little girl Marjorie Lawrence, whose performance evokes quite a storm of applause. It is the first appearance of this juvenile company at this hall; it is not likely to be their last. The Four Rambos, in a new comedy trapeze act, also meet with a good reception. They represent a couple of tourists, a red-headed yokel, and a monkey; and in this guise they give a performance marked by great skill, and well garnished by comic business which excites hearty merriment. A stout tourist is always getting in the way and being knocked down by his companions as they swing from bar to bar. The comic countryman already mentioned is very prominent, and the agility displayed by the four performers never fails to excite general admiration.

Mr. Joe Peterman's company is here in the musical extravaganza The Belle of the Orient. In this Mr. Peterman himself causes much laughter by his broadly comical embodiment of a Jew, and he has the support of a thoroughly capable company. The Mayvilles, the well-known Lilliputian performers, are also here again, and meet with their usual success. Mr. Alf Chester's policeman presents no exaggerated features, but all the same he makes a palpable hit by his telling rendering of "I wonder if the sergeant knows." Miss Edith Courtney, a cultured ballad vocalist, sings "Come back to Erin" in admirable style; George Young, the blind musical collier boy, plays with skill selections on the concertina; other contributors including Miss Kitty Wager, a popular comedienne; Miss Cris Cross, serio; and Tom E. Hughes, comedian. Lux's poodles give an interesting performance; and pictures of the recent eruption of Vesuvius are shown on the bioscope. The entertainment opens with a selection played by the orchestra under the direction of Mr. James Sale, and Mr. Claude E. Marner ably discharges the duties of manager.

THE LYCEUM.

One naturally associates the Lyceum with productions of a tragic type; and the sketch entitled The Freak's Revenge, which is one of the leading items in this week's programme, is sensational enough to tickle the most jaded theatrical appetite. The first scene represents the exterior of an old-fashiond country inn, at which arrives a party consisting of Captain Vulcan, a naval officer, his wife, and adopted daughter, Netta. They learn from the landlord that a menagerie has arrived in the neighbourhood, and that one of its attractions is a freak who is known as the man-monkey. This unfortunate creature possesses the intelligence of a human being, but has an ape-like head and features. He is known as Esau. The news alarms the captain, as years ago he ran away with the wife of a man answering the description of Esau, and he has every reason to fear his vengeance should they meet. The runaway wife died, leaving her daughter Netta in the care of Vulcan. The captain makes hurried preparations for immediate departure, but encounters the man-monkey, who recognises him as the destroyer of his domestic happiness. The hour of his revenge is at hand. The freak has found a faithful companion in a gorilla that travels with the menagerie, and shows wonderful intelligence in understanding and obeying the wishes of the man-monkey. Believing that the captain's wife is in one of the upper rooms at the inn, Esau, having plied the gorilla with whisky, the effect of which is to make the animal very savage, it makes its way up the side of the house, and, opening a window, disappears. Esau then learns to his horror that Mrs. Vulcan is not in the room, but that his own daughter is there. He hurriedly follows the gorilla, and is only just in time to prevent the animal murdering her, but it turns on the newcomer with savage fury, and Esau has to defend himself from its attacks. A fight to the death follows. The man-monkey kills the gorilla, but is himself fatally injured in the fierce struggle, and dies in the presence of Vulcan, who begs for and obtains his forgiveness for the wrong done him years ago. The sketch is played by a combination some of the leading members of which belonged to the old stock company at the Surrey Theatre when that house was under the management of Mr. George Conquest. Mr. Fred Conquest gives a clever and telling embodiment of the freak, and Mr. Leon Dubois is also successful in a very realistic rendering of the gorilla. Mr. Dick Cruikshanks submits a capital character-sketch of Caleb Calvin, the manager of the travelling menagerie; Mr. Ainslie Burton is amusing as the landlord of the inn; and Mr. Harry McClelland does well as Captain Vulcan. Miss Kate Olga Vernon gives able support as Mrs. Vulcan; and Miss Laura Dyson plays Netta in good style.

Baddow is a clever young ventriloquist, who, reclining on a couch, carries on a conversation with his single figure, which is seated on an adjacent table. He smokes a cigarette and also drinks from a glass while talking with "Tim," who also obliges with a song. Baddow's technique is decidedly good. An important engagement is that of the Yags and Mary Trio of trick cyclists ,who appear in a startling act called "Le Cycle a Travers Les Aps." Their performance is one that should not be missed, more particularly their cycle-somersaulting in mid-air. Reco, a comedy acrobat, is responsible for a very funny act. His burlesque acrobatic feats are cleverly done, and cause much merriment Miss Vickey Delmar is a smart little drummer girl, who also displays grace and agility as a dancer. Hatter and Ray, American artists, are well received in a brisk comedy act; and Miss Lottie Stone's troupe of lady vocalists and dancers are also greeted with applause. By means of a rapid change of head-gear, they represent costers and their sweethearts out for a holiday, coons, and other characters. Miss Fatmah Diard is an operatic vocalist, whose charming and cultured singing is greatly enjoyed. The laughable sketch Bink's Blunder, is excellently played by Mr. Harry Russell as Binks, Mr. Alec Newland, and the musical comedy artist, Miss Verna Reed. Mlle. Kloët is seen in her Continental speciality, entitled Les Poses Pittoresques, which includes her latest creation, "La Penetance," illustrating the story of Jane Shore. Mr. Nat Watkins, character comedian, with an eccentric song and dance, meets with success; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are illustrative of "A Bad Boy's Diary." Mr. Frederic Baugh looks after the front of the house, and Mr. Alfred Dove is the conductor of the orchestra.

THE METROPOLITAN.

Full well they laugh, but not "with counterfeited glee" at Motoring, which occupies a prominent place in Mr. Jack Edgar's current scheme of amusement at the Edgware-road palace. The sketch, since it was first seen—now some years ago—has been introduced with and without permission into many pantomimes, but to thoroughly enjoy its many drolleries one must witness Mr. Harry Tate as the amateur chauffeur, who starts so gaily on his journey, determined to do the distance between London and Portsmouth in half-an hour. It is a sketch to be seen more than once, for Mr. Tate's comedy is quite refreshing, and one is not easily tired of it. The youth who affects the giddy schoolboy is an effective introduction since the first performance, and the gamin who shows such a close and profound interest in the doings of the enraged owner of the motor is a most amusing little cuss.

A turn that is, comparatively speaking, new to London, is that presented by Drawee, a particularly neat juggler, who is blessed with funny assistants in a nigger and a collie. The dog goes for the black every time he attempts a trick, and pushes him over. He is a most sagacious creature, and is quite as anxious, apparently, to get his laughs as his human companions. Drawee is decidedly clever with plates, and accomplishes the trick of supporting and balancing a tumbler filled with a cooling drink on a tripod of straws. He is also deft in his manipulation of a hat and an umbrella, and, generally speaking, his entertainment is one of the most attractive of its kind. The Tally-Ho Trio term their variety act of singing and comedy The Three Buttercups. Naturally, each of them desires the companionship of "Daisy," and each in turn meets with assault and battery from that lady's more favoured suitor. Solos are most expressively given, and the voices of the trio blend in excellent harmony. They are genuinely popular with their attractive entertainment.

One of the chief comedians of the bill is Mr. Fred Spencer, termed an "expressionist," who keeps the house amused while, in a dame's song, he sings of an elderly maiden's desire for a husband, and patters of a lover's interview with her mother. Mr. Spencer possesses an unctuous style, and entirely avoids the pitfall of vulgarity into which so many female impersonators fall. Mr. George French puts a good deal of extravagant absurdity into his burlesque of the militiaman, the song accompanying it being blessed with no little humour. His second song is a peculiar mixture of seriousness and sarcasm, the verses setting out in some detail the debt of the Empire to the working classes, who not only build gaols but fill them. They are also responsible for valuable inventions; and the extension of an Empire on which the sun never sets is in a large measure due to their fighting qualities and their self-sacrifice as soldiers. Mr. French raises a storm of applause by the rendering of the song.

Any exhibition of skill in boxing or wrestling is always a certain draw at the Metropolitan; and a new exponent of the art of jiu-jitsu, Diabutsu by name, has been affording audiences some excitement by his contests with English competitors. On the night of our visit he found a tough opponent in Hewett, a wrestler from Bermondsey, who lasted ten minutes ere he was defeated. At the conclusion of the bout opinions were freely expressed that Hewett had not been treated fairly, and eventually the timekeeper and cicerone of the Jap gave the Londoner a sovereign, which was certainly earnt by a very strenuous tussle that caused considerable feeling. Heartiness and jollity distinguish the acrobatic comedy and dancing of Conway and Leland, who make light of the misfortune of losing a leg each. They finish up a most enjoyable interlude by a burlesque of wrestling. Terry and Bentley keep the audience engrossed while they present a mixed entertainment of singing, dancing, and acrobatism. The lady has a cultured style of singing. Expert high kicking is agreeably displayed by the lissome Sisters Casselli; Miss Alma Gray is a capital step-dancer; Mr. Johnny Fuller is responsible for a neat performance on the wire as a feline, his movements being very cat-like; Messrs. Tennyson and Wallis are droll in their cross-talk; and Burley and Burley justify their title of quaint Scotch comedians.

Miss Winifred Hare is a special favourite with West Londoners, many of whom remember her pantomime triumphs at the Coronet Theatre, Notting Hill Gate. She is a decided acquisition to any variety programme, her beauty, grace, and charm being undeniable. She also sings admirably, and is altogether a clever burlesque actress. Other turns in a most attractive bill are Nat Travers, the Jalvans, Mr. Will Poluski, jun., Miss Kitty Wager, Mr. Pat Rafferty, and Mr. Fred Poplar.

EALING HIPPODROME.

It would be difficult to imagine a more popular engagement than that of Miss Florence St. John, and the appearance here of this fascinating actress and singer has proved how completely, by her attractive personality, she has won the affections of her innumerable admirers. On such an occasion memories of Madame Favart and the old days at the little house in the Strand must arise; but, alike to those who knew her in the past delightful days and to all who see her for the first time in My Milliner's Bill, a rich banquet of mirth and melody is provided. Ever tuneful, always charming, Miss St. John has lost none of that witchery of style by which, with "I am such an artless thing" and the "Nun" songs, she first captured the admiration of a London audience, and won a foremost place upon the stage. As the debt-besetted Mrs. Merridew the popular actress at once enlists our sympathies, and the reference to the serpent who tempted our first mother having been a dressmaker was received with much merriment. Her song, "You said you loved me, Johnnie," was rendered with all her well-known charm of manner. Miss St. John is ably supported by Mr. C. B. Bedells, in the dual character of husband and broker's man, and the comedietta went with a merry swing from start to finish, and at the fall of the curtain both artists were the objects of repeated recalls.

A novelty, entitled "Song Sketching," is presented by Mr. Rossi Ashton, "England's lightning cartoonist." As usual with these representations, the stage is occupied by a line of frames containing blank pasteboards, upon which, with the rapidity of thought, Mr. Rossi Ashton proceeds to sketch a series of pictures depicting the subject matter of various songs whose titles are placed at the head of each frame, amongst others, "Pansy Faces," "Maisie in the Corn," and "Bill Bailey is Home." A very pleasing feature, and one that adds an excellent finish to the turn, is that while each picture is figuring out under the clever pencil of the artist, the band renders the appropriate music for each song. Mr. Rossi Ashton was loudly applauded. Mr. Billy Hobbs is successful in introducing something new into the coon business. His two numbers, "Ain't yer got a cosy corner in your heart for me" and "Nobody," have a quaint and melodious catchiness most pleasing to the ear. The Sunrays—eight dainty lasses in pretty costumes—form a combination very much after the fashion of the Palace Girls, and are not far behind them in skill and grace. Their two songs—first, the well-known "Won't you come and spoon with me?" and a second to the tune of "La Mattchiche"—were given very melodiously. With a quick change of dress into Spanish costumes, the "Eight Rays" form a beautiful sun-picture, and their appearance was all too short.

Mr. Harry Anderson's two numbers, "My new pal is my old gal" and "Home without a mother is a chair without a seat," strike a sympathetic chord in the hearts of the audience, and a moment of silence is followed by a genuine outburst of applause. All the wonders of modern stage bicycling are surpassed in the wonderful display of the Selbinis, and sensational is but a poor term to employ, for in trick riding the seemingly impossible is realised. Trick follows trick with bewildering rapidity; to ride a machine in the ordinary way seems widely removed from the Selbini programme, and they appear more at home head to head than feet to feet; but they are always fearless, graceful, and daring, and the great feat of the somersaulting bicycle from the swing board is witnessed with breathless interest. Miss Lalla Selbini, the sole lady member of the troupe, is the equal of her brothers in skill and daring, and her change of costume, made while balanced upon the pedals of her machine, is a triumph of graceful audacity. In the phenomenal show of the Selbinis trick-riding and acrobating would seem to reach its apotheosis. Karr and Koony are two uncommonly funny patter-singers, and their parody of "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you" is exquisitely comic. The Montague Bros. present, for the first time on the variety stage, an entirely new and sensational creation entitled The Sculptor's Dream. The brothers claim to be the most perfectly-formed athletes ever seen on the stage, and for beauty of figure they might place themselves in competition with some of the finest examples of Greek art and not suffer by the comparison. In a dream a sculptor sees some of his aspirations realised, and the statues, upon which his chisel has been engaged, stepping from their pedestals, exhibit in a series of living pictures the perfect symmetry of their red modelled figures. Miss Alma Gray is a sweet singer, and her tuneful song, "My little bush girl," was associated with some remarkable double step-dancing. The dainty barefoot display of Miss Mildred de Grey has lost none of the dainty novelty which so distinguished it on her first appearance at the Tivoli. Exquisitely dressed, and aided by every resource of scenic art, the beautiful dancer certainly completes a most enticing stage picture. Miss De Grey's graceful person lends itself admirably to her unique performance, and a crowded house testifies its appreciation most ungrudgingly.

WALTHAMSTOW PALACE.

For the moment philanthropy looms largely in the local eye of Walthamstow, five nights of the week at the Palace being devoted by Mr. Arthur J. Barclay to a "ticket benefit," organised by the Wood-street Philanthropic Society, in aid of deserving charities. But, apart altogether from these special claims, the programme submitted for the week is quite sufficient to attract large and enthusiastic audiences, being characterised by nearly every feature that goes to make up popular success.

Ford and Hanson, the musical millionaires, seem to expend some of their superfluous millions on their electric display, the stage being one blaze of brightness and colour. The musical attainments of the two, on many weird and wild instruments, are productive of unbounded delight, and the clever impersonation of various famous composer-conductors (including "General" Booth), ranging from Wagner to Sousa, each cleverly made-up, is capital. Mr. Bert Brantford contributes an amusing song, "I didn't know what to say," with much acceptance. The Five Julians, a quintette of charming young ladies, sing admirably, and dance with combined grace and vigour. An enthusiastic reception is given to Mr. John Grün Marx, "the modern Hercules," whose deeds of strength and weight-lifting are simply marvellous. Marx goes through his performance with as much elegance and muscular power, and his "turn" is among the most loudly applauded of the evening. Miss Daisy Dormer is a coon impersonator of more than usual neatness, her pretty singing being only excelled by her juvenile dancing. Miss Hanid Alexander, the juvenile pianist, appears in a musical scena "Home from School," in which she sings, recites, and dances cleverly, while giving a brilliant rendering on the piano of "Alice, where art thou?" with variations. The young lady is an immense favourite. The Daunton-Shaw troupe, Australian trick cyclists, rouse the spectators to enthusiasm with their really astonishing manœuvres on bicycles, over which they exercise a control that is almost breath-catching. The very machines seem to answer to the calls made upon them, as if they were endowed with intelligence, and desirous of proving themselves equal to that nearly obsolete animal the horse. The Daunton-Shaws score every moment they are on the stage. Cruikshank, "the fool of the family," repeats a clever and amusing entertainment, that has secured popularity for him before now on these boards. He has, this week, much droll "patter," always up to date, which, in conjunction with his sweet singing and artistic instrumentalism, keeps his audience in a constant state of laughter and applause. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope has some capital films to show, of which those representing the recent match between Hackenschmidt and Madrali rouse the greatest enthusiasm.

For more solid fare an interesting sketch, No Man's Land, is produced by Mr. Henry Herne and his company. This proves to be a melodrama in small compass, devoted to treasure-hunting, mutiny at sea, and realistic tropical downfalls of "real rain." The story is interesting and straightforward, considering the difficulties attached to compressing into the space of thirty minutes or so a plot that might be elaborated into four acts. Mr. Henry Herne gives a manly interpretation of Harry Oaklands, and is well supported by Miss Ida Millais as Mary Bathurst; Mr. T. F. Pitt as the ultra-wicked mate, Mat Marsden; Messrs. S. H. Norton, Alf. Byron, and F. Dennis. The stage-management of the whole evening, in the hands of such an expert as Mr. John Grant, leaves nothing to be desired.

QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

The system of two houses a night, which has proved so remunerative in recent years, is being applied with satisfactory results at the old-established hall at Poplar. It has now come into the possession of Messrs. F. and M. Abrahams, and enjoys the personal supervision of the veteran Fred Abrahams, who is not above administering a severe rebuke coram populo on the slightest indication of a turbulent spirit in the gallery. The hall has undergone a thorough transformation, and is handsomely decorated, new scenery and lighting effects adding to the brightness of the house, which now possesses many of the features of a West End establishment. Mr. Jack Woolf, than whom no more popular personage exists in the East End, is putting his best endeavours into the management of the hall, and the excellence of the programme and the smartness with which it is presented render the enjoyment of the crowded audiences complete.

A magnetic attraction of the current bill is Miss Gipsy Woolf, who makes her first appearance in London since her return from the Continent, where she brought the playgoers of many of the European cities to her feet in her scena, entitled Fun in a Forest, in which she has the assistance of the Six Sunbeams. The scena has caught the Continental flavour on its travels abroad, and is now a prettier and more finished spectacle than ever. Miss Woolf, who appears as a gipsy girl, sings in cultured style and dances bewitchingly, her song of "The Bungalow in Borneo" being delivered in captivating manner, the agile movements of the bevy of comely maidens dressed in picturesque Romany costumes, who supply a tambourine accompaniment to their mazy dance, giving added beauty to the scene. The handsome dresses, which are a feature of the production, were made by another clever member of the family, Miss Lily Woolf, of Great Portland-street. Miss Gipsy Woolf, who has had many tempting offers from Italy, Spain, and other European countries, is enthusiastically applauded, both for her pastoral selection and for her song of "My Irish Lily," in which she is also assisted by her Six Sunbeams.

A powerful draw is also supplied by the sporting sketch, The Winner, presented by Mr. Brien McCullough's company, in which Epsom Downs is represented, with real racehorses, and all the life and movement of a racecourse. Mr. McCullough's playlets, while appealing to the popular taste, are never without a literary finish, which make them acceptable to the more cultured among the audience, and the result is that all parts of the house take pleasure in their performance. Mr. McCullough, whose name is a power at Poplar, is admirably suited in his part of Bill Winner, the ne'er-do-well, who has spent five-and-twenty years in looking for work. His make-up is a study, and his droll rendering of the part is productive of continuous laughter. Competent artists take part in the performance of the piece, Mr. Algernon Syms, for many years the idol of playgoers at a neighbouring theatre, appearing in the part of Frank Noble. Mr. Syms is gallant and courteous in the part of the gentlemanly owner of race-horses, and acts in finished style. Miss Bernice Fielding embodies the intrepid Lois Winner with her customary dramatic excellence and skilful emphasis; and Miss Nellie Nelson as Polly Primrose helps valuably in the comedy department. Mr. Gilbert Vernon as Lord Swindell is a capable villain, and Mr. Stafford Smith is a lifelike trainer.

A sketch of another kind is provided by the Elvio Comedy Four in Those Troublesome Slaveys, the title-rôles in which are impersonated by two comedians, whose eccentricities give rise to much anxiety on the part of their mistress. All sorts of knock-about antics are indulged in by the comic couple, who are also expert dancers, and the house is kept in constant laughter throughout their turn. The Sisters Desmond, old favourites in the East End as elsewhere, sing a duet in which the utility of the motor-car and the homely pony-trap are contrasted, to the manifest advantage of the latter. In their second selection the clever artists dilate respectively on the virtues of the upper classes and the lower, in the course of which the popular ear is completely caught by the references showing that charity and pluck are almost exclusively the property of the masses.

Clever balancing on horseshoe-shaped rings is submitted by the Sylvines Trio, who also submit a skilful act on the triple trapeze, on which some expert passing from hands to feet is done. The show, in which electrical effects are used, is loudly applauded. Miss Ida Kathrena provides a novel and pretty scena in her Carnival of Toys; the New Bioscope exhibits an interesting series, including a thrilling film in which an attempt to wreck a train is heroically frustrated; and Miss Connie Milton, comedienne, and Mr. Harry Martell, comedian, also appear. The orchestra, which has been largely augmented, is carefully directed by Mr. B. Conroy.

CHELSEA PALACE.

We were pleased to hear from Mr. Berlin, who is acting as locum tenens for Mr. Edward Swanborough at the Kings'-road Palace, that the genial Teddy has made further progress towards recovery. Hundreds of the popular manager's intimates will be glad to hear the good news. During his residence in Chelsea Mr. Swanborough has made many friends among the frequenters of the Palace, and frequent and anxious have been the inquiries concerning him during his indisposition both from his humble admirers in the gallery and his more aristocratic chums in the stalls and circle. The programme this week is of a most interesting nature, and in the two hours or so traffic of the stage figure two sketches. Who is Guilty?—practically speaking a monologue—is presented by Mr. Theo Bouwmeester, a Dutch actor of considerable ability, who in a court scene presided over by a juge d'instruction, plays the part of various witnesses who give evidence concerning a case of suspected arson. Considerable scope is given to the actor, who not only portrays with unmistakable power the mental anxiety of the guilty one, but is equal to the touches of comedy that are required in some of the other rôles. In Nana, the other sketch on the bill, we discover a strong resemblance to the younger Dumas' La Dame aux Camélias. The Count de Vaville figures as one of the lovers of the heroine, who has given her heart to Armand. We have also the interview between her and Armand's father, in which Nana announces her intention of giving up the man she adores. Miss Dolly Elsworthy, who hitherto has been associated for the most part with parts of a pronounced low comedy type, is scarcely strong enough for the titular character, and her impersonation lacks charm and subtlety, the management of the voice leaving much to be desired. Mr. Adderley Howard does not avoid the staginess that always seems to afflict the representatives of Armand's father; and the other parts are conventionally represented.

In the early part of the evening Mr. Alix Lukos presents his entertainment of recitative and song entitled "Faces in the Fire," and in a series of verses pays glowing tributes to the wise statesmanship of Beaconsfield and the impressive and reckless valour of the Light Brigade at the Charge of Balaclava. The chief comic star of the bill is Mr. Will Evans, who manages to make comic capital out of his parody of Tommy Atkins, under the title of "The Invasion of 1910." He drills an awkward squad in a way that is extravagantly absurd, and provides a most hilarious interlude.

Lieutenant Albini has the rare faculty of being able to amuse with equal success the occupants of stalls, circle, and gallery by his patter during the time that he puzzles them by the clever illusion,—"The Lady in Black." Miss Marie Gautier, plays the part of this mysterious and attractive personage, who while her hands are bound tightly to a post behind her with calico bands manages to accomplish all sorts of seemingly impossible feats—such as making a cigarette and smoking it, firing shots from a revolver, &c. Mr. G. H. Elliott, the chocolate-coloured coon, has a very successful number in his pretty coon serenade, which is entitled "Caroo." He sings it with much expression, and his success is shared by a young lady, who possesses considerable vocal ability. Mr. Elliott also dances admirably. Tennyson and Wallis as a couple of bobbies rouse the audience to hilarity by their patter ,and evoke applause in a song the sentiment of which is impeccable. Miss May Moore Duprez admirably fulfils her mirthful mission as the "jolly Dutch girl"; and Terry and Bentley present a successful entertainment, entitled The Hunt, in which the lady sings with no little charm "Chéri." Mr. Angelo Asher directs the musical forces here, and invariably secures an admirable ensemble.

EMPIRE, EDINBURGH.

The Scotsman: Mr. Horace Wheatley, one of the most popular comedians on the circuit, greatly pleased the audience by his amusing patter, fine vocal efforts, and neat step-dancing.

The Dispatch: An old Empire favourite who met with a warm reception was Horace Wheatley, and last night he sang and danced with all his old charm, and his racy stories kept the house in constant amusement.

HERR SACCO, who on the 8th inst. completed the twenty-second day of his thirty-two days' fast, at the Regent Theatre, Salford, appeared to be doing well, although the loss he then had sustained in weight was 34lb. He commenced with 202lb. on April 17, and on the 27th he had reduced it to 181lb., i.e., 21lb. loss. On the 1st inst. his weight stood at 175lb. with a loss of 27lb. Since then the reduction has been an average of 1lb. per day, leaving him to commence on the 9th inst. with 168lb. weight.

A CURIOUS incident occurred at St. George's Hall on Wednesday afternoon during the performance of Mr. Devant's thought-reading trick with his sister, Miss Dora Devant. It will be remembered that Mr. Devant blindfolds that lady, and then asks half a dozen persons in the audience to suggest some action that they would like her to do. The suggestions are whispered to Mr. Devant, who then silently communicates his thoughts to his sister. On Wednesday afternoon a man asked that Miss Devant might take the purse out of his wife's bag, and hand it to him. Miss Devant took the bag, put her hand into it, shook it, but found no purse. This was the first intimation that the owner of the bag had that the purse had been either lost or stolen. The lady and her husband immediately left the hall, and subsequently informed Mr. Devant by telephone that the purse had been left on the counter of a shop, and had been recovered.

FOR PREVENTION OF DANGER FROM WHIRLIGIGS AND SWINGS, WHEN SUCH WHIRLIGIGS AND SWINGS ARE DRIVEN BY STEAM POWER.

A person who shall cause or suffer any whirligig or swing driven by steam power to be let or used for hire, shall comply with the following regulation: that is to say, he shall cause every such whirligig or swing to be so placed that it shall have a free space around it on every side, equal at least to its greatest height; he shall cause every such whirligig or swing to be firmly and properly fixed and erected so that it may be used for the purpose for which it is intended, without danger to any person; he shall cause every such whirligig or swing to be under the management and control of not less than two competent persons during the whole time that it may be driven by steam power, and he shall cause one of such persons to be exclusively occupied in taking charge of the apparatus by which such steam power is applied to the whirligig or swing. He shall not cause or suffer a greater number of persons to use such whirligig at any one time than the number for which sitting accommodation is provided therein or thereon. He shall not cause or suffer such whirligig or swing to be at any time worked at a greater speed than shall be consistent with the safety of every person riding on or in, or using the same.

A person who shall ride on or in, or who shall use a whirligig or swing used by steam power, shall not do any act whereby his own safety or the safety of any other person may be endangered.

The person having control of the apparatus by which steam power is applied to a whirligig or swing, immediately on his becoming aware that any person in, or on, or using such whirligig or swing is ill, or desires to dismount therfrom, shall cause such whirligig or swing to be brought to a standstill as speedily as may be practicable.

Section VII. sets out the penalties for breach of the bye-laws.

Every person who shall offend against any of the foregoing bye-laws shall be liable for every such offence to a penalty of five pounds, and in the case of a continuing offence to a further penalty of forty shillings, for each day after written notice of the offence from the sanitary authorities.

This section also provides that the magistrates may reduce the penalty to any sum that in their judgment meets the justice of the case.

GOOD business all round rewarded the efforts of the showmen at Oswestry May Fair, the star attraction being Mrs. F. Collins's coliseum of varieties (late Wall's phantoscope); the other Collins concerns were one set of motors, one set of racing cockerels, and P. Collins, jun.'s, steam yachts; Hutin's temple of magic; and shooting galleries by Wright, Turner, Dobson, Pilling, Cordwell, and Kempe; throwing games and varieties by Wright, Dobson, Turner, and Kempe; stalls and minor novelties by Humphries, Fletcher, Harrison, Fossett, Greatorex, Kempe, Dobson, and Pilling.

OSWESTRY is well served by the London and North-Western, the Great Western, and the Cambrian railways. These lines pour into the town at the fair time large crowds of eager sightseers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the Showmen's Guild: Per Mr. S. Forrest—W. Elliot, 5s.; T. Bolesworth, 5s.; J. Sandars, 5s. Per Mr. Wm. Mitchell—W. M. Kay, 5s. Per Mr. Ashington—J. Joy, 5s.; H. Ashington, 5s.

THE principal shows and machine novelties at Heckmondwike Fair were Ashington's cinématograph, Hogini's circus, J. W. Waddington's motor-cars, G. Redfern's flying motors, W. Waddington's farmyard set. There was also a big display of minor novelties provided by C. Blake, Vanner, Bassett, Joy, Houldsworth, Seed, Walker, Blackburn, and others.

WILL the correspondent, "E. S." or "E. L.," who sent a communication to Mr. Fred Bibby, of Manchester, write direct to the Secretary of the Showmen's Guild, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.?

THE Guild secretary wishes it to be clearly understood that it will greatly facilitate the society's work and save time if all matters of business are sent at once to the office of the Guild, and not to individual members of the committee.

FOSSETT'S CIRCUS was at Todmorden on Tuesday, and gave two performances in the Holme Field. The evening entertainment was crowded, although wretched weather prevailed. A clever performance on the high trapeze was given by Sivardo, and Mlle. Emmie, with a highly-bred horse, proved what careful training can do. Robert Fossett, jun., and Thomas Fossett are both clever artists, the latter bringing down the house with his lightning speed riding. Mr. Roberts introduced Topsy, an intelligent performing elephant, and the performance concluded with Cezar, the fire horse.

THE LATE JOHN DEE HUMPHRIES.

The letter from Mr. Arthur Reeve, published in our columns last week, draws attention to the necessity for helping Mrs. Humphries and her family. We strongly commend this most deserving case to the generosity of the showman world.

The many friends of the deceased will, we are confident, now that they know the urgent necessity of the case, respond with readiness to this appeal.

During the whole course of a laborious and honourable career John Dee Humphries was ever ready to assist his brother showmen. His open-handed generosity and unfailing kindness endeared him to a wide circle of friends and comrades in the circus and show world.

The object of the fund is to enable the widow and family to maintain their home until such time as the children are able to earn an income sufficient for that purpose.

First list of subscriptions:—

Lord John Sanger	£5	5	0

Subscriptions sent to The Era and made payable to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift will be acknowledged week by week.

MITCHAM FAIR.

It is a matter of very grave concern to London showmen that one of their oldest fairs is threatened with extinction. Rumours of the possibility of this happening have been current for some time past in more or less well-informed quarters.

With a view of testing the accuracy of the rumour the executive of the Showmen's Guild communicated by letter with the local authorities, but no answer was sent. After waiting a reasonable time for an answer, two of the executive officials of the Guild went down to Mitcham and made inquiries of a thoroughly exhaustive nature, with the result that a very alarming state of affairs was revealed.

In the first place, the people of Mitcham are threatened with the abolition of their fair rights, without as much as by your leave or any consideration or advantage whatever being given them for the deprivation of their old-time local holiday and charter fair.

One result of the enquiry on the spot was to the effect that the great body of the workers were afraid to openly protest against the high-handed proceedings of a small knot of well-to-do residents who wish to do away with the fair, the dread being that they would suffer loss of employment if they ventured to oppose the will of their employers. This local fear was very widespread and most evident.

Whilst the showmen have the hearty good wishes of the great bulk of the shopkeepers and small traders of Mitcham, who, together with the showmen, stand to lose by the abolition of the fair, yet here again fear of the powerful knot of abolitionists held them tongue-tied.

It will be seen that under these difficult conditions it is next to impossible to organise successfully any demonstration locally against the abolition of the fair, the workers being afraid of losing their employment and the shop-keepers a certain amount of their trade and custom.

There are other elements in the matter which tend to complicate the solution of the difficulty. The fair rights, as exercised for centuries by the Lords of the Manor of Mitcham, passed some years ago by purchase into the hands of a showman named Sweetlove, who, in his turn, sold the fair rights to the late Frank Bailey, so long and honourably known on the London circuit, and now we understand that his widow, Mrs. Bailey, has sold the fair rights to a gentleman of Mitcham. The local opinion concerning this transaction is that the purchase was made in order to facilitate the abolition of the fair.

It is quite certain that if the fair rights had passed either to an individual showman or to a group of showmen, the most powerful argument against the abolition of the fair, as destroying a valuable property, would have been available for its defence, and we regret that this consideration did not have the attention it deserved.

The Showmen's Guild has entered into negotiations with the present owner of the fair rights, who is also chairman of the Board of Conservators of the Mitcham Common lands, with a view to transferring the site of the fair to a more commodious piece of ground on the common, and perpetuating its existence under better conditions.

Nothing definite has been determined, although various suggestions are being considered in a friendly spirit by both sides. The Guild is not without hope that something may be arranged, and the fair continued.

The proposal to abolish one of the oldest charter fairs in the kingdom against the wishes of the vast majority of the inhabitants is another glaring example of the way in which the trade and business of the travelling showman suffers loss and injury at the hands of public bodies, whose powers are used by small knots of puritanical fanatics and faddists, or land speculators and builders, who imagine that the presence of a fair on the village green will depreciate their villa property or the residential exclusiveness of their prospective tenants.

This is notably the case in districts like Mitcham, where the City man resents the proximity of the fair to his country house, and where the land speculator considers not the interests of the great body of the inhabitants of the old town he is opening up as a new suburb of London, but the value of the property he is building, in order to attract tenants from London, to whom, perhaps, the attractions of a popular fair are not the necessity that they are to the poorer inhabitants.

We consider that to deprive the people of Mitcham of their old-time fair is an act of the gravest injustice, and we deeply regret that the fear of loss of employment if they move at all against the ruling factor is so serious that a meeting against the abolition of the fair would be no indication of the real state of the public mind.

Under these circumstances, and with a view of strengthening the business claim of the showmen for the continuance of the fair, the Showmen's Guild has forwarded the following petition to the Home Secretary:—

To the Right Honourable Herbert Gladstone, M.P., Principal Secretary of State for Home Affairs:—

Whereas, the Showmen's Guild is a trade society interested in the business of providing popular amusements at our fairs and national and local holidays, it follows that any proposal to abolish such fairs is a matter of serious concern to its executive officers and members.

The old Charter Fair at Mitcham is, we understand, under your consideration, and we regret that, although its abolition would inflict serious loss upon a large body of our members, the local authorities have not thought it their duty to specifically acquaint us with the fact that they were moving in the matter with a view to the abolition of the fair.

We respectfully submit that to abolish the fair will inflict serious business loss upon us, as traders and amusement caterers, and ask that the fair be retained.

We are willing to admit that the present site on which the fair is held is too small, owing to encroachment upon the ground for widening the public roads, and we submit that the local authorities provide a new and suitable site for the fair, which they are well able to do upon the Common Lands under their control.

Signed, on behalf of the executive,

GEORGE SANGER, President.
THOMAS HORNE, Hon. Chaplain.

The following official reply is to hand from the Home Secretary:—

HOME OFFICE, May 10, 1906.

SIR,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for the Home Department to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and to say that the same shall receive due attention.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, M. D. CHALMERS.

The President, The Showmen's Guild.

FROM Brussels comes news of a tragic scene which occurred in a menagerie at Braine le Comte. A spectator desired to stroke a lion, but the animal seized his arm, and it looked as if the man would lose the limb. Fortunately a hay-fork was near at hand, and a youth in the audience seized it and attacked the lion. The beast was loth to release the arm, but was finally compelled to slink back into his cage. The man's arm is terribly torn.

MUSIC-HALL SICK FUND.

Mr. Frank Weeks presided at the monthly meeting of the Committee of the Music-Hall Sick Fund held at the York Hotel, York-road, Lambeth, on Wednesday afternoon. Other members present were Messrs. Frank Heath, G. Desmonti, W. J. Wainratta, Tom Carney, H. E. High, H. Griff, and W. West.

The income and expenditure account for the year ending Dec. 31, 1905, which has been audited by Messrs. Tilly, Brown, and Peet, chartered accountants, was submitted. It showed that the sick payments for the twelve months amounted to £101 and the death payments to £20. The total expenditure amounted to only £52 5s. 10d., and the balance in the hands of the bankers was £1358 15s. 8d. General satisfaction was expressed at the financial position of the fund, and it was resolved that further steps should be taken to bring the society under the notice of members of the variety profession by having framed printed bills placed in the dressing-rooms of music-halls, &c.

On the motion of Mr. Wainratta, seconded by Mr. High, the secretary (Mr. R. T. Baines) was instructed to write a letter of condolence to the widow of the late Frank Coyne, who was a member of the fund at the time of his death. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman, who expressed his willingness to do all in his power in furtherance of the interests of the society.

FROM the North Round we have news to hand of Stockton Hirings. The shows were—Payne's cinematograph theatre, Chipperfield's wild beast menagerie; Wingate's airship headed the machine list, which included Wm. Murphy's motor-cars, Carr's jumping horses, and Carrise's gallopers. The other entertainers were Robinson, Sheeran, and others, with throwing games, stalls, &c.

WELSHPOOL FAIR this week was well maintained by Baker's circus, Wright's up-to-date peepshow, and Greatorex's novelty booth. The machines were Marshall and Hill's gondolas, steam horses by Farrell Greatorex, swings, &c., by Connell and Greatorex. A capital array of shooters, batteries, &c., by Wright, Turner, Cartwright, Farrell, and Greatorex; photo booth by Turner; and stalls by Kemp, Curry, Hill, Newsome, Greatorex, Douglas, Cartwright, and Connell.

THE May Fair at Leominster attracted a capital crowd of fairground novelties on this round. These included Baker's circus, Wadbrook's cinematograph, Mander's waxworks, Reader's exhibition, Signor Sidonia's performing birds, Prince Samonda's temple of magic, Studt's motor-cars, Strickland's gallopers, and swings and minor varieties by North, Fletcher, and Stevens.

WE draw our readers attention to the important meeting of the Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union advertised this week.

MAUD and Sidney Wood, promising scions of the house that has given the variety stage the Misses Marie, Alice, and Rosie Lloyd, and Miss Daisy Wood, open in London on Monday at a West End hall.

MR. GORDON WILSON, the well-known composer of ballads, who has been ill for three years, and is now lying in the Stockton-on-Tees Hospital, has received several letters of sympathy from friends in the profession, in response to the paragraph we inserted in our Variety Gossip a week or two since.

THE combination of music hall and theatre at Richmond which Mr. George Dance runs so successfully, is unique in that it is the only "hall" in Great Britain that presents successful flying matinées at regular intervals. The following are recent pieces that have appeared: Leah Kleschna, The Walls of Jericho, Lady Madcap, Véronique, and Little Michus. The last three were presented by Mr. Dance's own principal companies. On Tuesday, May 17, Richmond matinée audiences will have an opportunity of witnessing Mr. Frank Curzon's original Criterion Theatre company, including Master Edward Garrett, in The Little Stranger.

MISS NINA GORDON, the clever mimic at the piano, returned to the Palace Theatre this week, after a lengthy provincial tour. Her latest success is an imitation of Miss Connie Ediss in The Spring Chicken. Miss Gordon keeps to the simple frocks and schoolgirl manner on the stage that are so suitable to her youth and vivacity. She made her welcome reappearance in a chiffon dress of the faintest pink, trimmed with narrow ribbon of the same tint, a little wreath of shamrock in her hair, and one pink rose tucked into her folded silk belt.

MR. HARRY CARLO, who was the advertising-manager for the successful pantomime at the Brixton, has been appointed in a like capacity by Mr. Martin Harvey for his forthcoming season at the Imperial Theatre.

SHOWMEN'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

WANTED, Known, that Mr. J. Wentworth, of London, Managing-Director in England for Messrs. Ch. Marenghi et Cie., Organ Builders, of Paris, has just completed the erection of another splendid Ideal Orchestra, specially built for Messrs. Anderton and Rowland, of the West.

The noble Work of Art was opened for the first time at Exeter for the Easter Holidays on a large field belonging to General Buller, and of course the concern was well patronised by the better class of the West of England.
Once again this proved that with a good tool easy and good work can be done.

Mr. Wentworth will also erect another additional carved front to the concern of Messrs. Wm. Haggar and Son, of South Wales. The future lot is to be completed within a few days, and it will certainly bear the inspection and criticism of all the public in general, as this will be the only uniform concern in England at present.

Mr. Wentworth also wishes to inform his customers that on account of rapid success of his firm he has been obliged to secure another building, adjoining the Agricultural Hall. The second place is now undergoing alterations, and will most likely be open in a month, where Messrs. Ch. Marenghi et Cie's. capable men will be able to do anything in the way of organ repairing, &c.

Remember, Mr. J. Wentworth's address is always 29, Gibson-square, Islington, London, N. He has come to stay.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows :—

MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALAN W. YOUNG,
Empire Theatre, Liverpool.

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. W. LEA,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THE DETECTIVE.

A child is stolen from her parents, and taken to the hiding-place of the child-stealers. After taking all her jewellery and little trinkets, and treating her rather roughly, they write to her parents offering to release her on payment of £200. Her father puts the matter into the hands of a detective, who cleverly disguises himself, and meets the robbers. He escapes with the child, and is recaptured, but he again gets away, and after many hairbreadth escapes, he restores the little one to her grateful parents. About 462ft. The Subject, £11 11s. 0d.

ESCAPED FROM THE CAGE.

While a large audience is watching a troup of performing animals, a large monkey escapes from his cage close by, and puts everyone to flight. The performers at once take up the chase, and the monkey leads them a fine dance, climbing into most inaccessible places, and getting into all kinds of mischief on his way. At last he is captured, and can be seen consoling himself in the cage from which he was so glad to be free. About 310ft. The Subject, £7 15s. 0d.

LOVE TRAGEDY.

A gentleman forms an attachment for a girl, and winning her favour, they live happily together for a time. The man tires of his companion, and arranges to make a wealthy marriage. The girl entreats him to return to her, but he refuses, and in the church, while the marriage ceremony is taking place, she first exposes his true character, and then shoots him. About 410ft The Subject, £10 5s. 0d.

THE LAW OF PARDON.

A husband discovers that his wife is receiving letters from a lover, and seeks a separation. In the Law Courts the wife beseeches his forgiveness, but he will not listen, and they part. Their child is taken ill, and her father does all in his power to cheer her. The wife hears of her daughter's illness, and, after a lot of persuasion, succeeds in getting the nurse to change places with her. The husband returns, and is still unforgiving, but the little girl pleads with him, and the husband and wife are reconciled. About 475ft. The Subject, £11 17s. 6d.

MADAME WEARS THE BREECHES. Code Word "BRASERO"

While hubby performs the household duties his "better half" takes herself off for a day's outing. The film shows the husband cleaning the boots, washing the dishes, knitting the socks, and cleaning up generally, and the wife elsewhere drinking, smoking, and card-playing. One day is quite enough for the poor man, and on the arrival home of his wife, he forcibly asserts his proper position, and, later, they can be seen walking out together, and while the wife is looking after the numerous children, hubby is enjoying a quiet smoke. Very amusing. About 372ft. The Subject, £9 6s. 0d.

EPHEMERAL WEALTH. Code Word "BRASSAGE."

An American's visit to Paris. He changes his money. Loss of the banknotes. A tramp's lucky find. Transformation of the tramp into an open-handed man about town. Motoring to the races. The race. (The horses can be seen galloping down the course.) Card-playing. Caught cheating. The gay ladies. Loss of his wealth. Drunk and incapable. He is brought into the police-court just as the owner of the notes is reporting his loss. A hasty exit. About 480ft. The Subject, £12 0s. 0d.

UNFORTUNATE HUSBAND. Code Word "BRANDON."

The lady and her lover. Arrival of the husband. A taking disguise. Discovery. Chase by the husband, his friends, and servants. At bay. The husband wounded. Further flight. Help for the lover. Another fight. The poor husband again suffers, falling into a stream, from which he is dragged by his servants. About 215ft. The Subject, £5 7s. 6d.

DICK TURPIN'S RIDE TO YORK.

No. 1026.

This film closely follows the historical tale, and has been carried out with a reckless daring almost equal to that dare-devil ride. The photographic quality is of the very best, and we can with pleasure present to all our patrons once again a phenomenal success.

The scene opens with Dick and Tom King taking a glass outside the "Jack Falstaff" Inn, and as soon as they disappear inside to settle the account, the landlord is seen to betray them, anxious to share the reward of £300 offered. Dick, with the assistance of his confederate and a pretty barmaid, however, after a desperate struggle, manages to escape on his favourite horse, Black Bess. He is followed by the attorney, chief constable, and doctor on horseback, and a hot chase commences, numbers of people joining in the running; one rather eager man who endeavours to bar the way of the outlaw meets his death from Dick's pistol. The chase proceeds at high speed through country and village, the highwayman exacting whenever he can tribute from the lips of the fair sex. In one village he unfastens the latticed window of a house by standing on his horse, enters a bedroom, and demands toll from the lips of a young lady; while, with his pistol, he subdues the irate mother, who gladly seeks protection beneath the bed-clothes. Dick is able at one inn, by the aid of a friendly ostler, to obtain refreshment for himself and his horse, whom he rubs down in great haste. The chase gets hotter and hotter, as his pursuers ride up to change horses, and Dick escapes from the back while the man is parleying with his enemies.

Dick, meeting an old woman, just past the gallows, where her son hangs (and which he has saluted), is requested by her to bear a package to Sir Luke, to which he consents. Turpin proceeds on his way as fast as his steed can take him. He rides out and stops the York Coach, which is passing along the road, and demands to know where he can find Sir Luke. After obtaining the desired information, he rides on. The coach is again stopped, this time by the pursuers, and they add another to their number. They press on with the chase. Dick's way is seen to be apparently stopped by a five-barred gate, but master and horse treat the matter lightly, and clear the gate in fine manner, riding on for dear life. The "hounds" not being quite up to the "fox" in skill, have to dismount, and, after some delay, follow on. Dick Turpin and horse are seen at the end of their journey to struggle on, both hard spent, the poor animal almost dropping as Dick delivers his precious packet to Sir Luke.

Length, 1,000 ft. Price, £25.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual again makes its welcome appearance. I say welcome because, as a work of theatrical reference, it is always handy to have in the house—or office. In this connection I am glad to note that the lists of play-productions for the past year are given in better type and altogether in a much clearer manner. As of yore, there are sundry stories in prose and verse. The best of these include "Stage Superstitions," by Charles Warner; "Boy Bob at Sea," a poem by Louie Freear; "The Last Muster," a weird tragic military story, by Mr. Joseph Wilson, who has been a soldier himself; and "Nellie Bligh's Notices," a capital theatrical story, by Mr. Frank Desprez.—Referee, Jan. 28, 1906.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual, 1906, is welcome as containing carefully compiled lists of the pieces produced during the past year in London, the suburbs, and the provinces, in Paris, and in Berlin. The rest of it is curious and entertaining reading. There is the almanack with its "memorabilia of theatrical events occurrences, &c." There are besides a score of stories and other articles contributed by theatricals, a very good one being Miss Louie Freear's set of verses, "'Boy Bob' at Sea," which has humour, feeling, and swing. The book contains many theatrical portraits. As a book of reference the Annual is of great use and value, and while some of its contents doubtless appeal more keenly to the professional than to the outsider, any thoughtful person may derive from its study much amusement and no little insight into the conditions, the magnitude, and the complexity of the English theatre of to-day.—Morning Post, Jan. 22.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual appears once more in its familiar binding, a compendium of information and amusement for all who are interested in theatrical affairs. In the calendar will be found an array of anniversary dates, some recent, some recalling memories of old times and actors and actresses long passed away. The summary of new plays produced during the past year is admirably done, its value being increased by the alphabetical list which is appended. Well-known actors and actresses contribute stories in accordance with a custom justified by its success.—Daily Telegraph, Jan. 18, 1906.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
The thirty-ninth issue of "The Era" Annual has just appeared, and once more it supplies a useful record of the theatrical year. An editorial note reminds us that among the contributors to the first number, that of 1868, were E. L. Blanchard (its editor), Charles Mathews, T. W. Robertson, Andrew Halliday, H. J. Byron, Watts Phillips, and Dion Boucicault—a brilliant band indeed. The contributors to the present isue are almost exclusively actors rather than literary men, but upon the whole they make a very fair show; while the lists of plays produced in London and the provinces, and in Paris and Berlin during the twelve months under review are distinctly useful. There are a number of photographs including an exceedingly fine one of the late Sir Henry Irving.—Pall Mall Gazette, Jan. 22.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual for 1906, 1s. 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. This useful little work, which brings nearly up to date the calendar of dramatic events which is so excellent a feature, is, as usual, full of stories over the signature of prominent stage lights. To those interested in the business of the theatre the work has become a necessity by reason of its valuable record of the progress of the drama.—Financial Times, Jan. 22, '06.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, APRIL 25.—Miss Florence Roberts, an actress new to this city, has made a decidedly favourable impression at the Liberty Theatre, in a play called The Strength of the Weak, the authors of which are Misses Alice M. Smith and Charlotte Thompson. The play tells the story of a young woman who, at a tender age, has been ruined by a middle-aged man who subsequently poses as her guardian. Having a gift for literature, she writes a book into which she puts her own experiences, and eventually falls in love with and is loved by the son of the man who has wronged her. The woman does not know of this relationship, of course, and when the disclosure comes in the moment of what promises to be her greatest happiness, nothing remains for her but to end her sorry existence. And this she does by shooting herself off the stage in Hedda Gabler fashion.

MISS MARGARET ANGLIN appeared recently in a new play entitled The Sabine Woman, by William Vaughan Moody. Excepting the last act, the scenes are laid in the West, and the principal characters are a sensitive, high-bred young woman from the East, and a big, manly Westerner. One night, whilst the young woman is alone in her cabin, three men invade her home and shake dice for possession of her. She takes the most manly of the three aside and promises to marry him if he will save her from the others. The man is under the influence of liquor, and, like his companions, has come to the place with brutal intent. But the woman is saved, and the marriage takes place Her abhorrence and the awakening of his manhood are depicted, her Eastern prejudices conflicting with his Western ideas at every turn. But the man proves worthy of her, and conquers these prejudices in the end, and the couple become man and wife in heart as well as law. Mr. Charles Dalton as the husband shared the chief honours with Miss Anglin; and Mr. J. R. Cranford distinguished himself in a prominent rôle. The play was received with marked approval.

MISS ANNIE RUSSELL has scored a success in Boston in a new play by Paul Kester, entitled Friend Hannah. In the earlier scenes Miss Russell impersonates a charming young Quakeress, and in the last act she is seen as an aged woman. According to the local papers Miss Russell sinks her identity in a remarkably clever manner.

MR. FRANCIS WILSON, the favourite comedian, whose name was inseparably associated with Erminie and other comic operas for so many years, is appearing for the first time in a serious rôle—that of Père Marlotte in The Little Father of the Wilderness, this one-act comedy having been introduced as a curtain-raiser to The Mountain Climber at the Criterion Theatre. For Mr. Wilson to completely obliterate all of his droll mannerisms would be a superhuman achievement, but the critics have awarded him no little praise for his portrayal of the Jesuit priest, and it is not at all unlikely that Mr. Wilson will some day decide to play Hamlet.

"THE FREE LANCE," a comic opera in two acts by John Philip Sousa and Harry B. Smith, has made a big hit at the New Amsterdam Theatre. Mr. Sousa's latest march "On to Victory" is introduced at the close of the first act. It is a stirring composition, and is bound to become widely popular.

IN memory of the late Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, a stained-glass window is to be placed in the New York church which she regularly attended, and in order to increase the fund now being raised for that purpose a matinée performance was given at the Knickerbocker Theatre last week under the direction of Mr. Daniel Frohman, at which the sum of 3,500 dols. was realised.

MISS JOHNSTONE BENNETT, who appeared with great success for a long period in the title-rôle of the farce comedy Jane, and was afterwards seen at the London music halls in a protean sketch called A Quiet Evening at Home, died on the 15th inst. of tuberculosis after an illness of more than two years.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The Optimist, a comedy in four acts, by Sydney Rosenfeld, has just had a brief run at Daly's Theatre. Miss Charlotte Walker and Mr. Thomas A. Wise distinguished themselves in some capital comedy scenes, and the play was sufficiently entertaining to move an audience to frequent laughter and applause, but it failed to win critical approval. The author consoled himself, however, according to the custom of the hour, by addressing the audience more than once during the week, his remarks being received in such a manner as to convince him, he said, that his play was a success in spite of the newspapers. The story runs as follows:—Alice Wendell discovers in her brother's best friend and adviser, Norman Grey, a sweetheart of former days, whom she had dismissed because she believed him to be responsible for the downfall of another woman, whose baby daughter he had adopted at the mother's death. Alice had asked for an explanation, which he declined to give unless she would first consent to be his wife. This she refused to do, and they parted. Grey had taken the matter philosophically, and adopted as his motto "It's all for the best," becoming known among his associates as "the Optimist." Jack Wendell is jilted by his betrothed, who stuns him with the announcement of her marriage to another. The young fellow is heart-broken at this outcome of his first love affair, and Grey, in endeavouring to teach him the philosophy of life and forgetfulness in the harmless joys of existence, has to contend with the bitterness and suspicion of Jack's sister. Grey introduces the youth into a Bohemian set, and a young actress of much vivacity and charm, who has had several love affairs of her own, effects the cure which Grey has set about to accomplish. Alice surprises her brother at a moment when he is enjoying himself as much as the rest of the party, and insists on his returning home at once, but he refuses, and the optimist's good intentions are entirely misunderstood. Alice accuses Norman Grey of exerting an evil influence over her brother, and although her old sweetheart protests that he still loves her, they appear to have drifted apart for ever, when a mutual friend relates the true story of Grey's devotion to the child of his dissolute brother, and brings him and Alice together before the curtain falls.

"JEANNE D'ARC," a drama in four acts and nine scenes, by Lawrence Marston and R. E. H. Greene, was produced in a sumptuous manner by Mr. F. F. Proctor, at his Fifth-avenue Theatre, last week. The first act shows the exterior of the home of Joan of Arc. She has visions, which appear to her in the trunk of a tree, and her mission is revealed to her. In the second act she has an interview with King Charles, and is given permission to proceed with the work which she has begun. The progress of the war is shown, and there is a battle scene as a climax. The coronation of King Charles in the cathedral of Rheims, with Joan receiving splendid honours, forms the final tableau of the third act. Then the trial and condemnation of Joan are depicted, the final picture showing her execution at the stake. The love interest is created by the attachment of Thibaut, a young farmer, whose offer of marriage is tearfully rejected, but who follows the heroine through all her campaigns. The title part was played alternately by Miss Amelia Bingham and Miss Isabelle Evesson, and Mr. James Young appeared as Thibaut.

BERNARD SHAW'S comedy, Arms and the Man, has been revived with considerable success at the Lyric Theatre by Mr. Arnold Daly, who is appearing for the first time as Captain Bluntschli. Miss Crystal Herne enacts the rôle of Raina Petkoff, and the other parts are distributed as follow:—Major Petkoff, Mr. Dodson Mitchell; Major Sergius Saranoff, Mr. Aubrey Boucicault; Nicola, Mr. John Findlay; Catherine Petkoff, Miss Isabelle Urquhart; Louka, Miss Bijou Fernandez. The comedy is admirably acted, and has been received with emphatic approval.

MRS. FISKE gave a series of matinée performances last week at the Manhattan Theatre, and produced for the first time a comedy in one act, called Dolce, by John Luther Long. The little play is a love story that begins amid the poverty of the Italian quarter of a big city and ends in a sunlit studio in Florence. A young American artist befriends a little Italian singing girl, and paints her portrait. He has grown to love her when she is taken away from him, and for fifteen years he only hears of her occasionally, the letters he receives telling him that she is living in Florence. He seeks her there, and the Contessa di Cassal comes to his studio and tries to buy the picture of the singing girl. But the artist refuses to sell it, and tells her the story of Dolce. And by and by he learns that she (the Contessa) is Dolce. He has saved all her childish belongings, and at her request he gives them up to her. But she wants something more, and when she kneels down and puts her arms around him he understands. Mrs. Fiske's Dolce was an exquisite bit of acting, and Mr. John Mason gave an excellent impersonation of the artist. Dolce was preceded by Mrs. Fiske's comedy The Eyes of the Heart, the title and principal incident of which were suggested by an Italian comedy, in two acts, by Gallina. The central figure is Monsieur d'Ancelot, an old blind man, whose shrewdness is more than a match for the eyes of all his friends. Mr. George Arliss assumed this character, and gave a vivid and moving portrayal. The third offering in the programme was Mrs. Fiske's serious little play, A Light from St. Agnes, in which Mr. John Mason gave a remarkable display of versatility, appearing as Michael Kerouac, a character as far removed from the one which he assumed in Dolce as could well be imagined.

MISS LILLIAN RUSSELL intends to renounce comic opera in favour of legitimate comedy. She will appear next season in an English adaptation of Le Bonheur des Dames, entitled The Happiness of Women.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MR. HAL COLLIER.

In reply to a question as to his career, Mr. Hal Collier replied cheerily: "Oh, yes; I've clowned in a circus, produced sketches in the ring, led the circus procession in each town we visited garbed in the costume of a State trumpeter, and trumpeted right merrily when the circus band was not playing. I was not the only trumpeter though, for every now and then the elephant would chime in and drown all other sounds. Tenting with a circus is quite a novel experience, and a pleasant one, too, if you happen to have a living carriage; if not you must be up at three or four each morning and take your seat in one of the carriages, or pay your own fare to the next town. Some time ago I had a very funny experience. You must know I write dramatic and comedy plots and sketches for several cinématograph firms, and produce and play in them. I was impersonating a policeman in one of these sketches, and was nearly run in by a real "Robert" for appearing in the streets in police uniform and attempting to arrest a burglar who is escaping from the first floor window of a suburban villa. In the struggle with the 'cod' burglar I was ducked in a horse trough while the burglar escaped in a purloined horse and trap followed by yours truly on a bike which I could not ride. The real Simon Pure came up at the time, and seeing a rival on his beat he immediately seized me, and would have run me in had not the cinématograph manager explained matters by a generous donation which made Robert beam with delight.

and fifer in the Queen's Westminster Volunteers. An engagement at Sanger's Amphitheatre, Westminster, followed, then a tour with the late Henry Loraine in the legitimate, Mr. Collier playing Polonius, the Gravedigger, and other comedy parts in the répertoire. Next, a tour of Devonshire and Cornwall with Sidney Herbert Basing's pantomime of Humpty Dumpty as stage-manager, Dame, and Clown; a long tour with Forbidden Fruit, under the management of Capt. John Gordon and Henry Franck; and a tour with Michael Strogoff, Mr. Collier playing the part of the French Correspondent. Three stock seasons of eight months each as stage-manager and principal comedian at the Aquarium, Scarborough, with Mr. W. Morgan, the present Mayor of Scarborough, followed. At Scarborough they played three dramas and two farces weekly, and had in the company such well-known artists as Fred B. Marshall, George Edwards, Frank Abel, E. D. Allen, Miss Adele Liddon &c.

Mr. Collier then ran his own sketches in the music halls for a period of twelve years, playing the following répertoire: The Rajah, The Lunatics (both these titles have since been used by others), Uncle's Legacy, The Wrong Man, The Queen of Sunny Creek, Borrowing a Husband, The Crimes of London, In Deadly Peril, Taken by Storm, &c. Then, going back to the theatres, he was engaged by Mr. Oswald Brand for a stock season at the Grand Theatre, Islington. This engagement extended over two years, during which Mr. Collier played, among many other comedy parts, the following: Shaun-the-Post, Arrah-na-Pogue; Conn, The Shaughraun; Myles-na-Coppaleen, The Colleen Bawn; Barney O'Toole, Peep o' Day; Tom Dossiter, The Harbour Lights; Reuben Armstrong, The Bells of Haslemere; Tom Bassett, Hands Across the Sea; Peter Fly, The Union Jack; Dicey Morris, After Dark; Peter Crawley, Never Too Late to Mend; Bullock, East Lynne; Chamboran, Proof; Chadband, Bleak House; Joe Grimper, The Woman From Gaol; Patsy Brannigan, The Bushrangers; Barnaby Bright, Mankind; Perkins, The Woman From Nowhere; Josh Martin, Bridge of Sighs, and many others. A nine weeks' pantomime at the Grand followed; then he went back to the music halls with his own sketches for a few weeks, followed by a twelve weeks' tour as Reuben Armstrong in The Bells of Haslemere. Mr. Collier has also played special engagements at most of the London theatres and at nearly every metropolitan and provincial music hall in his own sketches.

THE LATE MADAME SHERRINGTON.

Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, the eminent operatic artist, whose death took place last week at Brussels, in her seventy-second year, was born of English parents at Preston in 1834, and came of a musical family. While still a child she went to Rotterdam accompanied by her mother. There Miss Sherrington had a course of study before going to the Brussels Conservatoire in 1852. In the April of 1856 she made her first appearance in London, and a year later married Chevalier Nicholas Lemmens, who died in 1881. Madame Lemmens-Sherrington appeared in English opera in 1860. Later she was associated with the Italian stage, her répertoire including Macfarren's Robin Hood, The Amber Witch, Helvellyn, L'Africaine, Norma, Le Domino Noir, Martha, and Fra Diavolo, as well as The Huguenots, Robert the Devil, and Don Giovanni. A notable event in the career of the deceased vocalist occurred in 1864. In January of that year Faust was presented in English at Her Majesty's by Mr. Mapleson. Madame Florence Lancia was the Siebel; and Marguerite was allotted to Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, who was warmly praised for her admirable impersonation. Subsequently she did a great deal of operatic, oratorio, and concert work, both in London and the provinces, during her later years in this country, and was a favourite figure in a combination which included Mr. Nelson Varley as the tenor.

Dynamite and the drama are effectively associated this week at Hammersmith, where the latest piece by Mr. Fredk. S. Jennings, the new manager of the Lyric Theatre, revealed itself to admiring eyes on Monday. The author has not attempted the impossible by essaying to present an entirely new set of melodramatic characters, but a familiar theme has been freshly treated, and situations of striking sensation provided. Puns of the most primitive character are perpetrated, but there is a plentiful supply of wholesome humour, which delighted the large audience, who gained equal pleasure out of the strong sentiment contained in the piece. The forces of villainy have only one representative; but he is a sturdy champion of vice, and the havoc created by Sir Richard Wharncliffe, Bart., is amply sufficient for the purposes of four long acts. The unscrupulous baronet has cast his net so tightly round a country gentleman, named Mark Williams, that the latter has been prevailed upon to mortgage his estate to a moneylender, who puts a man in possession until the interest overdue on the loan is paid. Wharncliffe offers to avert the threatened calamity if Williams will give him the hand of his daughter Norah. That young lady, however, has already promised to become the bride of Lieut. Jack Stanton, an officer in the Scots Guards, who has just been ordered abroad on active service. Wharncliffe determines to remove so dangerous a rival from his path, and induces a woman named Kate D'Arville, with whom he has gone through what he believes to be a mock marriage, to declare that Jack Stanton has betrayed her. Moved by a certain occult influence which Wharncliffe exercises over her, Kate supports the acusation against Jack, who goes off to the war without having time to prove his innocence.

The villain's purpose is not, however, achieved, for Norah remains faithful to her lover, and Mark and his daughter are duly turned out of their home. They obtain lodgings with a besotted individual, who had officiated in the capacity of broker's man, and Norah endeavours to get a living for her father and herself by typewriting at home. She has obtained work from an elderly foreign gentleman, who has begun to pay her marked attentions, and finally invites her to his house to get particulars for more work. The foreign gentleman proves to be Sir Richard Wharncliffe, who, on the arrival of Norah, locks the door of his dining-room, and endeavours to prevail upon her to stay to supper. The girl indignantly declines, and Wharncliffe is becoming aggressive, when Jack Stanton, who has returned from abroad, and is guided to the house by an ex-clergyman named Horatio Spanker, appears on the scene, and saves the situation.

An elaborate scheme of revenge is then arranged by Wharncliffe, who has reinstated Williams in his old home, and pretends to be penitent. By means of a fictitious letter, he gets Stanton to visit the rooms of Kate D'Arville, who, still acting under Wharncliffe's influence, makes passionate love to the young soldier. The villain's purpose is to estrange Jack and his betrothed, and he accordingly fetches Norah to witness the interview, but by a violent effort Kate casts off the malign influence, and declares that Jack's honour is unblemished. As a last resort, Wharncliffe determines to blow up the house, and, after drugging Jack and despatching him in a box to the West Indies, he lays a train connected with dynamite from the cellar to the room above. Both Kate and her son, a boy who had been cast off by Wharncliffe, his father, effect their escape, locking the door after them, and when the villain lights the fuse, he finds his way barred. Ere he can force open the door, the explosion occurs, walls collapse on every side, and he is buried in the débris.

The last act takes place during a carnival at Monte Carlo, the merry-making of which is effectively represented. Wharncliffe persuades Norah that her husband is dead, and gets her to marry him; but it is proved that his wedding with Kate D'Arville was a genuine one, and in an attempt to shoot his wife the villain kills himself. Jack, having escaped from his box, reappears, the lovers are united, and virtue is finally triumphant.

All the members of Mr. Samuel James's company had a hearty reception in their several appearances, and by their subsequent efforts fully merited their welcome. Mr. H. H. Barrington who played the ill-advised Mark Williams, gave a striking impersonation of the brandy-drinking old man, his haggard face and debilitated appearance after a long course of dissipation being artistically simulated. Mr. C. F. Collings was an earnest and painstaking hero. He delivered his lines with fire and energy, and reached a high position in the favour of the audience. Norah Williams, his betrothed, was gracefully played by Miss Minnie Grey, whose gentleness and dramatic fervour were marked attributes of a performance of great merit. Miss Florence Dalton was a passionate and impulsive Kate D'Arville, and created a great impression by her acting in the scene where the scoundrelly baronet exercises his malign influence over her. Sir Richard was played with deep intensity by Mr. Lewis Gilbert, an actor of wide experience, who made a striking change of appearance as the elderly foreigner, both accent and gesture being in accord with the character. At least half-a-dozen of the cast were employed in the interests of fun, one of the prime movers being Mr. E. Harvey White, who had to present an ex-clergyman travelling in the interests of an encyclopædia. Mr. White, though not altogether happy in his snatches of song, acted in buoyant and merry fashion, and kept the audience in the highest spirits throughout. A large share of the laughter fell to Mr. F. Thorpe Tracey, an admirable comedian, who managed to conjure up a most original expression as Timothy Nias. This personage is a broker's man, who is at the mercy of his termagant wife, and his scenes with that lady, cleverly played by Miss Nell Gillmore, caused endless mirth. Further food for merriment was supplied by Mr. A. P. Kaye, who played in rollicking style as a gardener; and the low-comedy acting of Miss May Seaton as Madge Merry, his sweetheart, resulted in loud laughter. Mr. Ernest Tresner was a comic butler, and a good word should be given to Mr. Bert Morley for his rendering of an army captain. Miss Irene Ross excited genuine sympathy by her pathetic acting as the Kipper, Wharncliffe's discarded son; and the other parts were ably filled. Repeated applause throughout the evening confirmed the success of the piece, the author of which was loudly cheered at the close.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Thunderbolt, produced for the first time on Thursday, the 10th inst., is from the pen of Mr. Richard Ganthony, and is a sequel to the same gentleman's well-known play, A Message from Mars. The author is to be congratulated on his successful and brilliant work, which was excellently played by Mr. Mouillot's company. There was a large and fashionable audience present, and the first night's performance went off without a single hitch.

In brief, the story is this—Horace Parker, having been in the first play effectually weaned from selfishness by the ghostly Martian, has now developed a prospensity for a cynical, disconcerting smartness. He flings callous epigrams about, and has a disheartening thing to say for almost every phase of human optimism—in friendship, in love, in honourable ambition—so the vigilant man from Mars determines that Horace is a fit subject for taking in hand again. He comes to earth once more, equipped with all the weird Martian forces which he employed to such purpose in the first play. Parker—who has obviously dined on lobster salad, is confronted—in his dream, of course—by the spectral giant, as before. In his dream humour Parker is not dismayed at this; he is, indeed, rather amused, and remarks glibly to his visitor that "the universe seems a small place after all." He also does not forget his former coinage "Marsey," as an easy pet name for the Mars man. But "Marsey" is in no humour for trifling. He makes the misguided earthman squirm by his stores of electric energy. He also, in sepulchral periods, acquaints him of the purpose of this second mission, and dilates on Parker's fresh besetting fault. Parker, in his bantering mood, rather discounts this, but he is soon given lurid proof of the point of the Martian's philosophy. The consequences of a whole series of callous, unconsidered trifles, which have escaped his lips in the first act, are depicted by the same ingenious means as that adopted in The Message from Mars. For this a succession of dream episodes is enacted at the back of the stage.

As in the first play, so in this, Parker hears some pointed home truths talked about himself. But most interesting and amusing of all is where the "Messenger" strikes palsy into Parker's tongue, and he is made to feel—among his own gay clubland coterie—the horrors of inability to speak. Scandal is talked, and—horrible fate—he cannot take part in it. After three successive doses of this powerful medicine "Marsey" deems his mission fulfilled, and soars away back to the purer meads of the ruddy planet.

Then Parker awakes from his bad dream. He is found clutching his throat in vivid memory of his palsied tongue. But amazing again is the efficacy of the lesson from Mars. Parker is now a sweet-spoken gentleman who has kindly words of encouragement for all human enterprises and hopes. Before his dream he had by his idle words chequered the course of true love between his exemplary but rather elderly aunt and an eligible oleaginous curate. But now he adroitly retrieves the situation. He lures the love-birds into a conservatory, and there the broken melody is patched and an engagement clinched once and for all And similarly with other deplorable consequences of his unregenerate past. He is now, in short, a paragon of unselfishness and charity in speech, and the accession of virtues makes him a dispenser of sweetness for all.

In this merry, trifling way the play works to its close. It bears all through unquestionable evidence of a gifted literary pen, an accurate dramatic perception, and, above all, a keen sense of humour and of where to use it. In the first act the audience is too long getting into touch with a distinct current of action. The episode of Parker's search for the shuttle is unduly spun out, other episodes do not move argumentatively, and the ultimate goal held in view is too long obscured. However, the second act, with its odd dream tableaux, lifts the interest immensely, and this one act is well worth going to the theatre to see. The club tableau is particularly well displayed.

Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee is an actor of excellent abilities, and his reading of Horace Parker was particularly fine, winning hearty applause; Mr. William H. Brougham appeared as the Messenger with his accustomed success; and Miss Lily Lorrell, who has a most pleasing presence, gave a charming impersonation of Minnie Templar, acting the part in a most effective manner. Miss Flora Hastings as Miss Parker acquitted herself with merit; and Mrs. Clarence was cleverly enacted by Miss Constance Groves. Mr. Percy Tyler displayed considerable ability in his impersonation of the Rev. Mr. Timmons. As the poor inventor Dobbs Mr. Bruce Lindley acted with feeling, making the most of his part; Mr. Buchanan was ably played by Mr. Leslie Tyler; Miss Peggy Yeoman gave satisfaction as Bella; and the remaining parts were all creditably sustained.

At the conclusion of the performance loud cries of "Author! Author!" were continued for several moments. At last Mr. Mouillot came before the curtain amidst great applause. He said he was very sorry to state that he could not find Mr. Ganthony. He had looked for him all over the theatre without avail. His modesty he (Mr. Mouillot) was sure had made him leave the house. From the appreciation which the audience had manifested of the piece, he was confident they would wish the author a success equal to that which he had scored in A Message from Mars.

A COINCIDENCE IN CATS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Recent announcements in the Press make it clear that one more must be added to the already long list of dramatic coincidences. Some years ago I finished the libretto of a comic opera in two acts, dealing with the early Egyptians. In the development of my plot an important part is played by a sacred cat, and I also make considerable use of mummies. It is now stated that Mr. Louis Calvert will produce in August a two-act light opera in which all these three factors occur: the period is the early Egyptian, a sacred cat figures prominently in the story, and the piece will probably be called The Egyptian Mummy.

It will be admitted that this is a remarkable and interesting coincidence; but, apart from this, I trust you will be able to afford space for my letter in order that when my own piece is produced I may not fall a victim to the charge of plagiarism.

—Yours faithfully, W. GUNN GWENNET.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, May 14, the Comedy, by Alfred Sutro, entitled
"THE WALLS OF JERICHO."

A pleasant feature about Mr. Sutro's play is that it well repays a second visit, and one can honestly say that there is as much pleasure to be derived thereby as on its original appearance. On Monday evening at the King's the audience was entirely of the one mind, namely, that in the comedy's satire on the modern manners of the "smart set" it was eminently enjoyable, and after each act the curtain had to be raised again and again. The frequent denunciations of the sins of the fashionable ones by Jack Frobisher in strong outspoken language were provocative of loud applause, and many smiles were evoked by the bridge matinée in Lady Alethea's boudoir. As Jack Frobisher Mr. Ernest A. Warburton scores with an exceedingly able presentation. His rugged style is eminently fitted for the portrait of a man who has had to "rough it." Mr. Alfred S. Barber is likewise capital as Hankey Bannister. An enjoyable rendering of the effete aristocrat, the Marquis of Steventon, is given by Mr. Cecil Brooking, and Mr. W. L. Brisco Owen as Lord Drayton is good. The dilettante Harry Dallas is satisfactorily played by Mr. A. W. Tyrer; and Mr. V. Willox Cadogan well illustrates the "small-talker" Bertram Hannaford. The Hon. Wilfred Renton and Lord Marchmont are capably represented by Mr. Joseph Herbert and Mr. Wilfred S. Lane. Miss Amy Ravenscroft makes a brilliant success as Lady Alethea Frobisher, and in the few sympathetic moments of the play scores highly. The Lady Lucy Derenham introduces a charming ingénue in the person of Miss Nona Wynne. Miss Helen Haye is a delightful Lady Westerby; and Miss Jean Harkness is a typical smart-set girl. The Duchess of Skye is vividly realised by Miss Mary Weigall. Miss May Brooke displays tact as Lady Parchester; and Miss Florence Harcourt dances well in the small part of Miss Wyatt. The scenery, dresses, and appointments are most elaborate, and quite in accordance with the fitness of things associated with the energetic management of Messrs. Silvanus Dauncey and M. V. Leveaux.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, May 14, the Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled
"WHAT THE BUTLER SAW."

What the Butler Saw made its first appearance here on Monday, and considering its glowing reputation, it was not at all surprising to find a capital house on the opening night. The play is presented by Miss Ada Blanche and Mr. Lionel Rignold, who also undertake the two most important rôles. They are assisted by an admirable cast. Mr. Lionel Rignold infuses considerable humour into his excellent portrayal of the butler, Pink. Mr. Rignold knows the value of each minutest piece of by-play, of which he is a past master, and his highly-humorous efforts are quickly recognised. Miss Ada Blanche acts throughout delightfully, and is responsible for a good deal of amusement as the masquerading widow. Miss Blanche gives an excellent performance, marked by easy grace and finish. Great praise is due also to Mr. Chas. Fawcett for his natural performance of the happy-go-lucky Jack Barrington. Mr. H. H. Rignold, besides the arduous duties of stage-management, gives a good character-sketch of Abraham Weinstein; and Mr. George Ascott is excellently cast as the peppery General Dunlop. Mr. George Beale (Sydney Clifford), Mr. Roy Byford (Professor Shale), and Mr. Henry James (Dr. Clayton) are equally good in minor parts. Mr. Reddick Anderson's performance of Sir Charles Foden is full of clever detail—a very praiseworthy portrayal indeed. Miss Marie Daltra has a share in the general success as Miss Foden; and Miss Grace Richardson undertakes Nora, the part suiting her admirably. Miss May Hart as the "forward" child, Sophonisba Hake, plays the part to the life; and Miss Phyllis Gibson (Miss Clarissa Dunlop), Miss Minnie Willett (Miss Selina Dunlop), Miss Edith Blanche (Mrs. Fleming Smythe), and Miss Annie Goward (Mrs. Hake), visitors at the Hydro, likewise contribute excellent work. As the two maids, Maria and Emily, the Misses Dorothy Garth and Violet Gould are perfect. The effective scenery and accessories are among other strong points of an excellent performance.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, May 14, the Drama, in Five Acts, by G. R. Sims and Wilson Barrett, entitled
"THE GOLDEN LADDER."

It is evident that genuine melodrama, which for some time has been rather neglected, is coming back strongly into public favour again, and Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett is to be congratulated on his enterprise in arranging for a return visit this week of G. R. Sims's and Wilson Barrett's play The Golden Ladder. Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds have got together an excellent company, and their interpretation has been followed at each performance with keen interest by large crowds. The piece is admirably staged. Miss Eva Moss as Lilian Grant has a thorough grasp of the character, and quickly wins favour by the sincerity of her acting; Mr. Beresford Whitcomb is to be congratulated on a manly and convincing impersonation of the Rev. Frank Thornhill. Another good performance is that of Mr. J. Milne Taylor as the villain, Michael Severn. He is well supported by Mr. Graham Winsford, who creditably sustains the part of the Greek adventurer, M. Peranza. Some welcome touches of humour are contributed by Mr. Joseph Rowlands as Samuel Peckaby and Miss Nellie Graham as Mrs. Peckaby, and their clever acting provokes roars of laughter. Mr. T. Lionel Ellis is thoroughly efficient as Mr. John Grant, a banker; and Mr. Edward McLean gives a meritorious representation of Noah Learoyd, a Yorkshire manufacturer. Some excellent work is put in by Mr. Harry Belford as Jim Dixon, and Mr. William Clarke is thoroughly satisfactory as Brunning; Mr. Eric Thompson is responsible for a clever character study of the Malagasy servant Rao; and Mr. Hartland Rowe as Lieut. Valnois, and Mr. W. Chambers as Dr. Lemair, of the French Navy, prove highly capable exponents of their respective parts. The kind-hearted prison wardress, Mrs. Dixon is played by Miss Teresa Haynes with pronounced success; and commendation is due to Miss Violet Houghton as the Matron of the Prison. Miss Kate Haslewood as Prisoner No. 2 causes much amusement by her clever acting in the prison scene; and Miss Janet Wakeling is all that can be desired as Rosemary. Miss Jessie Gillette as Victoria Alexandra Peckaby and Miss Holly Haslewood as Lily act their parts with a naturalness that is very praiseworthy. Mr. J. Milne Taylor is manager and Mr. Edward McLean acting-manager for the company.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, May 14, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled
"HER WEDDING DAY."

An excellent reception was accorded to the performance by Mr. T. Edward Ward's company of Her Wedding Day here on Monday. The piece was mounted and staged in a manner worthy of warm praise. Mr. S. Herbert Humber portrays Harold Saxby with manliness and vigour; as Weedon Kenyon Mr. Augustine Knight carefully depicts the callous nature of that villain, playing with ease and skill, and supplies a delineation of unquestionable ability. As Seth Mayson Mr. J. Edward Ward plays with power and skill; Mr. Fred Yarnold portrays with considerable humour the part of Caccles, the sexton; and is capably assisted by Miss Ettie Spalding as Mrs. Caccles. Jordan P. Jessop is suitably portrayed by Mr Morris Maud; Miss Beatrice Sinclair does all that is possible with the part of Dolly Klink; Miss Eva Bertram performs all that is required of her as Dora; and Miss Ward enacts with pathos the part of Madge Conway.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

An agreeable change from the ordinary dramatic fare was made at the Crystal Palace Theatre this week, when the Chas. W. Poole Myriorama presented an interesting entertainment. Large audiences have been secured, and many new effects and dioramic changes in the pictures and a good all-round variety company combined to give the utmost pleasure. Messrs. William Stewart and Alfred Leonard were the guides, as far as the tableaux were concerned, and their interesting details and topical references went far towards adding to the delight of the audience. Always up to date, Messrs. Poole present telling pictures of Vesuvian eruptions, Natal native risings, &c., whilst the series of Nelson pictures and the very realistic Trafalgar scenes provoked rounds of hearty applause. Interspersed with the myriorama were Miss Daisy Graham, with cleverly-trained birds; Little Doretta, who charmed all by her Dutch song and sabot dance; Mr. Harry Stewart, who concealed beneath his ordinary dress some six or seven costumes, which he quickly changed in sight of his audience, an appropriate song being given for each impersonation; the Avondale Quartette, four gentlemen with well-sung glees and a comedietta; Messrs. Leonard and Mac, Irish back-talkers; and Miss Kitty Woodford's canine circus and orchestra. In addition were presented some excellent animated pictures. Messrs. Poole bring their own orchestra with them, and this was heard to considerable advantage.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, May 14,
the Drama, in Four Acts,
by Charles Reade, entitled
"IT'S NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND."

A revival of Charles Reade's drama, It's Never Too Late to Mend, is this week presented at the Alexandra by a company which includes Miss Hetty Chattell and Mr. Ernest Leicester, the production being under the direction of Mr. John M. East. Mr. Leicester gives a breezy and genial performance of Tom Robinson, and succeeds in imparting life to the scenes in which he is concerned. Miss Chattell makes the utmost of Susan Merton, though the part is not one that affords the actress many opportunities of displaying her talents to the best advantage. Mr. W. P. Sheen is amusing as the rascally lawyer Peter Crawley, and almost every word uttered by Mr. J. A. Rosier as Mr. Eden, the prison chaplain, calls forth a round of applause. Mr. Willie Gurney works hard and successfully as the aborigine Jacky; and Mr. Horace Hunter does well as George Fielding. Mr. George Claremont succeeds in getting the tyrannical governor of the prison, Mr. Hawes, thoroughly detested by the pit and gallery. One of the best things in the piece is the pathetic performance of the waif Josephs by Miss Jessica Black; while other parts are suitably filled by Messrs. Kenneth Black and Fred Dobell, and Miss C. Edwards.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, May 14, the comedy, by Stanislaus Stange, entitled,
"THE SCHOOL FOR HUSBANDS."

Miss Jessie Millward and her company from the Scala Theatre are presenting here this week the new play by Stanislaus Stange, The School for Husbands, which is being well received. It is an amusing comedy of the period of the early part of the last century, and though it cannot be denied that it is somewhat thin in places and hardly strong enough to fill the four acts, nevertheless the excellent manner in which it is acted quite compensates for such trifling shortcomings. The story is of one Lady Manners, a neglected wife, who, coming into a fortune unknown to her husband, determines to go out into society, play him at his own game, and so teach him a lesson—which she does with every success. Miss Millward as Lady Manners gives a most engaging portrayal of the character, impersonating it in excellent style and with a delightful sense of comedy. The pathetic moments are also well marked. It is a part in which the well-known and popular actress has a real chance to display her well-trained gifts to considerable advantage, and her success is very marked. Miss Millward is surrounded by a first-class company. Lord Foppington, as played by Mr. T. Wigney Percyval, is a most finished picture of a dandy of the period, and is played with fine humour and great polish; Mr. A. Scott Craven is excellent as the jealous husband, Sir John Manners; and Mr. Philip Cunningham is a most dignified Prince Assam, an amorous lover, whose continual appeals to "Allah" create much amusement. Mr. A. E. Greenaway makes a dashing Captain Lovell; Clarissa Huntleigh is brightly played by Miss Maud Noel, who is very charming and acts in a bright and spontaneous manner which suits the part excellently; Miss Mona K. Crane gives a clever sketch of Lady Airish; and Miss Emma Chambers as Lady Speakill and Miss Maud Leslie as Lady Tattle are vastly amusing as a couple of society scandalmongers. Mr. J. T. Manning is good as Lord Drinkwell, and Mr. George Unwin is seen to advantage as Lord Playmore. Betty, the maid, is capitally embodied by Miss Maud Abbott; and Mr. Cyril Wolesely does well as Roger. The play is beautifully staged, and the costumes are elaborate in the extreme and most tasteful. The stage-management is in the capable hanks of Mr. G. Unwin, and Mr. J. F. Wagner is the manager for the company.

PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

On Monday, May 14,
the Comic Opera, in Three Acts, by Patrick Bidwell, composed by Clarence Lucas and K. Ernest Irving, entitled
"PEGGY MACHREE."

The lively, the tuneful, the pretty, the merry Peggy Machree has received high favour from Poplar playgoers this week. The company is Mr. Charles E. Hamilton's, and a very capable one it is. There is a most engaging and winsome heroine in Miss Claudia Lasell, who enchants with her singing, charms with her acting, and quite catches one's fancy with her dancing. Particularly pleasing is her rendering of such numbers as "There's a home in my heart for you," "The Emerald Isle," and the "Colleen" duet sung in conjunction with her stage-lover. In the part of the latter the spirit of romance comes in sympathetic fashion from Mr. Vernon Davidson, who possesses the qualities of a fine actor and a voice which gives evidence of strength and character. His interpretation of "Star of my life" is a specially commendable effort. Then from Miss Blanche Astley we have as sweet and attractive a Molly as ever flaunted a green ribbon, or tripped an Irish jig, or lured a gallant to the altar. Her performance of "The old oak tree" is an extremely effective bit of vocalism. As an 'unco' guid" specimen of an old Scottish retainer, anxious for the moral welfare of his young mistress, Mr. Milroy Cooper is to be commended for his representation of Alexander McDougal. Those of us who hail from the land where "parritch" is eaten and where the liquid "r" is pronounced most liquidly will have recollections of his type, and it can scarcely be said that for the purpose of the play Mr. Milroy Cooper exaggerates the stolid imperturbability of his "major-domo." His song concerning the country of phenomenal wiseacres is rendered with a due regard for the satirical humour of the lines. Mr. Ralph Lynn submits an amusing picture of the absurdly effeminate Sir Lawrence Borthwick; and Mr. Marc Macdermott is good as the scheming and cadaverous-looking Captain de la Cour. Mr. John Morley reaches a high standard with his singing, and his representation of the manly and boisterous Sergeant Bampton provides us with a capital piece of acting; Mr. Edgar Ashwin enters with zest into the comicalities of Michael, and his vocal item, "My place," demonstrates what an entertaining comedian he can be; in some of his laughable situations he is greatly assisted by Miss Madge Avery, who, as the rather aged sweetheart, Moira Cafferty, indulges in all the wiles and arts of a flirting minx of eighteen; Miss Doris Kelvey is seen to advantage as the unassuming and ladylike Madame de la Cour; Miss Leilia Gordon appropriately sustains the hauteur of the Hon. Emily Prior; while Miss Florence Hayden as Aline and Mr. Fred Charles as the lawyer acquit themselves creditably.

GRAND, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, May 14,
Shakespeare's Play,
"RICHARD III."

True to his policy of catering in turn for all possible tastes among his patrons, Mr. Sounes made a popular booking for this week when he secured Mr. Esmonde Bramley's Shakespearean company. This talented company's répertoire is a very full one, the plays chosen for presentation at this theatre being Richard III., The Merchant of Venice, The Merry Wives of Windsor, As You Like It, Romeo and Juliet, Macbeth, Julius Cæsar, and Hamlet. On Monday Richard III. was given, and Mr. Cyril Este, in the title-rôle, had an opportunity to submit his particularly clever study of one of the best-drawn of Shakespeare's earlier characters. Mr. Este thoroughly appreciates the subtle characterisation, and never misses the chances afforded the actor by the dramatist's fine lines and situations. As Lady Anne Miss Millie Ford was able fully to enlist the sympathies of the audience with the misfortunes of this unhappy woman; and Miss Maud Garth gave full effect to the several fine speeches which fell to her lot as Elizabeth. Mrs. Bernard Parkin acted with dignity as the Duchess of York; and Miss May Beatrice and Miss Nightingale made the most of the few opportunities afforded them as the Princes Edward and Richard respectively. Mr. Baliol Holloway successfully doubled the parts of Clarence and Richmond, and made a decided hit with the former's speech in his cell descriptive of his dream. Mr. F. Owen Chambers worked hard as the Duke of Buckingham; Mr. C. Doyle made an impressive Stanley; and Mr. Frederick Scarth was effective as Hastings. The smaller characters were well cast and capably handled, worthy of especial notice being the Sir Richard Catesby of Mr. A. L. Evans.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, May 14,
A Story of Waterloo, by W. G. Wills, entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

Miss Edith Cole and company, as recently appearing at the Scala Theatre, are at the Coronet this week with the late W. G. Wills' Napoleonic play A Royal Divorce. The last act has been rewritten by George Gervaise Collingham since the original production in 1891, whilst the exceedingly realistic and life-like tableau of the battle of Waterloo and the overthrow of Napoleon at the close of Act 4 call for special commendation. Miss Edith Cole repeats her well-known graceful and impassioned embodiment of the Empress Josephine, the anguished consort of the tyrannous Emperor, of whose divorce the story tells. Mr. Frank Lister gives a capital portraiture of "le petit caporal," his moody, sinister plotting, his autocratic bearing, and his fierce resentment, lit by brief flashes of kindliness and genuine feeling, being ably indicated. He also gives us some idea of the masterful manner in which Napoleon could win over the sympathies of his victims to his most selfish schemes of arrogant ambition. Mr. F. Joynsen-Powell is distinctly good as the crafty, smooth-tongued minister Talleyrand; Mr. George W. Cockburn does well as the Marquis de Beaumont; Mr. George Howard is a capable General Augereau; Mr. T. P. Haynes supplies some laughable low comedy as Grimaud, the drunken inn-keeper of Genappe; Mr. Frederick Powell as Dr. Corvisart and Mr. George Hudson of H.M.S. Bellerophon, who deftly executes a hornpipe in Act 5, do good service; Miss Clara Earle is a bright and vivacious Stephanie de Beauharnais; and Miss Elizabeth Watson acts with the necessary acrimony and vehemence as Marie Louise of Austria, Napoleon's second wife. Miss Marion Ryder makes an engaging little King of Rome; and Misses Irma Foldi, Joan Vaughan, and others are well in the picture.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, May 14, the Musical Comedy, by Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton, entitled
"THE CATCH OF THE SEASON."

Good houses have been the rule at the Kingston playhouse, this week, to witness this successful musical play, which is being presented by a capable company under the management of Mr. Charles Frohman. Miss Maie Ash plays the part of Angela and wins a host of admirers for the grace and charm of the impersonation; Mr. Frank Lincoln appears as the Duke of St. Jermyns, a rôle that he invests with an interest that is refreshing and amusing; the part of Lord Dundreary is filled by Mr. E. H. Kelly with every satisfaction; and Mr. Julian Cross gives a good account of himself as Sir John Crystal. In the part of Lady Crystal Miss Ida Mann scores a distinct success; Miss Hilda Stewart makes an admirable Duchess of St. Jermyns; and Miss Alice Lethbridge and Miss Hettie Muret both deserve commendation for their excellent portrayal of the parts of her two daughters, the Hon. Sophia and the Hon. Honoria Bedford. There are a numerous and well-trained chorus, and an augmented orchestra under the direction of Mr. Ernest Vousden.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, May 14,
the Drama in Four Acts,
by Maud Hildyard and Russell Vann, entitled
"THE GREAT AWAKENING."

Miss Maud Hildyard and company are paying a first visit to Islington with the above drama, an excellent house being present on Monday to welcome the lady, who has made herself immensely popular with the local playgoing public. The drama in which Miss Hildyard has collaborated is a good specimen of its class, possessing an interesting story and excellent situations. A very capable company has been engaged for the production. Miss Hildyard herself as Lola Selby is happily placed in a rôle that exactly suits her. In her experienced hands the vindictive nature of the woman finds full expression, and yet withal there is an abundance of dry humour throughout that causes a great amount of hearty laughter. Miss Hildyard's reception is cordial in the extreme, many calls being accorded her during the evening. Miss Doris Digby as Molly Merton is a sympathetic and womanly heroine, acting pleasantly and making a good impression. To Miss Isa Bellington as Selina Worts thanks are due for a most amusing comedy performance. Mr. A. C. Hardie as James Selby gives a vigorous and clever performance that is well received. Mr. Bernard Copping as Jack Merton and Sir Henry Merton submits a dual impersonation of great value. The parts are quite distinct in character, and his portrayal of the mad scene in the third act is exceptionally well done. Mr. Charles Rogan as Vivian plays the heavy rôle in the usual way, but a little more force would much improve his reading. Mr. Herbert Evelyn as Captain Lambert gives a manly and satisfactory performance in the heroic part. Mr. Willie Scott as Brass makes one of the hits of the night in the comedy rôle, loud laughter greeting his efforts. Mr. Herbert Sidney is good as Wilson, and Mr. Tracy Barron submits a smart and humorous study of a French waiter, the remaining smaller parts being all in good hands. The scenery by Mr. Egerton is a good example of this gentleman's skill, and the incidental music by Mr. E. Reeves is appropriate. The dresses and appointments are on a lavish scale, and everything seems to have been done to ensure a satisfactory performance. A word is due to Mr. Tracy Barrow for his efficient direction of the stage.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, May 14, the Comic Opera, entitled
"LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE."

The bells of Corneville are ringing a merry peal this week at the Crown, Peckham, and the many haunting melodies which abound in Planquette's ever-green opera have, as might have been expected, delighted large audiences. The production is most worthily staged and interpreted by Mr. E. A. St. Albans' clever company. Mr. St. Albans portrays the strongly-drawn character of the old miser Gaspard, the part originally created by the late Mr. Shiel Barry. Mr. St. Albans scores a distinct triumph, and is seen at his best in the great scene at the end of the second act, when the Marquis returns to claim his own and the evil-doing of the old miser is exposed. Mr. George A. Fox makes a dignified Marquis, and his fine baritone voice is heard to much advantage in various vocal numbers. Miss May Bradbury proves herself a vivacious and fascinating Serpolette, making a great success in her taking song, "Look at that and look at this," in the scene at the hiring fair. Mr. Fred Dark is drily humorous as the pompous Bailie, whose eccentric clerk Gobo is amusingly enacted by Mr. Richard Martin. Miss Marion Ayling acts charmingly and sings delightfully as Germaine, rendering her tuneful songs with much expression. Mr. William Everard as the fisherman Grenicheux is the possessor of a pleasing tenor voice; Miss L. Rhodes is good as Christophe. The chorus is thoroughly efficient, and the same remark applies to the orchestra, ably led by Cavalier Legrand.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, May 14, the Play, by Sharkonsky, entitled
"A FATHER'S SACRIFICE."

The success that has attended the Pavilion during the engagement of the Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company shows no sign of diminution, large and enthusiastic audiences being present at every performance given by this clever company, in which Mr. J. Fineberg is an indefatigable stage-manager and Mr. F. Staub an accomplished musical director. On Monday evening Sharkonsky's fine play A Father's Sacrifice was given, and enjoyed the advantage of a capital representation, being throughout extremely interesting, and containing many powerful scenes affording opportunity for forcible acting. A graphic picture of Father Poulus was presented by Mr. J. Fineberg, who secured a distinct and deserved triumph for his powerful playing in the second act; while Benedictus found an able exponent in Mr. Axelrad. Mme. Kayzer's individuality of style and artistic vocalisation gained her a hearty welcome; and the fine voice of Mr. Gusofsky was heard to great advantage in his spirited portrayal of Bartella. Mr. J. Scherman caused much amusement as Diego; and Miss Rubenstein was diverting as Franzisko. Mr. Katz (made up as Henry VIII.) was satisfactory as the King; and Messrs. Raitz and Markowitz displayed talent as the Jews Mnashe and Shleime. The scenery and uniforms were in the best possible taste, and a change of programme has been given nightly throughout the week.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, May 14,
the Romantic Play, by Wm. P. Sheen, entitled
"THE TEMPTRESS."

Those who prefer entertainment in the form of sensational incident are deriving full satisfaction at the Dalston Theatre this week in witnessing representations of The Temptress. Fun, villainy, and even murder are so mixed that the audience become comparatively used to the exciting combination, even in the first act, with the result that all through the piece they are looking for more. They are not disappointed. The eligible young man of the play is Philip Welford, of Fordyce's Bank, and he finds a good representative in Mr. George D. Daiper. Mr. Fredk. Ross appears as Lucas Denbigh, an ex-circus performer, previously known as Nemo, the Mesmerist, who continues his influences to the discomfort and confusion of certain other characters. Mr. W. H. Hallatt represents Pedro Gonzales, a lion tamer, and sustains the part with effect. Mr. Tom E. Sinclair as Bob Tanner, an ex-clown, and Mr. Allan Carruthers as Francis FitzFluke, of the Horse Guards Blue, provide the major portion of the fun, being aided by Mr. Oscar Power, who represents an amorous butler. Mr. Claude Ashworth appears during the first act as Sir Oswald Fordyce. The Temptress, known in the play as Lady Fordyce, is impersonated by Miss Blanche Steele, to whose forcible rendering of the part much of the sustained interest is due. Miss Mabel Scudmore as Marion Fordyce elicits admiration for a neat representation of a sweet character.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, May 14,
the Comedy, in Three Acts, by H. J. Byron, entitled
"OUR BOYS."

Comedy is somewhat of a novelty in Marylebone, so consequently all the more welcome, and certainly Mr. Bailey deserves every success for his enterprise in booking such a clever little company as Mr. Brydon Phillips's turned out to be. The delightful old butterman, Perkyn Middlewick, finds a most realistic exponent in Mr. Fred Grove, who fairly revels in the part, bringing out all the varying phases of the character with marked effect. As Sir Geoffrey Champneys, Mr. E. Story-Gofton presents a life-like portrait of that county magnate, his playing denoting that easy finished style and bearing only found in an actor of experience and pronounced ability. Mr. J. G. Grahame, jun., enacts Talbot Champneys in a most amusing way, much to the West Londoners' delight; and Mr. C. Herbert Hewetson does exceedingly well as Charles Middlewick. Miss Blanche Stewart gives a graceful and winning impersonation of Violet Melrose; Miss Christine Stuart is equally pretty and engaging as Mary Melrose; Miss Lucie Evelyn is distinctly good as the warm-hearted Clarissa Champneys; whilst Miss Alice Brookes sustains the important rôle of Belinda with vivacious energy and expression. The piece is preceded by A Pair of Lunatics, by W. R. Walkes, in which Mr. C. Herbert Hewetson and Miss Blanche Stewart are very amusing.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, May 14, the Drama, in Five Acts, by G. R. Sims and Arthur Shirley, entitled
"TWO LITTLE VAGABONDS."

A return visit this week is being paid by Hardie and Von Leer's company in The Two Little Vagabonds. The piece was received with the usual enthusiasm by a crowded audience. It is performed by a capable company, and is admirably staged. A powerful performance of George Thornton is presented by Mr. William D. Fazan. Mr. Sidney Vautier plays well as Captain Darville; Mr. Dunstan Hayne is good as John Searth. Three excellent character studies of Bill Mullins the Gaffer, Dido Bance, and the Cough-drop are respectively given by Mr. John F. Trayner, Mr. Frank Gordon, and Mr. Fred Archer; and they must be individually praised for their realistic impersonation. Marion Thornton is sympathetically undertaken by Miss Valerie Crespin; and Barbara Scarth receives good treatment at the hands of Miss F. Russell Spiers; and a gentle Nurse Randall is that of Miss Muriel Clay; warm praise must be extended to Miss Marie Pritchard for her really good representation of Biddy Mullins; the two vagabonds, Dick and Wally, are well played by Miss D. Rosslyn Vayne and Miss Josie Beltram; the boisterousness of the light-hearted and good-natured Dick is in direct contrast to the poor consumptive and weakly Wally. The smaller characters, Leeson, Hargitt, the landlord of The Chequers, Dr. Lynn, Joe Gargoyle, Whiffin, a constable, and a footman and maid-servant are well represented by Mr. F. G. Kent, Mr. Marston Moor, Mr. T. Blakman, Mr. Hugh Holliman, Mr. Henry Buckland, Mr. W. T. Harris, and Miss Lena Vernon, who do justice to their respective characters.

THE TERRISS.

On Monday, May 14,
"HAMLET."

The members of the stock company who have now been here since the middle of January have this week set themselves an arduous task in portraying Shakespeare's tragedy of Hamlet. Let it, however, at once be said that they came most creditably out of the severe ordeal. This is the first time that the work of the immortal hand has been produced at the Rotherhithe theatre, but its favourable reception at the hands of large audiences has been very gratifying to the popular acting-manager, Mr. Will T. Taylor. The part of Hamlet was naturally entrusted to Mr. Ashley Page. Mr. Page presented us with a Hamlet full of youth and full of fervour. He won the sympathy of the audience from the first, and by his art and pathos achieved a highly creditable success in the part. Mr. Page was seen to, perhaps, the greatest advantage in the Play scene in the third act and in the scene of Hamlet's death at the end of the play. Miss Marion Denvil made a sweet and sympathetic Ophelia, and scored a great success in the "mad" scene in the fourth act. Mr. John Sargent invested the rôle of King Claudius with great dignity, and delivered his lines with much intelligence. The famous "King's prayer" was excellently given. Mr. H. J. Barrett was appropriately senile as Polonius; and Mr. Alfred Harding as the Ghost was most impressive. Miss George de Lara was excellent as Queen Gertrude, though perhaps she looked somewhat too young for the part; Mr. James Chippendale made a humorous Shakespearean clown as the first gravedigger; Mr. Edwin J. Collins was a shapely and impassioned Laertes; and the faithful Horatio was capitally played by Mr. Fred Morgan; Mr. Frank Vincent was good as the foppish Osrick; and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern were safe in the experienced hands of Mr. C. A. Chandler and Mr. Simon Ord. Other parts were adequately rendered by Miss Maggie Lindsay and Messrs. Hayward, Henry Russell, Frank Wilson, H. Benwell, E. C. Alfred, and Henry Bassett. The scenery and effects were excellent, and some appropriate music has been specially composed and arranged by Mr. Alexander Humphreys.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, May 14, the Drama, in a Prologue and Four Acts, by Arthur St. John, entitled
"DISHONOURED."

The return visit of this piece was welcomed by an appreciative audience at the Stratford Theatre Royal on Monday night, and the many exciting situations and stirring incidents were vociferously applauded. Miss Blanche St. Albans and Mr. J. Leicester Jackson's company is well-balanced and capable, and the piece is admirably mounted. Mr. Percy Ballard makes a manly and outspoken Philip Cunningham; and Mr. Jackson Hayes plays with all the necessary vindictiveness and malevolence as Captain Peyntland. Sir William Cunningham has a dignified representative in Mr. Geoffrey Broughton; and Mr. Walter T. Hybert plays capitally as Captain Cholmondeley. Mr. Val. Gully is a very diverting Jem Stokes; Mr. Charles M. Julian contributes a clever sketch of Mike Farthing; and Mr. A. Raymond Shaw acts very convincingly as Azurkin. Miss Violet Cranford plays with sympathy and charm as Leslie Maynard, and the part is in much favour with the audience; Miss Jessie Merrick plays Sybil very appropriately; Miss Walton is a natural Lady Cunningham; and Miss Polly Denville makes a bright and vivacious Ann Maria. Remaining parts are all undertaken with intelligence and care.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, May 14, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Frederick Melville, entitled
"THE UGLIEST WOMAN ON EARTH."

Those playgoers who like their dramatic fare served "hot and strong" are finding this week's engagement at the Borough Theatre much to their liking, and the popular parts of this spacious playhouse are being well filled nightly. Rapt interest is maintained in the central figure of the piece, a woman prepossessing in all else but that nature has endowed her with a face so repulsive that she is bound to appear in a veil enveloping her head, and it is therefore a matter for general satisfaction when ere the conclusion of the piece this facial disfigurement disappears. Miss Beatrice Homer is eminently suited in the name-part, her fine stage appearance and excellent diction readily enlisting the sympathies of the audience, and the final discarding of the veil is greeted with great applause. Mr. Philip Darien makes a buoyant and virile Jack Merriman; and Mr. Leyton Cancellor submits a vigorous embodiment of the callous Hubert Gold. Mr. Charles French plays in quiet, effective style as Antonio Luchesi; Mr. Allan Devonport makes the most of his opportunities as Tom Redvers; and Mr. William Wallace plays smartly as the hooligan Raggles. Miss Nell Oliver supplies an incisive and very convincing portraiture of the scheming Rose Courtenay; and Miss Margaret Watson plays with much intensity and power as Morita. The "comic relief" is in the safe hands of Mr. Tubby Edlin, who makes of Herrick as quaint and amusing a personage as could be wished for. He is ably assisted in the fun-making by Miss Nellie Jackson, always bright and engaging as Aggie Brown. Other parts are all in capable hands, and the scenery and mounting of the piece is very appropriate.

MISS WOOLGAR'S PENSION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In your issue of the 12th inst. you report Mr. George Alexander to have said, in reference to Miss Woolgar, "In her prosperous days she was sensible enough to invest some of her money in the Royal General Theatrical Fund, and in consequence in her old age has a competence which saves her from living on her friends."

I think this is somewhat inaccurate. Miss Woolgar was a member of the old Covent Garden Fund, now merged into the General Theatrical Fund, hence her claims on that association.

I may add that, as the widow of Alfred Mellon, she receives a substantial pension from the Royal Society of Musicians. Long may she continue to enjoy it.—Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM H. CUMMINGS,
Hon. Treas. of the Royal Society of Musicians.
The Guildhall School of Music,
Victoria-embankment, E.C.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

On Thursday, May 10, Gounod's Opera,
"FAUST."

Marguerite ..... MLLE. DONALDA
Siebel ..... MLLE. DAS
Marthe ..... MME. PAULIN
Mephistopheles ..... M. JOURNET
Valentin ..... M. SEVEILHAC
Wagner ..... M. FRANK ARTHUR
Faust ..... M. ALTCHEWSKY

As a contrast to the storm and stress of the Ring Gounod's ever-popular Faust was given at Covent Garden in French on Thursday night, May 10. Mlle Donalda repeated her former success as Marguerite, and deepened the already good impression this singer made at Covent Garden last season by the beautiful quality and pure intonation of her voice and the intelligence of her acting. A new Faust appeared in the person of M. Altchewsky, a tenor from the Brussels Mounaie. M. Altchewsky possesses a voice of light and pleasing quality, and sings without exaggeration; there is much charm in the artist's method, even if there is not any great dramatic power. M. Journet was a robust and effective Mephistopheles, and M. Seveilhac again submitted his familiar impersonation of the character of Valentin. As Siebel Mlle. Das met with approval, singing her solo in the Garden scene with no little charm. The Marthe of Mme. Paulin and the Wagner of M. Frank Arthur were clever and intelligent performances, and the orchestra under M. Andre Messager gave an able rendering of the familiar work, in which little fault could be found.

New Scenery has been specially painted for these Operas by Harry Brocke.

Two new operas of a lighter character, and forming a great contrast to the Ring, were produced at Covent Garden on Friday, May 11. The first, founded on Hans Andersen's fairy tale of "The Princess and the Swineherd," is entitled Der Vagabund und die Prinzessin, was first performed at Buda Pesth in 1904, and served to bring to the front its composer, Edward Poldini, a Hungarian musician hitherto chiefly known by his chamber music. The story relates how a young prince is enamoured of a charming princess, and in making a proposal to the king for his daughter's hand sends as a present a fine rose-bush covered with roses. The ambassador of the young Prince is well received by the King, who approves of the match, as also does the Court Astrologer, and the Prince, disguised as a minstrel, sings some verses of his own composition in praise of the Princess, but that young lady turns up her pretty nose both at the rose-bush and the verses of her admirer. After the Court retire, and when the Ambassador and the Prince are alone, the latter vows he will revenge the insult and punish the Princess. The Princess and her maids of honour return, and are playing blind man's buff when sounds of music are heard; it is the hurdy-gurdy played by the Prince, who this time, disguised as a showman, is wheeling a barrow on which is a small stage with puppets. The Princess at once commands a performance, and she is so pleased that nothing will content her but the purchase of the entire show. The Prince will, however, take no money, and only consents to give up the show on receiving a hundred kisses from the Princess. The Princess at first scouts the idea, but afterwards consents, and while the maids of honour are counting the kisses and seeing fair the King suddenly appears, is scandalised at the way his daughter is going on with a common showman, casts her off, saying she is no daughter of his. On the King leaving the Prince reveals himself, informing the Princess that his love is turned to scorn. The unhappy Princess, deserted by all, breaks off a flower from the rose-bush and slowly goes out of the gate as the curtain descends. M. A. F. Seligmann is responsible for the adaptation, and an English version of the book has been written by Mr. Alfred Kalisch and Mr. Percy Pitt. The music the composer has fitted to this quaint story is graceful and pleasing without being in any way ambitious; there is a charming minuet and gavotte, while the orchestral scoring for the music that accompanies the marionettes is decidedly clever. The action of the opera takes place in The Gardens of the Castle. Herr Braun's fine voice was heard to great advantage in the small part of the King, while Herr Jörn's pleasing tenor voice did full justice to the part of the Prince, Fräulein Burchardt making a charming Princess; and the other parts of the Astrologer and the Ambassador were ably filled by Mr. Frank Arthur and Herr Nietan. Mr. Percy Pitt, well-known as a clever composer, admirably conducted the orchestra.

In Der Barbier von Bagdad Peter Cornelius, the composer, has produced a work of considerable merit, and owing to the interest Franz Liszt took in the composer (who was born in 1824 and died in 1874), The Barber of Bagdad was first heard at Weimar in 1858; but the reception of the work was unfavourable, and the opera underwent a complete revision by Felix Mottl, and this version was the one given by the students of the Royal College of Music in 1891 at the Savoy Theatre, and on Friday night, where it was heard for the first time at Covent Garden. The libretto is founded upon a story from "The Arabian Nights," which is slight, but lively and amusing, and made more important by the clever music written by Cornelius for the chief performers. The story relates how one Nureddin is in love with Margiana, the daughter of a Cadi, who, however, intends her to wed a certain Selim; but this does not meet the lady's ideas, as she much prefers Nureddin, and while her father, Mustapha, is away she sends Bostana to inform him that her mistress will receive him. The delighted Nureddin at once sends for a barber to shave and make him smart for the coming interview; but, unfortunately for the young lover, the barber who arrives, one Abul Hassan, though professing to take the greatest interest in the young man's welfare, turns out a most unmitigated bore, and so hinders the shaving operations by his remarks on astrology, history, and songs in praise of Margiana that the lover is in despair of losing his appointment. However, at last released, he arrives at the lady's house, but in the middle of a duet Bostana rushes in and informs the lovers that Mustapha has returned and is just beating a slave. Nureddin is about to retire, when it appears that the meddlesome barber, Adul Hassan, overhears the cries of the slave, thinks Nureddin is being killed, and getting up a relief party, causes such a disturbance that Nureddin has to hide in a large chest. Hassan declares that his young friend has been killed and the body locked in the chest. Mustapha says the whole is a plan to rob him, and sends for the Caliph, who, when the trunk is opened and Nureddin discovered, advises Mustapha to give his daughter's hand to Nureddin. The music accompanying this little plot is both charming and melodious, and although the composer does not attempt any great amount of Eastern colouring, certain touches, such as the call of the Muezzin given in the second act, give all the needful local tone to the work, which is indeed a musical comedy of the best kind. Herr Jörn proved a capital Nureddin, while Fräulein Burchardt and Fräulein Grimm were equally successful in the characters of Margiana and Bostana. As the interfering barber Herr Knüpfer revelled in the comic situations, giving in the shaving scene some delightful comedy touches, which were aided by his fine voice, the part where the barber pauses in his shaving of Nureddin and indulges (shaving brush and razor in hand) 'n shakes, runs, roulardes, and cadenzas of such length and fluency, would have gladdened the heart of an old operatic impressario. Herr Nietan also gave a capital performance of the Cadi, Mustapha, and the chorus sang crisply and with much intelligence. The two scenes in the Barber and the scene in the first opera had been specially painted by Mr. Harry Brooke. The Barber also had the advantage of being conducted by Dr. Richter. There was not a large house, but the performance was honoured by the presence of His Majesty the King and the Prince and Princess of Wales.

The first Italian performance of the present season was heard on Tuesday night, when Verdi's opera Rigoletto was given to a crowded house. Much of the enthusiasm was no doubt due to the fact that two famous artists in the cast, Signor Caruso and Signor Scotti, had recently gone through some awful experiences in the recent San Francisco earthquake. All fears on behalf of the great tenor were soon allayed, as Signor Caruso was in splendid voice, although indulgence on the part of the audience was claimed for Signor Scotti on the score of a cold. Both artists received the heartiest welcome from the large audience. In the part of the Duke, Signor Caruso repeated many former triumphs, singing and acting throughout with the utmost vigour, and being of course encored in "La donna e mobile." Signor Scotti gave great dramatic intensity to the part of Rigoletto, rousing the audience to great enthusiasm by the fine duet in the second act. Mlle. Donalda made a charming Gilda, and sang the music of the part with great purity of intonation and fluency of voice, being particularly successful in "Cara Nome." M. Journet proved a capital Sparafucile; and M. Gilibert an excellent Monterone. The part of Maddalena was taken with much ability by Mlle. Siva, and it is needless to state the great quartet in the last act made its customary effect. The conductor, Signor Campanini, was successful in getting good results both from chorus and orchestra.

Some changes have been made in the cast for the second cycle of the Ring; that fine artist, Herr Van Rooy, appearing as Wotan both in Das Rheingold and in Die Walküre on Monday; while Fräulein Ternina again gave her splendid impersonation of Brünnhilde; the pathetic character of Sieglinde being undertaken by Frau Wittich. Herr Konrad, as in the first cycle, took the part of Siegmund; Herr Knupper again making an admirable representation of Hunding.

"A WINDOW INTO YESTERDAY."

A Play, in One Act,
by Jack Edwards and J. Hedley Drummond, Produced for the First Time at the King's Theatre, Covent Garden, on Wednesday, May 16.

Cardinal Piero Boromeo ..... MR. TOWNLEY SEARLE
Frau Lauro ..... MR. SAVILL FOSTER
Giovanni Besanto ..... MR. VERNON SHAIRP
Paolo Besanto ..... MR. SIDNEY LORIS
Contessa Della Ravia ..... MISS NELLIE LEGGETT

The curiosities of dramatic literature were added to on Wednesday by the production at the King's Theatre, Covent Garden, of a one-act play with the above perversion of His Majesty's English as a title. It deals with an episode in the life of an Italian Cardinal, and proved to be a dreary waste of words surrounding an improbable story. The "window into yesterday" is situated in the apartments of Cardinal Boromeo, who is on a mission in Milan, and every time the Cardinal gazes through it he sees the retrospect of his past life, which includes an error of his early youth, when, as a young soldier, he had won the love of a high-born maiden. His suit was opposed by the young lady's parents, and they arranged to run away and get married. The lovers eloped, and spent the night together, but on the morrow the youth was called to join his regiment, and the marriage could not take place. On his return he sought for the girl in vain, and for twenty years the young soldier, who entered the church and became a Cardinal, has kept the secret locked in his heart. He reveals it at length to his confessor, and after protesting that he did all in his power to make restitution, implores absolution. Soon afterwards an audience is demanded of the Cardinal by the Contessa Della Ravia, who requests His Eminence to intercede with the Duke of Milan to prevent the union of her daughter with a dissolute young soldier. The Contessa also has a secret of old standing which she relates to the Cardinal, who realises that the lady is none other than his affianced bride of a score of years ago, and that the daughter referred to is their child. Without revealing his identity, the Cardinal gives the required undertaking, and, going again to the window, gazes with chastened feelings into "yesterday." Ere the curtain fell on Wednesday a tremulous voice might have been heard singing what on the authority of the programme was an "Ave Maria" specially composed for the occasion. To us it sounded like the wailing of the wind. The chances of success for this gloomy piece were not enhanced by the acting. Mr. Townley Searle revealed some dramatic aptitude and a good speaking voice as the Cardinal, but why he should make up his face with two patches of red like a clown in the harlequinade is a mystery. Mr. Savill Foster, who played the part of a monk and also favoured the rouge-stick, gave the impression that he would have shone better as a low comedian. Miss Nellie Leggett had few chances in the part of the Contessa, and made still less of them; and Mr. Sidney Loris's efforts to play a swashbuckling soldier were not happy. Mr. Vernon Shairp displayed an intelligent appreciation of his part of the young priest's clerk, and seemed to have learned his lines—a statement which could not be made with regard to all the members of the cast. The authors were called at the end of the piece and lavishly applauded by an indulgent audience. A Window Into Yesterday was to have been followed by Mr. R. C. Carton's comedy, Lady Huntworth's Experiment, but it was announced from the stage that the author had refused permission for it to be played in London, and that a concert would be given instead.

THEATRICAL BOOKS.

CHAT WITH MR. T. SEALEY CLARK.

The latest addition to the somewhat limited list of theatrical publishers is Mr. T. Sealey Clark, of Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C. Mr. Clark has had the enterprise and, it may be added, the courage to produce the first really creditable, if not quite exhaustive, biographical directory of the stage, the Green Room Book, which we reviewed in a recent issue. This "Who's Who of the Stage" has, as no doubt many of our readers are aware, long been talked of, but it was very much "in the air" until Mr. Clark purchased the copyright last September, and, in face of difficulties which need not be particularised, succeeded in bringing out the book six months later. Before this Mr. Clark had made himself well known in the publishing world by the splendid "Phil May Folio," for the production of which he was mainly responsible, and by several dainty children's books, as well as the Kingsway Series of popular novels.

Having so recently reviewed the Green Room Book, it is needless now to refer to the contents beyond saying that it is an excellent and promising first issue of a theatrical annual, which should be indispensable to all who are directly or indirectly interested in stage matters. A chat with Mr. Clark himself demonstrates that he intends to largely widen the scope and increase the general utility of the volume.

"I am well satisfied," he says, "with the reception accorded to the Green Room Book by the Press and the profession. Of course, there were bound to be omissions in the first issue, and a due sense of proportion and regard to the relative importance of individuals will be more carefully borne in mind in future. I intend to encourage and assist those who are on the lower rungs of the ladder, and who display the ability and energy which entitle them to look for greater success to come.

"I want my book," he continues, "to contain succinct and accurate accounts of the professional careers of those included in its pages, together with a few interesting personal details. We all like to know something about the personal tastes, the amusements, and the literary, artistic, or other achievements of our stage favourites. It is the penalty, and a small one, which they pay for the prominence they have attained in their interesting and delightful professsion. But the greatest care will be taken not to give pain or offence, or go beyond that which is dictated by good taste and good feeling, and I therefore trust that less trouble will be experienced in the future in securing data which go to make up really valuable as well as interesting biographical notices. In this respect actors, managers, and others, both in London and the provinces, can greatly aid me by applying for forms and filling in the necessary particulars. I wish it to be understood, however, that such notices are not inserted by way of advertisement or in return for payment, that no one can claim inclusion in the book as a right, and that the selection of individuals will be, as far as possible, made on the basis of merit and public acceptance. By this means I hope to build up an annual volume of dramatic reference which will be regarded as the 'Debrett' of the profession. I shall also largely augment the appendices of the volume, and shall include in it an annual review of the drama, and shall endeavour to increase the scope and utility of the legal section, while I propose to supply a directory of addresses."

Mr. Clark purposes to dissociate the musical from the dramatic section, and publish a separate work for the benefit of the former profession, as he feels that there is ample room and scope for both books. He has already made arrangements with one of our most artistic photographers, who is renowned for his portraits of musical celebrities, and he trusts to be able shortly to bring out a very beautiful as well as useful book. At present it is not quite possible to separate the vaudeville or variety from the ordinary stage, as in a very large number of cases the artists are interchangeable; but he has this question also in view.

Mr. Clark has another theatrical book "on the stocks." It is a tale, he informs us, dealing in an amusing and graphic way with the experiences, the joys and the sorrows, of touring. The novel is written by Miss Ina Rozant, and bears the title of "An Actress's Pilgrimage." It will be published in good time for the holiday season. If rumour speaks truly, it will find a large number of interested readers both inside and outside the profession.

The subject of this sketch is a Somerset man, and has been associated with the publishing business all his life. After being a bookseller in Yeovil for some time, he came to London twenty-two years ago, and was connected for the greater portion of that period with the well-known firms of F. V. White and G. P. Putnam's Sons. On his own account he has published the works of numerous famous authors, and he has a reputation for producing his books in first-class style, with good readable type, even in the case of the cheapest editions.

THE Theatre Royal, Margate, is at present being entirely reseated by Deans, of Birmingham, with tip-up chairs, which will not only make it as comfortable as any theatre in the kingdom, but will incidentally greatly increase the holding capacity. The stock company has already made its mark in Margate, and Mr. Michael has secured an excellent list of bookings, principally musical, for the coming season.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

BERLIN, THURSDAY, May 17.—The piece is by a Scandinavian writer who, like most of his countrymen, imitates Ibsen without the latter's genius. A gloomy, unnatural tone prevails; most of the characters are—to use an Americanism—cranks, and the plot is morbid and unhealthy without any originality. The audience followed the play with patient attention, but displayed no enthusiasm, although the author was called and applauded by a minority at the close. The heroine, Karen Kruse, has been married a year to Erling Kruse, who loves his wife genuinely, but with less of the passionate evidences than she would like. He goes about his estate, managing his woods and looking after things generally with the ardour of an agriculturist, and Karen is jealous of the trees that he loves. She has understanding for nothing outside herself and her own love; and when she has made herself believe she is the typical neglected wife, she is ripe for anything that may come along. The poet Hartwig Hadeln comes along; he has a way of turning up and talking enigmatically on the subject of love and "Weltschmerz," and similar absorbing themes. Karen receives him—figuratively at first—with open arms, pouring out her woes as a misunderstood and forsaken wife into Hadeln's willing ear. A good understanding is speedily established between them, and Kruse surprises them in a close embrace. Karen confesses her guilt—confesses more than she is guilty of—and then stabs herself. Hadeln, whom we have long suspected of being afflicted with more than the harmless idiosyncrasies peculiar to a poet, relapses into madness, and commits suicide by throwing himself down a mountain. The piece is in parts extremely wearisome by reason of its long discourses upon love and psychological problems, and even its best passages fail to gain sympathy. The interpretation was uneven. Fräulein Fehdmer was at first weak and obscure—more so than even the character demanded—but her rendering grew in merit from act to act. Herr Lettinger gave a satisfactory account of Kruse, but Herr Abel might have given a much better impersonation of the mad poet than was the case. The evenings are becoming too warm for heavy pieces of this description, and Love's Tragedy will scarcely hold the boards much longer.

THE summer season has begun at the New Royal Opera, and will in all probability do good business. The grounds attached to the building (formerly known as Kroll's Establishment) are so pretty and extensive that, provided as they are with a first-rate military band and refreshment tables, they form a most agreeable place in which to pass the lengthy entr'actes. Consequently, almost any summer company is bound to succeed. Martha was given on Monday evening with an admirable cast, Fräulein Bonani singing the name-part. A new tenor, Herr Wildbrunn, proved himself worthy of the rôle of Lyonel, and the Plunkett of Herr Lordmann was highly satisfactory. Kapellmeister Grosskoff conducted with much circumspection.

HERR JOSEF KAINZ is studying a new rôle—that of Mephisto in Goethe's Faust. The famous actor has entirely recovered from his recent illness, and will go on tour in the summer. He will come to Berlin for a brief season, and will play, in addition to Mephisto, the title-rôles of Richard the Third and Nathan der Weise.

AT the Music Exhibition now being held in the Philharmonie many interesting things are to be seen. In the so-called "Blaue Saal" the original manuscripts of all Mozart's operas—with the exception of Don Juan—are shown, as well as those of Beethoven's Fidelio and the Ninth Symphony, Bach's Passion Music, and the Mass in B mi

OSCAR WILDE'S four-act play Ein Idealer Gatte will be produced at the Kleines Theatre to-morrow evening. The translation into German has been done by Herren von Teschenberg and Paira; the adaptation for the German stage by Herr Welisch. Fräulein Fehdmer is cast for the part of Lady Chiltern and Herr Walden for that of Lord Goring.

OFFENBACH'S delightful work Orpheus in der Unterwelt was produced at the Neues on Sunday, being the last novelty under the management of Herr Reinhardt. When the scanty vocal talent of the company is taken into consideration, it is wonderful that so much success could be achieved. This was due to the two or three excellent singers engaged for the occasion, to the broad humour of the regular artists, and to the first-rate conductorship of Herr Oscar Fried. The charming music was very finely interpreted as far as the orchestra goes, while the singing of Fräulein von der Osten as Eurydice could hardly have been better. Herr Engels was, of course, perfectly irresistible in the part of Jupiter; it was a pity that his singing powers were so feeble. The exponents of Orpheus and Pluto—Herren Eckert and Moissi—were equally humorous; and other rôles were well sustained by Herr Pagay and Fräulein Heims. Herr Pserhofer is responsible for the modernisation of the book, which is full of wit and funny topical allusions. How up-to-date the "milieu" is may be gathered from the fact that Pluto drives an automobile. The mounting of the piece was brilliant, and applause was spontaneous and hearty, culminating in repeated calls for manager and conductor. A lengthy run—despite the failing above-mentioned—may safely be prophesied.

THE Stern Conservatorium gave its annual operatic performance at the Theatre des Westens last week, proving once again how well the students are trained under the surveillance of Herr Rothmühl. The work selected for performance was Méhul's well-nigh forgotten musical drama Moses in Egypt. This classical composition, full of beautiful harmonies as it is, is well worth listening to. It disappeared from the Royal Opera repertory with the retirement of the famous tenor, Niemann, and, to the best of my knowledge, has not been heard here since. It was admirably rendered by the students on the whole, and Professor Gustav Hollander, the director of the Conservatorium, conducted with wonted skill. The prologue and several scenes from Leoncavallo's Bajacci preceded the longer work. Fräulein Hempel, by the way, who sang so finely at the last public performance of the Conservatorium, has been engaged for Bayreuth this year.

DIRECTOR BRAHM is planning a cycle of Ibsen's plays for next season, which will mean a tremendous strain on the powers of the Lessing company, accustomed as these distinguished artists are to Ibsen. The plays—thirteen in number—will be given in chronological order, from Der Bund der Jugend to the great dramatist's "epilogue," Wenn wir Toten erwachen.

THE laughable farce Loulou, by MM. Soulié and Gorffe, in the German adaptation by Benno Jacobson, has reached its hundredth consecutive performance at the Trianon, and is still high in popular favour.

"DIE LUSTIGE WITTWE" is filling the bill exclusively at the Berliner. It was witnessed on Sunday by the Crown Prince and a numerous suite. H.I.H. received the manager of the Hamburg Operetta Company—Herr Monti—in his box, and expressed his pleasure at the performance.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"ROULE-TA-BESSE,"
Play in Six Acts and a Prologue,
by Jules Mary and Emile Rochard,
Produced at the Ambigu, May 11.

Roule-Ta-Besse ..... M. ETIEVENT
Gargousse ..... M. VILLA
Louis ..... M. LIBERT
Duc de Senoncourt ..... M. VOLNYS
Gaspard de Mauléon ..... M. GREY
Le Docteur Essenard ..... M. CHAMPDEB
Bastienne ..... MLLE. MAGGIE GAUTHIER

Hélène ..... MLLE. CHAPELAS
La Mère Cacatois ..... MME. VICTORIN

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, May 17.—For the first time in many years the Ambigu has been able to lay its hands on a real melodrama. It was a fortunate selection, and M. Grisier, the enterprising manager of that popular playhouse, will not have to change his programme for a long time to come. The pretty prologue takes place in 1870, during the Franco-Prussian war. Roule-Ta-Besse, a fourteen-year old waif, who earns his living by turning somersaults on the high road, has adopted Bastienne, a little girl of six, whose grandfather, her sole protector, was killed by the Germans. Roule-Ta-Besse's history is a sad one. His father, an acrobat, broke his neck because a scoundrel cut the rope of the trapeze on which he performed, and the boy's mother died from grief. He is a brave lad. He not only befriends little Bastienne, but in the shed where he sleeps he hides the Due de Senoncourt, a "franc-tireur," for whom the Prussian soldiers are searching. There is, however, a man he hates, and that is Gaspard de Mauléon, the villain of the piece. It was Gaspard who cut the rope of the trapeze to avenge himself on Roule-Ta-Besse's mother, who repelled his advances. The boy saw the deed done; but he dared not denounce the man, for he knew full well that no one would have taken a little vagabond's word against that of a nobleman. And then a great misfortune befalls Roule-Ta-Besse. The Marquise de Mauléon, Gaspard's aunt, a rich widow, adopts Bastienne. The boy knows that the child's future is now assured; but she is all he has in the world, and when she departs he is heart-broken.

As the curtain rises again twelve years have elapsed, and we are in Paris in the wineshop of La Mère Cacatois, the headquarters of Gargousse's gang, all of them burglars. Gargousse is their chief, but he is not an ordinary housebreaker; he has principles and puts them into practice. He appropriates what does not belong to him, but he will not have any bloodshed; and, in order that his men shall not be tempted in any way he does not allow them to carry arms. Moreover, he keeps a careful account of the results of the operations, and does not—like many of his colleagues—pocket the lion's share. Whilst Gargousse and his men are discussing their affairs, the door opens and Gaspard enters. The noble Gaspard has come on a rather peculiar errand. He has watched the gang break into the house of one of his friends; and as he is very short of cash he asks Gargousse to let him have a sum of money, failing which he will inform the authorities. Gargousse, with a keen eye to business, not only pays the money but offers the blackmailing aristocrat a share in the profits if he will give the gang occasional information as to where they can operate. Gaspard gladly consents, and at once tells them that as the Duc de Senoncourt is absent from Paris a good haul can be made at that gentleman's house. At that moment a shriek is heard, and someone calls out that a man had jumped into the river. Gargousse at once plunges after him, and is fortunate enough to rescue him. The man is hiedous, his face all seams and scars. And when he is alone with Gargousse he says that his name is Roule-Ta-Besse, that he was serving on board a steam barge, and that these scars are caused by the bursting of the boiler. He saved the crew; but, being disfigured and not finding any work, he decided to put an end to his life. Moved by this story, the good-natured Gargousse promises to assist him, without, however, letting him know anything about the profession wherein he is engaged.

We then assist at the attempted burglary at the Duc de Senoncourt's, where the gang is disturbed and take to flight. Roule-Ta-Besse alone is caught, and the Duc is on the point of giving him into custody, when, in the course of their conversation, he recognises the acrobat who, during the war, saved his life. The Duc, convinced that Roule-Ta-Besse does not belong to Gargousse's gang, takes him in his employ, and informs him that he is engaged to a pretty young girl called Bastienne. Roule-Ta-Besse trembles when he hears that name; but the girl is not to know that her former friend has become a monster, and he begs the Duc to introduce him to her as M. Brusquet. And, under that name he continues to befriend her, for when the wicked Gaspard, anxious to prevent her marriage with the Duc, tries to kidnap the girl, Roule-Ta-Besse comes to the rescue and stabs the villain.

The work is well played. In the prologue Mlle. Hélène Royé created a great impression by the pathetic manner in which she impersonated Roule-Ta-Besse as a boy. It was M. Etiévent who showed him to us as a grown-up man, and he dealt fairly well with the rôle. M. Grey imparted the right note to Gaspard, the villain; and M. Villa was an ideal Gargousse. He scored a huge success.

"LE TOUR DE MAIN,"
Comedy, in Three Acts, by MM. F. de Croisset and A. Tarride, produced at the Gymnase
On May 16.

Jeanne de Chanluce ..... MLLE. MARTHE REGNIER
Marquise de Chanluce ..... MME. HENRIET
Hortense ..... MLLE. FRANQUET
Fraulein ..... MLLE. E. ANDREE
Gérard de Chanluce ..... M. F. HUGUENET
René de Chanluce ..... M. MAGNIER
De Prière ..... M. PIERRE ACHARD

"LA TOUR DE MAIN" was written some eight years ago, and M. Frances de Croisset had asked M. Tarride to collaborate with him because he hoped that this clever actor would also be able to interpret the chief rôle therein. As things turned out, M. de Croisset's wish was not gratified, and it was M. Huguenet who impersonated Gérard de Chanluce. The moral of the piece is that domestic happiness can only be maintained if certain peccadillos are kept secret; and that circumstances can arise when it is better to suppress truth, if truth is likely to work mischief. The Marquis Gérald de Chanluce has never been very faithful to his wife; but as this good lady knows nothing of his pranks, she is perfectly happy. If this nobleman's conjugal interior is most serene, the same cannot be said of that of his son René, married to Jeanne, a loving spouse but a highly frivolous little person. René is writing a historical work, and is helped by Hortense de Randier, a widow whom René loved when she was a young girl. When Jeanne sees that her husband has transferred his affections to the widow she informs that lady that her presence in the house is no longer wanted. René defends his intellectual companion, whereupon the irate Jeanne at once gives herself to a silly young fellow, Pierre. René repents his folly, and is anxious to become reconciled to his wife; but the latter is now placed in a rather difficult position. Her conscience tells her that she must confess everything to her husband. "No," says her father-in-law, the Marquis, "this is a thing that must be concealed." What is sauce for the Marquis gander is sauce for the daughter-in-law goose. And Jeanne and her husband become reconciled, and René—like the Marquis's wife—remains in ignorance of "certain things," which, if he had known them, would have made him most unhappy. It was well played by M. Huguenet, Mlle. Marthe Regnier, and Mme. Henriet.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

MRS. BEERBOHM TREE, Miss Esther Palliser, and Mr. George Grossmith contributed to a programme of a concert given on the afternoon of the 10th inst. at Stafford House, in aid of the Maternity Charity and District Nurses' Home, Plaistow, E. It was hoped that the proceeds would amount to about £250.

MR. E. S. WILLARD will close his American tour in Montreal on May 30, and will sail for Liverpool the next day on the Allan Line steamer Ionian. The eminent actor will be accompanied by the English contingent of his company, which includes Mr. Frank Dyall, Mr. W. Sauter, Miss Mabel Dubois, Mr. Ivan Simpson, Miss Ruth Barry, Mr. J. W. Laurence, Mr. W. Edmunds, and Mr. H. Cane. This has been a remarkably successful season with Mr. Willard, the best, in fact, for several years. He has had particularly good results with The Man Who Was, his Austin Limmason having produced the greatest effect of anything in his répertoire since his original season with Cyrus Blenkarn.

MR. WILLARD, too, has had a very marked success, both financially and artistically, with his performance of The Fool's Revenge, but the tax upon his voice has been much greater than was anticipated, and in self-defence he feels compelled to put aside the work for the present. The popularity of the play led Mr. Willard occasionally to put it in his bill three or four times a week, with the result that his voice suffered an injury, from which he has only now thoroughly recovered. Mr. Willard's plans for the future have yet to be learned, but it is hoped that London playgoers, who have too long been deprived of the opportunity of witnessing the work of a popular favourite, will shortly be favoured with another glimpse of his sterling talents.

MR. H. CECIL BERYL has sent £2 5s. 3d. to the secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, being the result to date of a small tax imposed by Mr. Beryl upon professional admission to the Theatre Royal, Brighton.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY'S welcome reappearance at the West End will be made this evening at the Imperial Theatre, when he will assume the rôle of Brian O'Carroll, the hero of the new comedy, in four acts, entitled Boy O'Carroll, by B. M. Dix and E. G. Sutherland. Mr. Harvey will be supported by Miss N. de Silva and Miss Kate Rorke, and by Messrs. C. J. Cameron, Thalberg Corbett, Albert E. Rayner, George Cooke, Leonard Craske, Reeve Denbigh, P. Hewland, and Hargraves, and Misses Maud Rivers, Grace Hampton, Bessie Elder, and M. Fabian.

"THE SWARN" is the title of the monologue by Maeterlinck, translated by Mr. Sutro, which Miss Rosina Filippi will give at the Elizabethan Fair and Fête in Lincoln's Inn grounds on May 23 to 25. The incidental and accompanying music has been written by Mr. Hubert Barth. Miss Vane Featherstone will be seen in a monologue, entitled Ninette, which has been specially written for her by Mr. John Cutler, K.C., one of the Masters of the Bench of Lincoln's Inn. The organizers are working on novel lines, and the fact that all "fancy prices" are strictly forbidden should take many bargain-hunters to Lincoln's Inn. The committee have drawn up stern rules for the aid of stall-holders, and among the most worthy of these is that "no goods shall be carried about the Fair for sale on any pretence whatever." Apart from the attractions on the stalls and the entertainments in the theatres, there will be many free entertainments.

MR. LEWIS WALLER, who concluded on Saturday night his active management of the Imperial Theatre, was presented with a silver flask by the members of the company and the staff. The feature of the presentation was that every subscriber had contributed the same amount towards the testimonial, which was given in acknowledgment of the esteem and affection in which the popular actor is held.

THE Ellen Terry festival at Drury Lane on June 12 is attaining phenomenal proportions. In addition to the attractions already referred to the programme will be embellished by a Christy Minstrel show, similar to that which used to be such a popular feature of London entertainments. Mr. Seymour Hicks will be the interlocutor, and the semi-circle will be composed of eminent comedians, including Messrs. Willie Edouin, Johnny Danvers, Arthur Roberts, Edmund Payne, Arthur Williams, Harry Fragson, George Grossmith, jun., G. P. Huntley, Farren Soutar, Huntley Wright, Louis Bradfield, Harry Grattan, Fred Wright, and George Graves.

ORCHESTRAL selections, consisting of the overture from Becket, by Sir Charles V. Stanford; the overture from Ravenswood, by Sir A. Mackenzie; the overture from King Lear, by Meredith Ball; and dances from Henry VIII., by Sir Edward German, conducted by the various composers, will be a memorable feature of the occasion. In the course of the evening there will be a reception scene, opened in a few words by Lady Bancroft, in which all the leading actors and actresses who are not otherwise taking part in the performance will be received by Miss Terry on the stage.

THE banquet in honour of Miss Terry will take place at the Hotel Cecil on Sunday, June 17, when an art souvenir of the occasion will be presented to everyone present. An announcement will be made at the banquet as to the sum which has been subscribed to the "Ellen Terry Jubilee Fund," and also as to the form which it is proposed that the presentation should take.

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE has decided to prolong her visit to America until the end of May, and will, therefore, be unable to produce The Labyrinth in London this season, as she had anticipated doing. Miss Nethersole's series of performances in Paris will begin on June 7, when she will appear in six or seven plays of her répertoire, including The Second Mrs. Tanqueray, Sapho, Carmen, Magda, and Camille. The theatre at which Miss Nethersole will make her Parisian début is not yet decided upon.

MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL has finally selected Wednesday next for her production at the Criterion of The Whirlwind, the cast of which has already been given. The Whirlwind will be preceded by the first act of Mr. W. L. Courtney's Undine, in which Mrs. Campbell will also appear, in association with Mr. Julian Royce, Mr. C. B. Vaughan, Mr. A. G. Poulton, and Miss Louie Emery.

THE success achieved in the country by Geo. R. Sims' play For Life—and After was fully confirmed by the reception accorded it on Monday night at Fulham. Great enthusiasm was manifested by the audience, especially at the end of the third act, when there were no less than seven "calls." The performance, which went without a hitch, was punctuated throughout by hearty applause and laughter. Mr. Hardie and Miss Von Leer are to be felicitated upon having secured a property which bids fair to rival even the success of their famous Two Little Vagabonds. Three companies, by the way, will again tour with the latter play in the autumn.

MR. J. B. MULHOLLAND has arranged with MRS. BROWN-POTTER for the first production of a new play, entitled Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, at the King's Theatre next week. This is described as "a romance in four acts," founded on certain episodes in the early life of that ill-fated Queen, written by Reginald Kennedy-Cox, whose play, The Chetwynd Affair, was produced at the Royalty last year. The music has been specially composed for the production by Herbert Smith, whose music for Du Barri at the Savoy Theatre was warmly eulogised, and the song sung by Rizzio in Act 3 is believed to be an original melody composed by himself. The action of the play embraces the period from 1561 to 1567. The scenic production will be on the most elaborate scale, and the première at the King's promises to be an extremely interesting occasion.

MRS. BROWN-POTTER will again be seen in the rôle of the unfortunate Mary Stuart, and will be supported by Messrs. Edward Sorley, Alec Frazer, Godfrey Tearle, George Ide, Frank Deane, Edmund Baker, Robert Alliston, C. Croker-King, John Cabourn, Charles Payne, William Wynne, and Harold Carfax, and Misses Vera Carfax, Thalma Archer, Dora Maitland, Kate Worth, Lilian Tweed, and Sara de Groot. Mrs. Brown-Potter's visit is for one week only, with a matinée on Thursday.

"COLONEL NEWCOME," the adaptation from Thackeray by Mr. Michael Morton, is to be produced at His Majesty's on Tuesday, 29th inst. The cast is a long one, and, besides Mr. and Mrs. Tree, will include Miss Marion Terry, Messrs. Basil Gill, Norman Forbes, Lyn Harding, S. Hubert Harben, J. Fisher White, Sydney Brough, S. Yates Southgate, James Hearn, E. Egerton Hine, Eric Warwick, Robert Atkins, W. H. Day, David Powell, Robert Farquharson, L. Race Dunrobin, Reginald Owen, E. Ouston, Master Herbert Browne, and Misses Lilian Braithwaite, Bateman (Mrs. Crowe), Marie Lohr, Helen Robertson, Hilda Moore, and Mrs. E. H. Brooke.

AT Bow-street Police Court on Tuesday, William Cecil Watson, described as an elocutionist, was charged, on remand, before Mr. Marsham, with obtaining money by false pretences in connection with the Northern Dramatic Touring Syndicate, Limited, Chancery-lane. It was alleged that the prisoner accepted fees from many persons who were desirous of going on the stage, and failed to keep his promise to find them engagements at various theatres he was said to have specified at the time the money was parted with. Mr. W. W. Kelly stated that he was the sole owner of the copyright of a drama called A Royal Divorce, and he had never given the Northern Dramatic Touring Syndicate permission to produce it. In cross-examination, the witness said the play had been produced without his permission.

MR. CECIL RALEIGH, who also gave evidence, said he was the author and owner of The Great Ruby and Hearts are Trumps. He had never given the Northern Dramatic Touring Syndicate permission to place those plays on their notepaper. He had never heard of his plays being pirated, and he thought there was very little pirating done in the theatrical profession. Detective-Inspector Dew gave evidence as to letters, &c., found by him at the office of the syndicate, and said there was little or no evidence of a genuine business having been carried on. The prisoner, who reserved his defence, was committed for trial. Bail was fixed at two sureties in £250 each and the prisoner in £500.

A DECISION of importance to theatrical managers was given at the Salford County Court on the 11th inst., when Jesse Bradburn and his wife, of that town, sued the Regent Theatre and Assembly Rooms, Ltd., for £75 damages for personal injuries sustained by the female plaintiff. The latter said that she went to the afternoon performance at the Regent Theatre on Dec. 5. When she entered the gallery she was told to go to the other side, where there was sitting room. The lights had been turned down, the performance being in progress, and in the darkness she fell down four steps, with the result that her ankle was broken. She said there was no light at all near the place.

IT was stated on behalf of the defendants that there was ample lighting from two windows, and it was urged that no negligence on the part of the defendants had been proved. People entering a place which must at times be in darkness ought, if the lights were down, to wait until they were turned up, he said. Judge Parry said he thought the mishap was due to Mrs. Bradburn's carelessness. It seemed to him she ought to have waited for the lights being turned up. If she moved about in the darkness she did so at her own risk. His Honour accordingly found for the defendants, who made no application for costs.

MR. WILLIAM F. OWEN, an actor of English birth, who was associated with the late Augustin Daly's enterprises for many years, and often appeared with Miss Ada Rehan, died in New York on the 4th inst., of Bright's disease. Mr. Owen was one of the best-known of the "old-time" actors, his Toby Belch in Twelfth Night, Sir Anthony Absolute in The Rivals, and Touchstone in As You Like It being highly artistic portrayals.

ROYALTY has been busy among the theatres recently. The King, the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck, and Prince Francis of Teck were present at the performance of The Princess and the Vagabond and The Barber of Bagdad at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, on the 11th inst. On the following evening His Majesty the King visited the performance of Das Rheingold. The Prince and Princess of Wales and suite were present at the Aldwych Theatre on Saturday to witness The Beauty of Bath; on the same evening Prince Christian, the Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, and suite saw His House in Order at the St. James's Theatre; and also on Saturday evening Princess Christian, Princess Victoria, Princess Louise Augusta of Schleswig-Holstein, and Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck honoured the first performance of The Shulamite at the Savoy.

ON Monday the Prince and Princess of Wales were present at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, and witnessed the performance of A Girl on the Stage; Wednesday evening saw Princess Henry of Battenberg and Princess Ena at the performance of The Belle of Mayfair at the Vaudeville; on the same evening Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck were present at the performance of Siegfried at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden; and on Thursday the King and the Prince and Princess of Wales listened to La Bohème at Covent Garden.

MISS EDITH COLE, who was playing at the Coronet Theatre this week with her usual success in A Royal Divorce, takes the troubles of the Empress Josephine as much to heart as she did on the first night of playing the part. She rarely leaves the stage without tears in her eyes, and yet it is comedy, even more than tragedy, that makes the strongest appeal to her as an actress. She is fond of serious books, long rambles in the country, quiet days, and lively parts. After playing at the Camden Theatre next week A Royal Divorce company goes to Ireland. Mr. Frank Lister is one of the best Napoleons with whom Miss Cole has played. Her long list of Emperors includes Mr. Murray Carson and Mr. Julius Knight.

MR. WALTER SLAUGHTER is taking drastic steps towards the suppression of illicit trading in music. Acting on legal advice, Mr. Slaughter, on Tuesday afternoon, in Upper-street, Islington, seized a couple of dozen copies of his melodies that were being offered for sale and tore them up. The "pirate" was profuse in abuse, but in view of Mr. Slaughter's physical proportions remained only a passive resister.

JUSTLY indignant, Mr. Slaughter said to an interviewer: "I have scarcely received a penny in royalties during the past two years, and my blood boiled when I saw the most successful numbers of my music now being played at the Coliseum Revue selling like hot cakes at a penny a copy. My solicitors are of opinion that members of the public may help themselves to copies of pirated music free of charge, and without incurring legal responsibility. If the public will do this the rout—yes, slaughter if you will—of the pirates will be complete." The number of copies of pirated music seized by the Musical Publishers' Association since 1902, it is stated, has amounted to no less than six millions. The ranks of the pirates are estimated at 3,000 and the summonses made annually at 700.

MR. F. R. BENSON'S C company concluded a highly successful spring tour at St. Albans on Saturday last. The next tour will begin on August Bank Holiday, Cromer, Bridlington, Whitby, and other seaside places being visited in turn.

MISS EMILY SHERIDAN will produce at the Empire Theatre, Oldham, on June 4, and tour through the principal provincial towns a new French revolutionary play, called A Prince of the People. She has secured the services of Mr. F. Rawson Buckley, who will star as Victor Lafond. Mr. Buckley, who has been touring for over two years as Horace Parker, in A Message from Mars, has just completed a short tour as John Storm in The Christian. The part of Victor is a very fine one, written somewhat on Claude Melnotte lines. Mr. William H. Broughton is also in the cast.

THE Charles Mortimer prize for composition at the Royal Academy of Music has been awarded to Susan Spain-Dunk, a native of Folkestone. The adjudicators were Messrs. G. Jacobi, Hamilton Robinson, and Lionel Tertis. The Louisa Hopkins prize for pianoforte playing was gained by Hilda Rekas, a native of West Horsley, Surrey, Myra Hess being highly commended. The examiners were Messrs. Ernest Fowles and Harold Macpherson, and Miss Lily West. The Sterndale Bennett scholarship (all branches of music) fell to Francis Hutchens, a native of Leeston, New Zealand. The adjudicators were Messrs. Josef Bláha, Septimus Webbe, and F. Corder.

THE Thalberg scholarship (pianoforte playing) has been awarded to Dorothy A. Chilton Griffin, a native of London. The examiners were Messrs. Sydney Blakiston, Alfred E. Izard, and Thomas B. Knott. The Barepa-Rosa scholarship (female vocalists) has been secured by Harriett Amelia Franklin, a native of London, Esther E. Unwin being highly commended, and Winifred Lowe, Eva M. Colton, and Martha A. Rowlands Jones all being commended. The examiners were Messrs. Frederic King, Arthur Thompson, and William Shakespeare.

MESSRS. ALFRED NORTHWAY AND W. V. GARROD'S tour of The Prodigal Parson is proving so successful that they have decided to continue it uninterruptedly throughout the summer. The bookings embrace all the principal drama theatres, and extend as far as eighteen months ahead. The play has been revised and brought up to date since last toured, many new features being added.

MISS LYDIA DONOVAN'S numerous friends will be pleased to hear that her arm is so much better that she is now able to fulfil her engagements. She is at present appearing as Grace in Her One Great Sin, which will be at the Grand Theatre, Islington, next week.

THE Royal Carl Rosa Company, which is the oldest and one of the best operatic companies in this country, has just finished the most successful tour it has ever had, meeting with a most cordial reception in all parts of the country. Mr. Walter Van Noorden, the manager, is of opinion that the most enthusiastic musical audiences are to be found in Manchester, Bristol, and Glasgow. He considers, however, that Londoners are beginning to appreciate high-class opera far more than they have ever done before, but this is due to the fact that the operas are now being presented in all the full splendour they deserve. From a ballot taken throughout the country, lovers of music seem to greatly appreciate Faust and Tannhäuser, and there is a decided liking for Fidelio, which the Carl Rosa Company revived with so much success.

THAT the company were received so cordially is not to be wondered at when they were able to present such distinguishd artists as Miss Hanna Mara (Royal Opera, Breslau), Miss Doris Woodall (Court Opera House, Mecklenburg-Strelitz), Miss Elizabeth Burgess, Miss Grace Nicholl, Miss Anna Hope, Miss Ina Hill, Herr Julius Walther, Mr. Arthur Winckworth, Mr. Charles Victor, Mr. Dillon Shallard, and Mr. E. Davies. Much of the hard work of such ambitious productions devolves upon the conductors, Messrs. Walter Van Noorden and Eugene Goossens. In the tour were included Cavalleria Rusticana, Pagliacci, Lohengrin, Tannhäuser, and all the finest works. Mr. Ernest C. Gittins, the acting-manager, is likewise a musician and composer.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES ESDALE had a providential escape from being killed in a motor accident last week. They were driving through Silverhill, Robertsbridge, on the 10th inst. when the chauffeur swerved aside to allow a cyclist to pass, but in recovering itself the car, which was going twelve or thirteen miles an hour, turned over on its side. Mr. and Mrs. Esdale were thrown out, the former sustaining three broken ribs and being so injured that he could not be moved, and had to spend the night at a neighbouring cottage. Mrs. Esdale received severe wounds on the head and face, but the chauffeur escaped with a severe shaking.

NOVEL circumstances surrounded a performance given at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on the 4th inst., for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers. The entertainment lasted from eleven o'clock in the morning until midnight, and more than 25,000 people tried to gain admission to the theatre, which holds considerably less than one-fifth of that number. But, during the afternoon the first comers were asked to vacate their seats and give those who were waiting outside an opportunity of enjoying part of the performance. Tickets for the benefit were honoured at a dozen other theatres in order to accommodate the "overflow." The proceeds amounted to about 35,000 dollars.

MR. H. G. DUDLEY BENNETT has arranged for a return visit of Mr. Edmund Tearle, supported by Miss Kate Clinton and a specially selected company, to the Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington, on Monday, opening with Macbeth, which will also be given on Wednesday. Othello will be played on Tuesday and at Thursday's matinée, and Friday evening The Merry Wives of Windsor will be staged. The Three Musketeers will figure in the programme for Thursday and Saturday evening, and on Saturday afternoon a performance, specially designed for scholars, will be given of Julius Cæsar.

THE usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held on Tuesday last, there being present Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Mr. A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Mesdames Carlotta Addison, Kate Bishop, Kate Phillips, and Saba Raleigh, Messrs. Cecil Barth, Clarence Blakiston, Burton Cooke, C. Hayden Coffin, Wm. Devereux, Arthur Holmes-Gore, Fewlass Llewellyn, Quinton McPherson, M. R. Morand, Walter Russell, Algernon Syms, Spencer Trevor, Frank Vernon, Fredk. Volpe, and Charles Cruikshanks (sec.).

THE secretary reported the result of the third bi-monthly meeting of the members, held on the previous Thursday. The secretary also reported the result of an arbitration which had been referred to the Joint Arbitration Board, the award having been published in favour of an artist as against a manager, and further that the amount awarded for damages and costs had been paid. The hon. solicitors reported progress in several matters. The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was received. George Fitzgerald and William Griffin were nominated for election. The Suggestion Book was considered, and an entry made.

MR. ARTHUR HOLMES-GORE, as a member of the Special Committee, reported that on May 11 the deputation of the Actors' Association (consisting of Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Clarence Blakiston, and himself) was received by the committee of the Professional Photographers' Association at the premises of the Royal Photographic Society, 66, Russell-square. The deputation was cordially and courteously received. Mr. Holmes-Gore, having explained the constitution of the Actors' Association, proceeded to read, with explanatory comments, the suggestions which the Special Committee had approved. The chairman, Mr. Bridge, Mr. Elliott, and Mr. Mackie joined in a discussion, which was replied to by Mr. Hayden Coffin, who elicited the information that none of the Rotary Company were members of that Association except a works manager at West Drayton. The deputation was assured that the suggestions, though presenting a novel aspect of the relations of photographer and actor, should have the earnest and careful consideration of that committee, and that they would endeavour to answer five queries which were left for their private discussion. The result of their conference they would communicate to the Actors' Association at a later date.

THE Finance and General Purposes Committee held a meeting last Tuesday, the chair being occupied by Mr. M. R. Morand, the other members present being Messrs. A. E. Drinkwater, Arthur Holmes-Gore, and Chas. Cruikshanks (sec.). The secretary received instructions in several matters of routine.

MR. STERLING MACKINLAY will give his twenty-fifth recital on Monday afternoon, May 21, at Bechstein Hall, under the patronage of the Duchess of Sutherland. Among those assisting will be his pupil, Miss Pauline Potter, late of Terry's Theatre: Miss Dorothy Bridson, the violinist who studied under Sevcik; and Miss Dorothy Wren, who will make her début at the concert. This young singer, while yet quite a child, was heard by Mr. Santley, who at once advised her to be trained for the musical profession. An interesting feature will be in the form of recitations by that talented young actress Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay, of St. James's Theatre. Mr. Sterling Mackinlay, we may recall, has written a book of reminiscences, which was published by Messrs. Hutchinson early in April under the title of "Antoinette Sterling and Other Celebrities."

THE numerous friends of Miss Rita Trekelle will be glad to learn that she has recovered from the severe operation for appendicitis which she underwent some few weeks ago, and is now recuperating at Bournemouth.

A REMINDER may be given of the Royal General Theatrical Fund Dinner, which is to be held in the Whitehall Rooms at the Hotel Metropole, on Thursday. The Bishop of Ripon will propose "The Drama," and Sir Squire Bancroft will reply. The Marquis of Granby, Mr. Comyns Carr, and Mr. Edward Terry will also speak.

MR. LEONARD PAGDEN, who is playing Col. Brinthorpe in Sunday, doubled that part with Arthur Brinthorpe at the Theatre Royal, Nottingham, on Wednesday night, at less than two hours' notice, the gentleman who plays the latter being called away suddenly on account of illness. Mr. Pagden was gracefully congratulated and thanked by the management at the conclusion of the performance.

"CASTLES IN SPAIN" is to give way to the French play season at the Royalty Theatre. The tuneful piece, which has proved abundantly successful at the pretty little house in Dean-street, will on Thursday be transferred to Terry's Theatre.

MME. JANE HADING is again to pay a visit to London this year with the members of her Paris company, and will begin a season of French plays at the Coronet Theatre on Monday, June 11. The programme for the first week will consist of Le Demi-Monde on Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday evenings; Le Maître de Forges on Wednesday afternoon and Friday evening; and La Chatelaine on Wednesday and Thursday evenings and at the Saturday matinée.

MESSRS. VEDRENNE AND BARKER will give a flying matinée of Captain Brassbound's Conversion at Brighton on Thursday, with Miss Ellen Terry and the company from the Court Theatre. On that evening Miss Ellen Terry will not play at the Court Theatre, and the part of Lady Cecily Waynflete will be sustained by Miss Madge McIntosh.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM MACLAREN'S revival of the late Wilson Barrett's greatest creation, Claudian, which has had a most successful provincial tour, will be at the Dalston Theatre next week.

"THE LION AND THE MOUSE," the American play which involves the combination of English actors with those of the United States, is due at the Duke of York's on Tuesday. The cast will consist of Miss Louise Sydmeth, Mr. J. W. Macdonald, Miss Henrietta Cowen, Miss Helen Rous, Miss Elene Foster, Mr. Walter Allen, Mr. Frank Burbeck, Mr. William Postance, Miss Margaret Illington, Mr. Richard Bennett, Mr. Gilbert Hare, Mr. Arthur B. Murray, Mr. Harry Harwood, Miss Nanette Comstock, Miss Marguerite St. John, Mr. Edmund Breese, and Miss Atherton Hinton.

A SOCIETY for the suppression of the matinée hat has been formed in Paris by ladies, headed by the Countess Greffuhle. It took practical shape in a sale on Tuesday of small hats expressly made for the theatre, and so designed as not to obscure the view of those sitting behind the wearers. The exhibition was a great success, the proceeds of the sale being devoted to charity, and the Small Hat League has gained many adherents. Theatrical managers here ought to breathe a fervent prayer that the League may find its way to London!

THE new opera Petronella is announced for production at the Great Queen-street Theatre on Saturday next. Miss Marie Ault, who is cast for Dossama, has had a very busy time of late. As her existing contract with Mr. J. Leopold does not expire until to-night, she has had, during the past fortnight, to pay flying visits to London daily for rehearsals, her journey last week being from Woolwich, and this week from Tunbridge Wells, returning in time for the performance.

THE Shakespeare Commemoration at Stratford-on-Avon was concluded on Saturday night with a performance of A Midsummer Night's Dream in the Memorial Theatre. A crowded and enthusiastic audience assembled, and at the close a number of beautiful bouquets were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Benson and the leading members of the company. Mr. Flower, chairman of the Memorial Association, spoke of the gratifying success of these annual celebrations in Shakespeare's town, and said that from small beginnings, twenty-seven years ago, they had assumed not merely a national, but an international character. All Shakespeare's plays had been staged. The leading actor-managers and actresses in London had expressed a desire to co-operate in next year's celebration.

MR. BENSON, who was enthusiastically greeted, said it was a very happy moment for his wife and himself to have had the honour of being instrumental in putting the finishing touches on the second chapter of the history of the theatre. They accepted with great pride, pleasure, and gratitude the kind words, in behalf of themselves, the company, and those artists who had been good enough to help them, among them the daughter of a distinguished actress, who a few years ago was remembered as having produced plays there—Miss Wallis. He hoped the third chapter would be adorned with some capital letters which possibly they had not seen before, and still receive the help of that eloquent and silent voice, which enabled them to realise the object of the Festival.

THE popular actor dwelt eloquently upon the inspiring spirit of Shakespeare, which, he said, was always speaking in that place, but the force that helped very materially to make the plays a success was represented by their friends in front. He did not think they could possibly realise how much the sympathy, the encouragement, the kindness of audiences were helping the work that had been achieved on that stage. No one could guess what the silent voice of a crowd was to persons like themselves, when across the footlights came a message of hope and encouragement. It was the most eloquent message ears could ever listen to.

MR. MILTON ROSMER, who has been engaged by Mr. Fred Warden for the production of Romeo and Juliet at the Theatre Royal, Belfast, has made a great success in the part of Romeo, his performance being described as a "revelation of the love and tragedy of Romeo."

MR. KLAW, one of the leading lights of the American "trust," is now in London, and declares managers where he came from used to complain of bad business until they "combined and established an economic and sensible system for producing plays and booking attractions for the whole country. The saving is enormous, and profits can now be made every year." Mr. Klaw is of opinion that the "star" system is better, for America at least, than the actor-manager system, and as he thinks that America possesses a greater number of actresses who can draw audiences than we do, he naturally favours the method obtaining in America, "because," he says, "it gives the actress an equal chance with the actor."

LOOKING towards the future, Mr. Klaw expressed the conviction that in the supply of plays, serious and light, American authors are coming on quickly. "I believe," he added, "that before very long England will take more plays from America than America will take from England. Our people are young and full of ideas, and if they send good plays here your managers won't refuse them."

MR. FRANK GRANS, we are informed, will produce at the Grand Theatre, Fulham, on Monday, May 28, a new farcical comedy, entitled The Other Man's Business, with Mr. G. W. Anson and Miss Lilian Hubbard in the cast. A play called The Other Man's Business, also with Mr. Anson in the cast, was given its London production at the Metropole Theatre, Camberwell, in the autumn of 1900.

MR. ROBERT GANTHONY, who has provided so many bright evenings by his clever humorous recitals, gave an entertainment at the Freemasons' Hall, Richmond, on Wednesday, when a full and fashionable audience thoroughly enjoyed the clever items submitted. Mr. Ganthony was as amusing as ever in new and old selections, and Miss Nellie Ganthony rendered musical sketches in her own inimitable way. The programme also included Miss Violet Cowles, pianist and vocalist.

MR. FRANK LINDO, who will terminate his successful spring tour of Home, Sweet Home at the Theatre Royal, Stratford, Whit-week, has arranged with the directors of the Victoria Theatre, Manchester, to run a stock season there, opening on June 18. His répertoire will consist of such plays as The Corsican Brothers, The Fool's Revenge, David Garrick, &c., and he will also produce, on an elaborate scale, The Merchant of Venice, playing Shylock to the Portia of Miss Marion Wakeford.

MISS MARY MOORE will appear at the Coronet Theatre during the week of June 4, playing her original part in Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace. The cast will also include Miss Marie Illington, in her original part, and Mr. Yorke Stephens. After a week at the Camden Theatre the piece will be sent on tour under the direction of Mr. Thomas McKenzie.

MISS HELEN MAR, the American story-teller, whose piquant Yankee yarns have won her wide celebrity in this city, will give her annual dramatic and musical recital at Steinway Hall on Monday afternoon. Miss Mary Moore, Miss Edna May, and Miss Marie Dainton are included in the programme, and many other well-known artists are announced to appear.

MR. HARRY YORKE, by arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman, will present on Monday next, at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, his principal company, including Mr. Henry Renouf, in Sherlock Holmes. As is customary with Mr. Yorke's productions, no expense has been spared to ensure a first-class representation of this remarkably fascinating play. The company are booked to shortly appear at the Grand, Leeds, the Grand, Hull, and the Theatre Royal, Bradford, and will certainly command large audiences in these towns.

MR. IVAN BERLYN, whose successful impersonations of Quilp and Fagin will be pleasantly remembered, has, according to general report, presented a worthy addition to his Dickensian studies in Uriah Heep, which he is playing for a few weeks with Mr. Charles Cartwright's David Peggorty company.

MR. NORMAN V. NORMAN gave a special performance of David Garrick at Eastbourne last week, the house being filled to its utmost capacity. There was a scene of great enthusiasm, the curtain being raised six times at the end of the famous drunken scene. This was the twelfth visit paid by Mr. Norman to Eastbourne with this play.

MR. CHARLES ADESON has been engaged by Mr. Alexander Loftus to play Bertie White in the tour of The New Barmaid, to which new songs are being added. Mr. Adeson will make his first appearance in the part on Monday evening at the Theatre Royal, Hull, in which town he is a great favourite. Miss Violet Osmund is back from Monte Carlo, and is once more playing her old part of the Lady Journalist in the same piece, which is going as successful as ever.

"THE SHULAMITE."

A Play, in Three Acts (for the first time), by Claude Askew and Edward Knoblauch Produced at the Comedy Theatre, on Saturday, May 12.

Simeon Krillet .....MR. NORMAN MCKINNEL
Robert Waring .....MR. HENRY AINLEY
Jan Vanderberg .....MR. EUGENE MAYEUR
Tante Anna Vanderberg ....MISS ELSIE CHESTER
Memke .....MISS BERYL MERCER
Deborah Krillet .....MISS LENA ASHWELL

M. Hilaire Belloc, in a recent article in the Independent Review, describes the effect of the Desert on its inhabitants; and, somehow, one fancies that the South African veldt has a spirit which commands its denizens, which evokes primitive passions and engenders thoughts stern and deep, and prompts actions wild and tragic. One can almost feel the power of the thunderous heat in the second act of The Shulamite, and the awesome influence of the vast plain, and the cloudless, pitiless sky. The story is morbid, feverish, overstrung. Messrs. Claude Askew and Edward Knoblauch have added a new character-life to drama—the "dour," Presbyterian-like Boer, a true Old Testament personage, consistently cruel to his Kaffirs, consistently tyrannical over the wife he loves in his way, and referring every difficulty of principle and conduct to "the Book." Simeon Krillet's second wife is so beautiful that he applies to her the descriptions given by Solomon in his "Song" of the Shulamite. According to Krillet's doctrine, the wife was made to obey the husband; and, acting up to his principle, he punishes disobedience in her by flogging "till the blood comes." In order to spare herself the degradation of a beating which he is about to inflict on her for reading Shakespeare, Deborah tells Krillet that she is enceinte; and the elderly husband is in raptures at the unexpected tidings, and exults in his prospective fatherhood. Deborah grows to hate her tyrant, and to love Robert Waring, a young Englishman who is learning farming from Simeon. Waring is a married man, having left behind him in London a wife who is a hopeless drunkard. Then we have the struggle of the wretched pair against their fate. Waring almost conquers his; he departs from the place of temptation, only to be driven back to it by a lightning-stroke which kills one of the horses in his waggon. He carelessly leaves behind him a diary in which he has set down all his passion for Deborah; and this book falls into the hands of Krillet, who, believing the worst, bids Deborah prepare for death. Waring returns, and in self-defence shoots the Boer, whose body is carried by Waring and Deborah to the place where the horse was killed, so that it may appear that the farmer was struck dead by lightning.

Krillet is buried, and the manner of his death is unsuspected. But the lovers are none the less miserable. Waring learns that his wife is dying, and determines to return to England. Frantic with jealousy, and mad at the thought of losing him, Deborah betrays to the dead man's sister the manner of his death; and then, with a revulsion of impulse, bribes the woman to silence with all Krillet's hoard. Tante Anna, however, will only consent to spare Waring on condition that Deborah swears on the Bible to part from him for ever; and so, when the man's good resolutions at last break down, and, with passionate energy, he swears to stay and live with Deborah, he is met by her unalterable refusal, and departs, leaving her, with her hand on the Bible, praying for strength to keep her oath.

The Shulamite is one of those plays that hold the audience in a pincer-like grip, that wring the heart and strain the nerves so that they find relief in frantic applause at each descent of the curtain. In a piece of this kind Miss Lena Ashwell is at her best; and few, if any, actresses on the English stage could have so well rendered the indignant revolt, the mad passion, and the intense agony of the unfortunate Deborah Krillet. We hardly know in which Miss Ashwell was the finer; in the stern and terrible stress at the conclusion of the second act, or in the third, when the nerves of the wretched woman are worn out by all she has undergone, and, mastered by her impulses, she loses all self-control. Miss Ashwell's creation of the character, as a whole, was superb; and the way in which the power of her performance grew and culminated was as admirable as the sustained and collected intensity of the conception. Mr. Norman McKinnel gave a grandly simple and nobly rugged impersonation of the stern, cruel, deeply serious Boer, Simeon Krillet, the gloomy serenity of the character being only broken by the one powerful outburst when Krillet discovers, as he thinks, his wife's infidelity. Here Mr. McKinnel was deeply impressive, and acted with tremendous fervour and intensity. Mr. Henry Ainley gave Robert Waring just the needed touch of ironic bitterness, and showed the quick, sensitive nature of the Englishman very cleverly. In the scenes of passion in the last act he quite rose to the occasion, and took full advantage of all his opportunities. It was a difficult part to play, and Mr. Ainley has added to his reputation by the way in which he rendered it. He might, perhaps, reconsider his make-up. Mr. Eugene Mayeur enacted Jan Vanderberg in a homely, sympathetic style that was quite appropriate; and Miss Elsie Chester put a surprising amount of spirit and energy into her rendering of the rôle of Tante Anna Vanderberg, her work in the scene between the two women in the last act being especially praiseworthy. Miss Beryl Mercer contributed a neat and natural rendering of the Kaffir girl, Memke. Mr. Clement Barnes' scenery was just what was required to suggest the veldt environment, and Mr. Edward Sass's production of the play ensured the smoothness of the performance in every detail. The Shulamite was received with the most enthusiastic expressions of approval, and loud applause demonstrated the intense delight of the audience.

"THE LONELY MILLIONAIRES."

A Comedy, in Three Acts, by Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, Produced at the Adelphi Theatre, on Tuesday, May 15.

Thomas Frankland .....MR. OSCAR ASCHE
Christina .....MISS LILY BRAYTON
Miss Moreton .....MISS FRANCES WETHERALL
Signor Luigi Peretta ..MR. HERBERT GRIMWOOD
Lady Medwin .....MISS LOTTIE VENNE
Dr. Macpherson .....MR. ALFRED BRYDONE
Joseph Lipscombe .....MR. CHARLES ROCK
Lord Frederick Herewid..MR. W. GAYER MACKAY
Sir Charles Ducarel, Bart...MR. MATHESON LANG
Maria .....MISS ANNIE SCHLETTER

The production of The Lonely Millionaires at the Adelphi Theatre, on Tuesday evening, laboured under the disadvantage that the actors were far too good for the play. They were all, as they write of racehorses, "going well within themselves," and the representatives of the leading characters were never "fully extended." We are by no means inclined to accept the loud disapproval of a portion of those present on Tuesday evening as a reliable prophecy of the fate of Mrs. Henry de la Pasture's piece. The paying public is much less sophisticated than the first-nighters; and, with all its simplicities and conventionalities, we should not be surprised to see The Lonely Millionaires "catch on." For, despite its naïveté and the demands it makes upon the indulgence of an intellectual audience, it never "drags." The action is continuous, and the comedy, without being brilliant, passably amusing. That the piece does not pretend to depth or realism will be rather a recommendation of it to many playgoers.

The "millionaires" of the title are Thomas Frankland—a widower and retired cotton-spinner—and Sir Charles Ducarel, who has made a large fortune in Buenos Ayres. Cleddon, the estate owned by Frankland, was formerly the property of the baronet, who returns from South America and takes, incognito, the position of Frankland's private secretary in order to be near Lady Medwin, a widow of twenty-three with whom Sir Charles was in love before her marriage with Sir George Medwin. Her ladyship, who is chaperone to Frankland's daughter Christina, is a cool and sedate personage, the antipodes in character of Sir Charles, who is very violent and impulsive. Finding his old love indifferent to him, the baronet becomes enamoured of Christina, a stalwart, self-willed young minx, who fancies herself in love with her drawing-master, an Italian scamp named Peretta. Frankland is far from being a happy man. His manners are rough and his accent uneducated, and he finds himself isolated by his wealth, and surrounded by sycophants and sinecurists. He cannot govern his daughter, who is absurd enough to ask him to give her Peretta as a husband for a birthday present. The millionaire indignantly refuses, and proceeds to buy the drawing-master off with £5000, a consideration for which Peretta promises to leave the country, and signs a paper to that effect. Frankland shows the document to Christina with the object of disgusting her with her foolish choice; but the girl persists in believing in her lover, follows him on his departure, and calls at his garret in London, where she is confronted by Mrs. Peretta, who is the mother of a fine family. Christina is hidden behind an easel when Peretta dashes in with the £5000 cheque and revels in anticipations of future happiness. His raptures are cut short by Christina snatching the cheque from him and tearing it up; and Sir Charles, who has followed the young lady in a special train, protects her from Peretta's threatened violence, and takes her home to her father. The end is easily foreseen. The supposed secretary declares his love; but Christina refuses to marry him unless he will promise not to touch any of her father's money, a vow which the rich man from Buenos Ayres is, of course, quite ready to take. Sir Charles's identity is made known, and Frankland, after accepting him as a son-in-law, pairs off with Lady Medwin.

The superiority of the principals to their parts lent an agreeable ease to their performances, Mr. Oscar Asche giving full weight to Thomas Frankland's solid gravity and good-natured repose, and putting plenty of feeling into his depiction of the millionaire's distress under the infliction of his daughter's vagaries. The quiet humour of Mr. Asche's interpretation was not its least merit, and certainly the part, such as it was, could not have been better played. Miss Lily Brayton developed with skill and success the self-willed side of Christina's character, the resolute obstinacy of the young lady being very vigorously emphasised. It seems improbable that a young person capable of appreciating the merit of the baronet could have been beguiled by the "bounder," but in the matter of men there is no accounting for feminine tastes, and Signor Luigi Peretta's plausibility was certainly considerable. The part was well played by Mr. Herbert Grimwood, who elaborated very effectively the suave eloquence and florid gestures of the oily Italian rascal. His acting in the scene of negotiation with Frankland was very clever indeed. Miss Lottie Venne embodied Lady Medwin with her wonted demureness and drollery, and made the most of her moderate opportunities; and Mr. Alfred Brydone contributed a clever and characteristic impersonation of the sententious Scotch physician, Dr. Macpherson. Mr. Charles Rock's butler was a very diverting study, the make-up being especially excellent; and Mr. W. Gayer Mackay's Lord Frederick Herewid was an up-to-date comedy creation of real artistic merit. Mr. Matheson Lang treated his rôle of Sir Charles Ducarel with a quiet power that told immensely, and gave an admirably-balanced and always active and energetic rendering of the part, handling it in a manly, straightforward style that carried conviction. A particularly clever embodiment of the passionate and jealous Maria was furnished by Miss Annie Schletter, who played the Italian wife in just the ornate, intense, and fervent style which was appropriate. Mr. Joseph Harker was responsible for the very handsome library set which was twice shown in the course of the evening; and Mr. Oscar Asche's superintendence of the production ensured for it all the requisite smoothness and spirit. The mixed reception which was given to The Lonely Millionaires was certainly caused by the high anticipations raised by recent productions at the Adelphi. Mr. Otho Stuart and Mr. Asche have taught their patrons to expect an entertainment a great deal less conventional and more intellectual than the present attraction, which is nevertheless a good piece of its class, well constructed, ably written, and containing some very pleasant scenes of comedy.

Deep lies the love of melodrama in the human breast. You may improve the Adelphi and close the Princess's, but the longing for strong situations, alarms and excursions, and all the stock-in-trade of the clever craftsman well-practised in the art of excitement will come flying back though driven out with the oft-quoted Horatian fork. When we get our melodrama in condensed form, with all the accessories of modern civilisation, it is certain to give satisfaction. Messrs. E. W. Hornung and Eugene W. Presbrey have concocted an entertainment of thrilling interest, the leading character of which possesses all the romantic glamour which attaches to the abnormal, the extraordinary, and the distinguished. The hero of Captain Swift—and Raffles belongs to the same genre—is a simple ex-bushranger masquerading as a blameless citizen; but A. J. Raffles, the amateur cracksman, is—of all things!—a "champion" cricketer who suffers from kleptomania. When this "interesting burglar" goes a-burgling he does so not for lucre chiefly, but pour l'amour de l'art. If he steals a famous gold cup from the British Museum he sends it to Windsor Castle as a Jubilee gift. Still, he reserves sufficient of his spoils for his personal wants, on the principle that the artist must live. His cricketing prowess admits him to the best society, and he is an honoured guest at Milchester Abbey, the country house of the Earl of Amersteth, where the lovely Miss Gwendoline Conran falls in love with him, much to the chagrin of Raffles's friend, Harry Manders, who is hopelessly enamoured of the young lady. A professional burglar, Crawshay, now crosses the path of the amateur. Crawshay, in collusion with Marie, Lady Amersteth's maid, plans to rob her ladyship of her splendid diamond necklace; but when the maid brings the jewels down into the hall of Milchester Abbey Raffles snatches them from her hand and grapples with Crawshay, who is given into custody, but escapes from the rustic constable and is again at large. Curtis Bedford, a detective who is trying to discover and capture the mysterious "amateur cracksman," is misled into believing that a certain Viscount Crowley is the thief of the necklace, and Mrs. Vidal, a grass-widow with an unreasoning passion for Raffles, and who is aware of his identity, will not now betray him. To help Manders to pay a debt of honour, Raffles bets Bedford that he will not find the diamond necklace within twenty-four hours. In the third act Crawshay turns up at Raffles's chambers in the Albany and claims a share in the "swag." The house is surrounded by Bedford's myrmidons; and, after various exciting incidents, Raffles assists his professional rival to escape by a window, tying himself up and taking chloroform, so that when the police break in he appears to have been Crawshay's victim. Bedford does not succeed in finding the necklace within the given time; but Mrs. Vidal, whose love is scorned by Raffles, agrees to "give him away," and he has to admit his guilt, restore the gems, and disillusionise Gwendoline. He gets off en route for Australia in an ingenious manner, going into an inner room, firing off a pistol in order to make believe that he has committed suicide, and, as the police burst into the room, escaping through a "practicable" grandfather's clock which stands against the wall of the outer chamber and has been supplied with a movable back to meet such an emergency.

Extravagant as this plot may read in type, it has quite a different effect when enacted by such a capital all-round company as that which Mr. Charles Frohman has assembled at the Comedy. Mr. Gerald Du Maurier, with his sharply-cut features and firm, decisive style, is just the artist to represent the keen and polished amateur burglar and champion cricketer; and the serious way in which he takes his task does much to carry a conviction which the ultra-romantic conception of the character is inclined to endanger. Mr. Dion Boucicault as the not too clever detective who is pitted against the cool and crafty "cracksman" acts with his usual nice sense of proportion and easy, fluent emphasis. Mr. Frederick Volpe as the Earl of Amersteth could hardly have been improved upon, so full was his reading of the necessary solid dignity and British bonhomie and sturdiness. Mr. Courtenay Foote hits off with a free hand the harmless young Viscount; and that always efficient and ever reliable actor, Mr. Graham Browne, does some excellent emotional acting as Harry Manders. Mr. Laurence Irving is exceptionally well adapted for the part of Crawshay, and depicts the coarse and brutal "professional" with remarkable earnestness, energy, and power. Mr. Horton Cooper contributes a well-defined character-sketch as Goldby, and Mr. James Franklin is an irreproachable butler of the "aristocratic-household" order. Miss Hilda Thorpe does valuable and conscientious work as Lady Melrose, the hauteur and repose of the personage being well indicated; and Miss Lettice Fairfax's bright and pleasant style and "pretty ways" make her a delightful exponent of the character of Lady Ethel. Miss Jessie Bateman's depiction of the varied emotions experienced by the much-troubled Gwendoline Conran is very expressive, her facial play at certain points being commendably subtle and various; and Miss Saran Brooke plays Mrs. Vidal with all the necessary polish, a charming individuality, and a complete absence of exaggeration. Miss Florence Sinclair's Marie has real merit, and with brief opportunities she contrives to make her mark very decidedly. Mr. Bruce Smith's Milchester Abbey set is admirably planned and built, and to Mr. Dion Boucicault's careful production of the piece the remarkable smartness with which the business was done may be attributed. Raffles is, indeed, mounted, dressed, acted, and stage-managed with praiseworthy care and skill. The piece got hold of the "house" at an early period of the evening, and at the end of the performance the audience gave the fullest proofs of their satisfaction with the entertainment.

There are few plays of Shakespeare which are so difficult to reconcile to modern theatrical taste as Othello, and it is a tremendous tribute to the power of Shakespeare that, in this drama of his, he compels contemporary admiration. To the twentieth-century playgoer, so informed and so urban, Othello's simplicity seems impossible. To a Northerner his violence, the effusiveness of his wrath, and even his picturesque eloquence are almost absurd. Accustomed as we are to associate aristocracy with the repression of emotion and strength with reserve, we can hardly admire the African exuberance, the overpowering, unbridled passion of the Moor. There is a good deal of truth in Mr. Bernard Shaw's remark that Shakespeare's plays suffer on account of the change that has taken place in the outlook on life since they were written; and, though most of us do not go as far as the author of Candida in considering jealousy "either an egotistical meanness or a specific mania," yet the convenience of the Divorce Court has a tendency to make marital revenge seem superfluous. Othello, ethically, is out of date; but it is so superb, constructionally and dramatically, that it "takes us by the collar" and forces us to be thrilled and interested in spite of our educations.

All that could be done to reconcile the play to a modern audience was done at the matinée at the Lyric on Thursday. It was really a treat to witness this revival, so artistic, so painstaking, and so excellent in every way all round. It speaks volumes for the amount of contemporary ability that such a cast for Othello could have been collected for the purpose of a few morning performances. Mr. Lewis Waller was an ideal representative of the Moor. His features were admirably suited to the part, and he played it with a large and gracious virility, a simple, resolute force, and a passionate vigour, which deserved the most enthusiastic praise. Every speech, every situation was treated with bold confidence and keen appreciation. There was nothing "stagey" about this Othello, and there was nothing feeble. Mr. Waller neither "ranted" nor posed, but, with sound judgment, allotted to every line and to his share in every scene the due amount of restraint or emphasis. Mr. H. B. Irving's Iago was a masterpiece of subtle characterisation—polished, acute, and incisive. The way in which every detail of the picture was worked in was wonderful, and the whole conception of the character proved the high intellectual calibre of the artist. One of the finest performances of the afternoon was Mr. Henry Neville's Brabantio. The old Venetian noble, so grandly indignant and so manly in his distress, was represented in a manner which can hardly be over-commended. Mr. Henry Ainley, who goes on improving with startling rapidity, was a capital Cassio, and showed very sound judgment in his treatment of the drunken scene—a severe test of a young actor's intelligence. Mr. A. E. George gave to Roderigo just the necessary touch and no more of comedy, and played the part effectively and discreetly; and Mr. S. A. Cookson showed real talent in his brief appearance as the Duke of Venice. Mr. Owen Roughwood as Montano, Mr. Frank Woolfe as Lodovico, and Mr. Tom Heselwood as Gratiano sustained those characters with irreproachable care and undeniable ability; and a word of praise is due to Mr. Shiel Barry for his clear distinctness of delivery as the Messenger. Miss Edith Wynne Matthison's Emilia had just the needed touch of rebelliousness and humour; and Miss Sarah Brooke's Bianca was delightfully easy and natural. Miss Evelyn Millard's Desdemona was a delicate and noble depiction of chaste and tender womanhood, and her command of technique was a very valuable factor of her success. There was nothing of a "scratch" nature about the revival, and Messrs. E. G. Banks, W. T. Hemsley, R. McCleery, and T. E. Ryan's scenery was of the most artistic and elaborate excellence. The whole production, under Mr. Herbert Jarman's supervision, was thorough and complete; and the deep attention and hearty applause of the audience eloquently expressed their delight and satisfaction.

BRITISH EMPIRE SHAKESPEARE SOCIETY.

The British Empire Shakespeare Society, which was formed in 1901 for the purpose of promoting greater familiarity with Shakespeare's works among all classes in the British Empire, as well as to form Shakespeare clubs and reading societies, arranged a pleasant evening's entertainment last Sunday at the Passmore Edwards Settlement, Tavistock-place, when a dramatic reading of The Tempest was given. The play was arranged and rehearsed for the occasion by Mr. Acton Bond, who is the honorary general director of the dramatic readings promoted by the Society; and Miss Margaret Parker read the stage directions on the evening in question. Mr. Acton Bond's enunciation of Prospero's lines was what one would have expected from such an accomplished actor, and Mr. J. Fisher White gave us the husky and savage tones and ferocious imprecations of Caliban in admirable style; although, forsooth, our Caliban was in modern evening dress and didn't look the least bit hideous. Miss Nellie Bowman's sweet and expressive voice was heard to good effect in the part of Ariel, and from her we got an exquisite rendering of "Come unto these yellow sands," "Where the bee sucks," and "Full fathom five." Mr. Reginald Owen's delivery of Ferdinand's speeches was full of character, and Mr. Frank Lacy submitted an excellent vocal interpretation of the jests of Trinculo. Miss Beatrice Irwin spoke well and clearly as Miranda, and Mr. J. Henry Twyford's reading of the part of Sebastian was vigorous and manly. Mr. Yates Southgate imparted the correct intonation to the words of Gonzalo, and Mr. Clive Curtis appropriately drawled out the sentences of the drunken Stephano. Mr. Charles Myers and Mr. Devil Powell, as Alonzo and Antonio respectively, acquitted themselves to everyone's satisfaction, and Miss Patricia Plowman, who made an acceptable Juno, gave an expressive and tuneful rendering of "Honour riches."

"MIDSUMMER FIRES."

Sudermann's Johannisfeuer, which has already been played at the German Theatre in London, was first produced at the Royal Schauspiel-Haus, Berlin, on Oct. 5, 1900. It was not altogether a success, certainly not the success anticipated by the great dramatist's admirers. The first and second acts were well received, but then a reaction set in, and the final act was hissed by a dissatisfied portion of the audience. Though distinguished by some clever character-drawing, the play was not found to contain the qualities to ensure sustained popularity. The first act is admirably written, but the promise of the opening is not fulfilled. The author no doubt placed dependence upon his third act, but in actual representation this was found to be disappointing. The verdict of Berlin audiences regarding the merits of the piece has not been reversed by playgoers who have witnessed Midsummer Fires in London either in the original German or the faithful English translation.

There are four acts, but only one scene—an interior. Vogelreuter is a landowner living on his estate in East Prussia, and the family consists of his wife, his daughter Gertrude, and an adopted daughter Marikke. The last-mentioned is the child of a gipsy woman of disreputable character, a slovenly, unkempt creature given to drink and thieving. The Vogelreuters took pity on the much-neglected little girl and brought her up as one of their own family. As she grows into womanhood she repays their kindness by becoming her foster mother's principal assistant in the discharge of the household duties. When the play opens we find that the gipsy woman, who has already undergone a term of imprisonment for theft, has been seen again in the neighbourhood, much to the annoyance of Vogelreuter, and is being watched by his bailiff Ploetz. George Von Hartvig, an architect and the landowner's nephew, is engaged to Gertrude, a simple, innocent girl, who is still a child in manner and feeling, and the nuptials are about to be celebrated. Marikke, who has been very busy in preparing the new home for the reception of the bride and bridegroom, discovers in a bookcase a little diary belonging to George, and containing verses which reveal the fact that four years ago he was in love with Marikke. The girl admits to George that she has read the verses, and also that she has hitherto concealed her real feelings towards him, believing that he would never dream of marrying the daughter of a drunken gipsy woman. However, it is too late to remedy the mistake, and matters must take their course. Marikke has recently discovered that the gipsy hag is her mother, but when at her own desire she meets her face to face she shrinks from the wretched creature in disgust. The old woman asks for brandy, apparently her favourite tipple, takes from her daughter the silk apron she is wearing, and steals some linen which she finds lying about. However, Marikke hands her a gold coin, compels her to restore the stolen goods she has in her possession, and bids her begone. Von Hartvig shows a spirit of independence which aggravates his uncle, and they have a rather violent quarrel, which, however, in view of the approaching marriage is patched up for the time being. On Midsummer Night it is the custom of the peasants to light bonfires on the hills, and these are watched by the family from the open door, while Haffke, the young curate, who has recently come to the village, improves the occasion by a brief address, followed by George, who expresses his views in language that his uncle candidly admits he does not in the least understand. Then, when the remainder of the household have retired to rest, a long interview takes place between George and Marikke. The thought of the fires that have now burnt out and the stillness of the moonlight night have a potent effect upon the gipsy blood running in the girl's veins, and she gives way to the passion that consumes her. Her mother is a thief, she cries, and she will be a thief too. But her theft is of a different kind, and more far-reaching and serious in its results. In the last act George proposes to Marikke that they shall die together or confess their secret, but the gipsy girl will not agree to either of these courses, but declares her intention of leaving the village for ever and gaining her livelihood in some distant spot. They must not bring misery upon the home which has sheltered her so long; and so George, who cannot but see the force of her reasoning, pairs off with poor little Gertrude, leaving one in grave doubts as to his future happiness as a married man. The curate Haffke is also grievously disappointed, for Marikke had consented to become his wife; but this has now become impossible, and though the story finishes with a wedding it can scarcely be termed a happy ending.

Miss Suzanne Sheldon gave a carefully-studied and impressive embodiment of Marikke, expressing with fidelity and force the emotions which sway the passionate gipsy nature. Equally satisfactory was the George Von Hartvig of Mr. Leslie Faber, who showed intensity and real feeling in his representation of the young architect, and acted with consistent power throughout. Miss May Martyn was a pretty and dainty exponent of the character of the artless, confiding, almost childish, but lovable, Gertrude, who is gay at one moment, tearful and pathetic the next. Mr. Blake Adams was well placed at the austere, autocratic landowner Vogelreuter, whose wife was ably embodied by Miss Elsie Chester. Mr. Athol Stewart deserves praise for his neat and lifelike sketch of the curate Haffke, the preachy tone adopted being quite in keeping with the character. Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn ably depicted the bailiff Ploetz, and Miss Inez Bensusan was quite successful as the garrulous housekeeper Nanni. Mrs. Calhaem was sufficiently repulsive in appearance as the old gipsy woman, and played the part admirably, and Miss Hope Mayne as a maid-servant completed the cast. The German play was produced by Herr Hans Andresen, which was a guarantee of completeness so far as the staging was concerned.

MADAME DORINA NATALIA (the celebrated South African contralto) appeared at the Criterion Restaurant last Sunday evening, and gave the audience a fine rendering of seven songs. The excellent Criterion orchestra accompanied her in Bemberg's "Nymphes et Sylvans" and "Carmens," She accompanied herself at the piano in "For love of you," "Printemps Nouveau," "Spring is here," and "Allerseelen." Unbounded applause greeted each song, and at the conclusion the management handed Madame Natalia a magnificent bouquet of Leander roses.

DURING the London season of Mme. Jane Hading, organised by Mr. Robert Arthur, a flying matinée will be given at the Theatre Royal, Nottingham, on June 1, when the talented artist and her entire Parisian company will appear in M. Georges Ohnet's play Le Maître de Forges.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens.

STANDING ROOM.

On the reception of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee's report, Mr. Yates, the Chairman, in reply to Mr. Edwin Smith, said that the Council's solicitor was not yet ready with his report as to the Council's control over the Albert Hall, respecting which a question was asked at the previous meeting. The Committee were considering the whole question of standing room in licensed places of entertainment, but were not yet prepared to submit a report on the subject.

HOLBORN EMPIRE.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that they had considered a drawing, submitted by Messrs. F. Matcham and Co., showing a new engine-room proposed to be erected at the Holborn Empire. They recommended that Messrs. F. Matcham and Co. be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the drawing submitted by them with regard to the proposed new engine-house provided the following conditions be complied with—(1) That arrangements be made for the work to be executed without causing obstruction to the exits; (2) that the engine-room be separated from the other parts of the music hall to the satisfaction of the Council; (3) that the ventilation of the new building be so arranged as to prevent an accumulation of escaped gas in the engine-house or the producer room, and that the ventilating arrangements be to the satisfaction of the Council; (4) that the frontage of the old engine-room be set back as much as possible, so as to improve the width of the exit in Little Turnstile; (5) that the old engine-room be not used for any other purpose without the sanction of the Council being first obtained; (6) that if it be intended that the engines shall be the only source of supply of power for the dynamos used in lighting the building, the plant be arranged with everything in duplicate; (7) that the arrangements in connection with the installation of the engines be to the satisfaction of the Council; and (8) that plans showing how it is proposed to connect the existing circuits to the engines and dynamos in their proposed positions in the new engine-room be submitted to, and approved by, the Council before the work of transferring the engines is commenced.

Agreed to.

OLYMPIA.

The Committee reported that they had considered drawings submitted by Mr. F. H. Payne, showing the proposed arrangements at Olympia, Addison-road, Kensington, during a motor exhibition to be held in the autumn. They recommended that Mr. Payne be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the drawings submitted, provided the following conditions be complied with—(1) That the cross gangway, opposite the Hammersmith-road entrance, be increased in width to 10 feet; (2) that all moving machinery be protected with wire guards of an approved pattern, previous to the opening of the exhibition; (3) that no thin wood lining be used in the construction of the stands, and that any material used for draping be rendered non-inflammable; and (4) that the arrangements for the storage of petrol and charging the cars be to the satisfaction of the Council.

Approved.

SHAKESPEARE FIRST.

The Education Committee reported that they had had under consideration the annual revision of the prize list for public elemenetary schools. This list comprised 1,142 books, and it appeared that of the volumes of poetry requisitioned in 1905 Shakespeare stood at the head of the list with 298, Tennyson being a very good second with 296, followed by Longfellow with 281. Amongst the works of fiction, the most popular were "Grimm's Stories and Tales," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and "Robinson Crusoe."

FREE TUITION IN MUSIC.

The Education Committee reported that the Council on December 19, 1905, had under consideration a letter from the secretary of the Trinity College of Music, London, asking if an offer from that institution to provide free tuition in music to a number of selected and approved scholars from the schools would be entertained by the Council. The Council decided that if such an offer were submitted it would be prepared to consider it favourably. The Board of Trinity College had now submitted definite proposals on the subject, and the Committee recommended that the offer be accepted.

Carried.

MADAME KATE FLINN'S CONCERT.

At Steinway Hall on Tuesday afternoon Madame Kate Flinn gave a highly successful concert. Mme. Flinn was assisted by Mr. Sydney Jarvis, Miss Maud Aldis, the Ladies' Salon Quartet, and a large number of her pupils, who greatly distinguished themselves. The concert began with Dvorák's quartet "Bagatellen," cleverly played by the Ladies' Salon Quartet; following this a very talented pupil of Mme. Flinn's, Miss Barbara Battishill, sang "Sognai," by Schira, in a manner that reflected great credit on the clever training the young lady has received. Miss G. von Taysen, another clever pupil possessing a fine rich mezzo-soprano, sang Alma Goetz's "Mélisande in the Wood" with real dramatic feeling. Mme. Kate Flinn, who was warmly received by the large audience, gave a French song by Grissart, "Chanson Brésilienne," with great brilliancy, and for the inevitable encore the artist responded with "Just her way," which was charmingly rendered. Miss Hebe Dennes, another young lady who studied to great advantage under Mme. Flinn, sang with considerable fluency R. Batten's somewhat difficult song "April Morn," the clever student being heartily applauded at the close, and Miss Ruby Cobbett, also a pupil of Mme. Flinn, sang Giordani's fine song "Caro mio ben" with great effect, and later in the concert gave a "Land of Roses," by Teresa del Riego, and "In my Garden," by S. Liddle, the latter song gaining the lady great applause. A clever performance of De Beriot's violin "Concerto" was given by an extremely young performer named Stanelli, aged eleven years, who on this occasion made his first appearance in London, with every promise of future success. Mr. Sydney Jarvis got ample effect out of Maud V. White's spirited song "King Charles," and was also heard to advantage in the pathetic "Crossing the Bar." Miss Maud Aldis was heard in two violin solos, "Aria" (1750), Mondouville, and "Poéme Hongroise," Lederer, played with good tone and expression. Mme. Kate Flinn, to the manifest delight of the audience, sang two Swedish songs, "King Hakon's Cradle-Song," by August Ekenbery, and "Old Bridget," by Vilhelm Peterson-Berger, and "Philosophy," by David Emmell, given by special request and accompanied by the composer, which being sung with delightful humour, Mme. Flinn had to repeat the last verse as an encore. A clever and very youthful pupil of Mme. Flinn's, Miss Elaine Hawkins, gave a song and dance, entitled "The Carnival of the Toys," which was well received; and another pupil, Miss Lucy Webling, greatly amused the audience with some humorous recitations, one of which, giving a description of blacking the baby, caused much amusement. The concert concluded with a duet, "I wish I were a tiny bird," sung by Miss Hebe Dennis and Miss Ruby Cobbett. The accompanists were Mr. Harold Grimston, Miss Alyce Kent, and Mr. David Emmell.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

Contains in a handy compass and in a clear style the law relating to theatres and music halls The book is well up to date.—Law Times.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

Miss Lena Ashwell wears her simple gowns as Deborah in The Shulamite at the Savoy with infinite charm. She appears in the first act in a quaint floral muslin, without ornamentation—simply drawn into the waist with a lilac ribbon; at the neck, which is slightly open, and without any collar, is knotted also a ribbon sailor fashion, and a picturesque lilac linen sun-bonnet. Afterwards, in the third act, this is changed for an equally simple gown. Black alpaca composes the skirt, which is braided with a soutache, the silken muslin bodice being open at the throat.

The dresses in Raffles, at the Comedy Theatre, are tasteful and elaborate. Miss Jessie Bateman, in the second act, wears an exquisite summer frock of palest maize batiste. The bodice is tucked horizontally, and arranged with a dainty little Valenciennes chemisette with tiny maize bows down the centre; the skirt is trimmed with two bands of lace, and the deep waist-band and the buckle which fastens it are made of the batiste. A lovely evening frock is worn in the third act. Of white chiffon over satin, it is trimmed with mother-of-pearl embroidery, passing in a key pattern straight down the centre of the gown in front, and continued round the skirt a few inches above the hem.

Miss Lettice Fairfax wears a charming Empire gown of white embroidered linen. The skirt has three flounces of the white linen bordered with Valenciennes lace, while the bodice is finished with an embroidered linen collar run with blue ribbons, and at the back of the waist there is a big bow with sash-ends of the blue ribbon; blue ribbons are also prettily tied round the elbow sleeves. The pink tulle evening gown worn by Miss Fairfax in the last act has a low bodice fully gathered and caught in front with a bow of silver tissu shot with pink and fastened with a paste buckle.

Dyed tussore silk is the striking feature of Miss Sarah Brooke's smart little frock of blue tussore, much tucked and stitched; the bodice has a little chemisette of soft white batiste and Valenciennes, and a black silk cravat completes the effect. Miss Brooke also has an Empire gown. It is a lovely evening frock of pale grey net sewn with pearls and glittering with silver embroidery. The net is made up over silver tissue, and touches of shot pink and silver tissue trim the bodice.

PLAY-WRITING AS A PROFESSION.

Under this title Mr. Horace W. C. Newte contributes an interesting article to the April number of the "Grand Magazine." Taking it for granted that "every other person one meets has written a play, it may not be amiss," he thinks, "to describe the conditions that obtain, not only in securing production, but also as regards pecuniary reward. The haziest notions prevail about these matters. It is as frequently assumed that any well-written play will secure adequate and immediate production, as that such production spells unlimited wealth to the author."

Mr. Newte, who has had considerable experience in writing for the stage himself, proceeds to demolish this optimistic view by pointing out "that such success is quite exceptional, and is always the result of years of profitless toil." The possession of a dramatic instinct he regards as the Alpha and Omega of the difficult business of the playwright. "Without this, the rarest of intellectual endowments, he would be engaged upon a task more futile than that of ploughing the sands."

Granted, then, that he has this necessary qualification, he requires, along with other minor qualities, "a knowledge of stagecraft, a sense of construction, creative power, a strong eye for character, humour that will 'carry across the footlights,' the power of writing terse, telling dialogue, invention, imagination, ability to tell a story by means of conversations, self-criticism, infinite patience, vast power of application, and a keen business instinct. In addition, he must be an essentially practical man, for a crank, or one who essays to write a type of play foreign to that applauded by the public, would be better employed in selling bootlaces in the gutter, so far as making a living goes. I should add, too, that a knowledge of foreign languages, which will enable our author to study the methods of foreign playwrights, would prove most helpful to him. Then, if he exercises these qualities for a period of from three to seven years, he should be in a fair way to the writing of a play that, adequately produced, may command success.

"He will have employed some of this probationary period wisely if, to acquire familiarity with the exigencies of stagecraft, he has played small parts at a theatre, or, failing this, with amateur dramatic societies. But—and this is essential—once he has obtained this technique, let him resolutely turn his back upon player-folk and the existence of the stage, and set himself to study life completely remote from every association with the theatre; otherwise he will repeat in his writings obsolete theatrical devices and well-worn types of stage character to such an extent, that, if ever his work be produced, it will be condemned as 'artificial,' and, therefore, unconvincing."

Having plainly pointed out that, "for a person to 'set up shop' as dramatic author without capital, or at least some light occupation that will provide the necessaries of life, is to invite starvation," and touched upon the writing of one-act plays, for which there is a yearly decreasing demand, Mr. Newte continues:—"But I assume that our author elects to storm the managerial citadel with a three- or four-act play. If the writing of this play is an effort, it is the veriest child's play as compared to 'placing it'; though, if the author possesses a powerful 'friend at court,' it will save much of his time. Submitted in the ordinary way, he might wait months for its return, and it might never come back at all. Beyond getting the play read quickly, the 'friend at court' is of small use, however, as in every case the ultimate decision rests with the manager, provided he is master in his own house." Mr. Newte advises the aspiring dramatist, while "vigorously producing new work, to submit his earlier play to the actors or actresses he thinks his leading part may appeal to. Here he will still be subject to the heartbreaking delays that attended his appeal to the managers. But there is a bare possibility that one of these persons will be sufficiently interested in the part to produce the play, perhaps at a London theatre, more probably at a provincial or suburban playhouse. Suburban productions are attended by the minor critics, but rarely, if at all, by any of the managers who count. For such a production the author would receive little in respect of fees, and but very brief notices in the daily papers; but he would gain the invaluable experience of seeing his play produced. There are still, of course, the managers who tour the provinces; but as these principally deal with London successes, the prospects of production in this direction are remote. If he should secure acceptance, his play would be included in a 'repertory,' and he might obtain a pound for each occasion on which the piece was represented.

"And this brings me to the main point of this article, which is, that under present theatrical conditions it is next to impossible—and it is becoming increasingly difficult—for a dramatic author to secure a production for his work. Fifteen years back things in this respect were otherwise. There were managements both in London and the provinces who were eager to give a trial to promising plays. But the economic conditions under which theatres are now managed have changed all that.

"Theatres that could then be rented at £60 a week are now let for four times that amount; rates and taxes have proportionately increased, as have the salaries of the attenuated list of actors and actresses who are qualified to be entrusted with leading parts. Consequently, whereas a few years ago a manager risked the loss of a thousand pounds in a play's production, he now stands to lose many times that amount. Moreover, many English playhouses are leased to men who are not managers, but merely theatre-brokers, occupying a theatre in order to secure a profit-rental from tenants. Rarely, if ever, do these theatre-brokers speculate in a play; they rely upon an actor or author to 'put up' the money."

Mr. Newte concludes by saying that, "in the vast majority of instances, playwriting, like honesty, is its own reward. The prizes are so considerable, the market so limited, the competition so relentless, the cost of production so excessive, managers such indifferent judges of plays (witness the hundreds of thousands lost in theatrical speculation) that, granted an author possesses every attribute that makes for success, it is luck—the interplay of forces over which he has no control—that determines his fate.

"Should these lines give pause to the aspiring but ignorant playwright, they may save him months of barren labour and many bad quarters of an hour of grievous disappointment, and, in that event, have not been penned in vain!"

UNITED GIRLS' SCHOOL.

The entertainment at Queen's Hall on Monday for the above institution proved most successful. The programme opened with a concert, in which a ladies' orchestra was heard in an overture by Garlett. A song by Massenet, "Ouvre tes yeux bleues," and "Ständchen," by Strauss, were agreeably given by Miss Ella Pollock. "Kathleen Mavourneen" was sung with expression by Miss Florence Ettinger. A scene from The Rivals followed. By kind permission of Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. O. B. Clarence appeared and recited the two characters of Sir Anthony Absolute and Captain Absolute brilliantly. Miss Nora Nicholas gained hearty applause in two violin solos. Miss Lucia Fydell selected two songs from Carmen, and sang them creditably. Mr. Lewis Casson recited from the recent Court Theatre success, Prunella, and "Laurence Housman," both by Joseph Morat. He appeared by kind permission of Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker. Miss Emily Owen sang "Home" and "O dry those tears," by Teresa del Riego, with great ability. The entertainment concluded with L'Enfant Prodigue, adapted by Mr. Charles Allan, and played entirely by children trained by his gifted wife. Master Desmond Urwick represented the hero with the greatest possible success. He has been a pupil of Miss Edith Gibbs, the well-known teacher of elocution. The young gentleman as the younger Pierrot had no occasion for elocution, but his dumb show was most expressive. Mlle. Phrynette was played by Miss Muriel Eve with great skill, and the Baron by Master Geoffrey Françon Davies was another decided success. He also, in the absence of Master Walter Cross, represented the elder Pierrot. As the black servant, Master Jack Scharlied scored brilliantly. The dances in the second act arranged by Miss Evie d'Egville gave unqualified pleasure, Miss Muriel Eve, by her clever dancing, winning hearty applause. Miss Mabel Norman led the amateur orchestra and Miss Edith Matthews assisted at the pianoforte. Mr. Allan has slightly altered the original play to make it more suitable for his juvenile company, but he has kept the interesting incidents untouched. The costumes, by Miss Winter, were everything that could be desired, and the youthful wearers were to be warmly commended all round for their intelligence and gestures, which were surprisingly expressive. Mr. Allan and his wife were called for at the conclusion. The entire entertainment was in aid of the funds of the Girls' School Settlement, and was well attended.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

MISS JULIE MACKEY'S SONG.

Miss Julie Mackey, the music-hall artist, having lodged an appeal from the judgment entered against her by Mr. Justice Bigham, in an action for libel brought against Mr. George Edwardes last January, Mr. Edwardes applied on Tuesday to the Court of Appeal that she should be ordered to give security for the costs of the appeal.

The libel complained of, which Miss Mackey claimed had interfered with her engagements, was contained in the following letter sent by Mr. George Edwardes, through his solicitors, to the managers of the Oxford and Tivoli, where Miss Mackey was fulfilling concurrent engagements:—

The attention of our client, Mr. George Edwardes, has been drawn to the fact that the song, "Under the Bamboo Tree," the performing rights of which for Great Britain and the Colonies have been acquired by him, is being performed at your theatre. Doubtless you are unaware that this song, which is now being performed in The Girl from Kay's, belongs to Mr. Edwardes, and we shall be glad to hear from you that it will not in future be sung at your music hall. Kindly let me have an answer to this letter in the course of to-morrow."

Miss Mackey claimed that the publishers of the song, Messrs. Jos. Stern and Co., of New York, had given her verbal permission to include it in her répertoire. As a result of the defendant's letter, Miss Mackey was stopped from singing the song at the Oxford and Tivoli, hence her action. At the trial the jury found that there had been no libel, and judgment was accordingly entered for the defendant, and the costs as against the plaintiff were taxed at £183 4s. 3d.

Mr. R. J. Willis (instructed by Messrs. Slark, Edwards, and Co.) now stated that the costs had not been paid, and execution was issued against the plaintiff's goods, but it proved abortive. Plaintiff was wholly without means, and could not pay the costs of the appeal in the event of it failing.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams pointed out that Mr. Pickwick, in his action, did not pay the costs, but that did not show he was wholly without means. (Laughter.)

Mr. Willis said his client did not claim at the trial the right to interfere with the lady singing the song; it was merely a question whether his letter to the managers was defamatory.

Lord Justice Moulton: You admit that you had no right to interfere with her singing it?

Mr. Willis: We did not go quite so far as that. It is one of those curious cases where, so far as one can tell, nobody had a right to sing it.

Lord Justice Fletcher Moulton: Then, if nobody had a right, what is the use of your saying you had a right?

Mr. Willis: We paid a sum to the American publishers for assigning to us what right they had.

Lord Justice Fletcher Moulton: You did not defend your right, and no injunction was granted.

Lord Justice Stirling: I must say I think the lady had something to complain of as regards the result, having regard to these circumstances.

An affidavit was put in in which the manager of the Tivoli said he forbade the singing of the song on the ground that he did not want litigation with Mr. George Edwardes.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams: If and in so far as the lady is insolvent, even now you could restore her capacity for earning money by writing a letter to her admitting that the claims you made had no foundation. Then she need have no difficulty in earning plenty of money to pay the costs.

Lord Justice Stirling: Perhaps if you will consent to an admission being made of her title to sing being put in the order, we might hear no more of this appeal.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams: I do not think we shall help you if you are not disposed to do that.

Mr. Willis pointed out that the lady had allowed three months to pass before giving notice of appeal.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams: Perhaps she did not at first appreciate the really bad position of hardship that she was placed in by your having made a claim which had no foundation. In the result it looked as if you had some right, which you clearly had not, under your own admission. She struggles along, and takes some time to find out the extent of the injury done to her.

Mr. Willis: She was earning a living without singing this song.

Lord Justice Fletcher Moulton: If so, she can probably pay the costs.

Mr. Willis: She says she cannot.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams (to Mr. Elsley Zeitlyn, counsel for Miss Mackey, instructed by Messrs. Cohen and Cohen): Are you disposed to make an end of this appeal on the terms of a statement being introduced into the order negativing the rights of Mr. Edwardes in this song?

Mr. Zeitlyn: I am afraid I must get the instructions of my client. She has been put to an awful amount of expense, and her health has been affected.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams: Then I do not think we ought to make any order for security.

Mr. Zeitlyn: I ask for the costs of this application.

The Court assented, and dismissed the motion with costs (such costs, of course, to be set off against the costs due to the other side in the ordinary way).

In the Court of Bankruptcy on Tuesday, the case of Edward George Saunders, theatrical-manager, residing at Marlborough-road, St. John's Wood, came before Mr. Registrar Linklater, in connection with the public examination of the debtor, whose statement of affairs showed liabilities amounting to £10,279 12s., of which £3,818 7s. 8d. were expected to rank, and an estimated surplus in assets of £21,563 8s. It appeared that the debtor had been concerned in many theatrical ventures, and he stated that his present position was due to depreciation in the value of his shares, particularly in Saunders's Theatres (Limited), and subsequently to losses in respect of the Waldorf companies and in financing the scheme of the Waldorf Hotel. The Deputy Official Receiver said that the accounts would require amendment, and the hearing was adjourned until June 19.

THEATRICAL PATENTS.

The following abridged description is specially drawn for THE ERA by Messrs. Hughes and Young, Patent Agents, 55-56, Chancery-lane, London, W.C., who will give advice and assistance free to our readers on all matters relating to the patenting of inventions:—

18652/05. Mme. C. G. Devrient, 20, Abbey-gardens, Abbey-road, N.W. Improvements in theatrical and photographic make-up devices. This invention refers to luxuriant eyelashes, intended for theatrical purposes, living pictures, fancy balls, and similar occasions, and also to lend artful aid to fair sitters to the photographer. An edging of silk gauze material is made coated with an adhesive, which is moistened and placed to the eyelid, one each to the upper and lower lids, and fixes in less than half a minute, the only necessary precaution being to keep the skin free from grease, such as lard, cold cream, or grease paint.

MR. CHARLES HANNAN was the defendant in an action for libel brought on Thursday, in the Court of King's Bench, by Mr. C. M. S. McLellan, the well-known dramatic writer, for alleged libel contained in a letter published in the Stage newspaper. The letter complained of contained the intimation of a claim by Mr. Hannan to priority of copyright in the play Leah Kleschna, in virtue of his published novel, and copyrighted play of the same name, "The Coachman with the Yellow Lace." It was stated by Mr. McLellan's counsel that the idea of the play was suggested by an incident to which Mr. McLellan's attention was called in Paris, in which an elderly man appeared to be coercing a young woman into doing some crime against which she rebelled. From this Mr. McLellan gradually evolved the scheme of a play in which the chief figure, Leah Kleschna, a female burglar, was brought up amongst criminals. The play, Leah Kleschna, was read in Court, and the novel, "The Coachman with the Yellow Lace," was about to be similarly treated when the case was adjourned till Monday.

The late Mr. Sims Reeves, the world-famed Tenor Vocalist, wrote: "'Condy' used as a Gargle clears the voice and braces up the uvula."

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual (1s.) is, of course, issued by our premier theatrical journal, which, under the literary supervision of Mr. T. P. O'Connor, has recently improved an already strong position. The Annual is better than ever, and includes, besides details of all plays produced in London, the provinces, Paris, and Berlin, lists of all theatres and music halls in the United Kingdom, &c., many stories and sketches by and portraits of actors and actresses. It is a remarkable shillingsworth; useful and interesting to all playgoers and members of the profession alike.—Sunday Sun, Jan. 21, '06.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual is published from the offices of the old-established organ of the theatrical profession, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. As usual, it is a carefully-compiled record of notable events of the year 1905. A pleasing feature is the selection of short stories, after recounting strange experiences, by "stars" of the dramatic and music-hall professions, these being in every case accompanied by photographs of the writers.—Newcastle Daily Journal, Jan. 27, 1906.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual for 1906, published at a shilling from 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, combines utility and entertainment. Its former aspect is exemplified by the record of the plays produced last year in London, the provinces, Paris, and Berlin; it also includes an obituary for the year, and lists of the United Kingdom's theatres and music halls. The attractive side of the Annual comprises numerous stories by stage celebrities, whose portraits illustrate the text. It is a delightful budget of good things. Mr. T. P. O'Connor's appreciation of the late Sir Henry Irving is brief, but tender and impressive.—Financier, Jan. 23, '06.

THE BUSINESS OF THE STAGE.

A great deal of literature consists in the establishment of Theories. In the "Pickwick Papers" we read of a "Theory of Tittlebats" in connection with the Hampstead Ponds; and we have theories of banking, of currency, and of social government. But the basis of a just theory is information; and it is this absence of information that makes it so difficult to form any ideas in connection with theatrical finance. At the best, an attempt to do so is but a speculation about speculations. Now and then a manager lifts a corner of the veil, and gives us a glimpse of his finance; but in the case of Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES'S latest pronouncement, the difficulty is only increased by the confidence. Mr. EDWARDES'S point is that the natural course of business is interfered with by amateur entrepreneurs. "Nowadays," says Mr. EDWARDES, "it is the portly, respectable, middle-aged stockbroker, with an office in Throgmorton-street, and a family at Muswell Hill, who finds the cash. Why? Merely that he likes playing manager and giving away private boxes. He is not there, observe, to make money. He plays theatres just as he plays golf. Chequebooks buttress rubbish; and the impresario with a genuine production cannot compete with these wealthy amateurs."

Let us analyse these statements, and consider what they imply. Theatrical business, like any other business, is a case of supply and demand. Production of all sorts is subject to fluctuations. When the boot-manufacturers make too many boots, "over-production" ensues, the market is over-stocked, and trade is what is called "slack." Men are thrown out of work, the weaker "houses" become bankrupt, and the stronger ones lose money. This goes on until the over-plus boots have been worn out, or a period of renewed national prosperity sets in, so that people have more money to spend on footgear. Then we have another period of brisk trade; and so on, and so on.

The entertainment business, however, is much more complicated than others. Theatre-going is not a necessity of life; boots are. People are not obliged to go to the play; they have to be tempted there by curiosity and hope of enjoyment. There are other methods of amusement; and amusement itself is not absolutely indispensable. When there is a very bad year for champagne, less of that wine is drunk, and more of other wines; and when there has been a number of "failures" in the way of plays, people visit the theatre less, and spend more money in other ways.

Any approach to a theory of theatrical business reduces itself, it would appear, to this. London is the place where theatrical experiments are tried; and they are practically subsidised by the provinces and America. A London success is a "big" success. The cost of producing a modern play with a moderate cast is often recouped in the first week of its run. Then, supposing it keeps on for a couple of hundred nights, the whole difference between the current expenses and the receipts is profit, and amounts to a large sum. Successes, however, are the exception, and failures, or quasi-failures, are the rule. It is therefore obvious that for the business to be carried on without bankruptcies there must be some sort of subsidisation.

This is contributed by the provinces, America, and the Colonies. After a disastrous season, a popular manager makes a "progress" round the country, gathering capital for a new venture; or if he has a following in America, he crosses the Atlantic, and performs the same operation. We have known a manager's country companies to be bringing in a handsome income, while his London attraction was being "run" at a loss. And there is one advantage in provincial touring. Its monetary success—and it is with the view of making money, not of acquiring fame and reputation, that most London managers go on tour—is governed chiefly by the condition of local business, and not by caprice. When there is "no money in a town" there is no theatre-going. When business is "booming" the lower and middle classes have cash to spend, and much of it finds its way into the coffers of the playhouse. In London, enterprise is more experimental. A piece may be an actual loss or a little gold mine; there is no knowing which. A play may be performed to half-empty houses for weeks, and then suddenly "pick up" and blossom into a "great success." London theatrical business is simply a gamble, with the provinces and America for the unlucky players to fall back upon in the case of serious loss. In Mr. JOHN DAVIDSON'S drama, The Theatrocrat, the actor-manager and his wife are represented as coolly preparing for suicide in case of the failure of their coming production, and their "guarantors" withdrawing their names. In real life, they would, if it were absolutely impossible to "go on" any longer in the West End, have gone to America or the provinces, and returned to the arena with renewed resources.

To the other form of subsidisation—that of the middle-aged stockbroker who "plays at theatres"—there is the objection that, by his readiness to run his theatre at a loss, he unfairly handicaps the manager who is working for money. On the face of it, it would seem that the stockbroker manager, who simply dabbles in theatres as a pastime, would not stand a ghost of a chance when pitted against an experienced and able entrepreneur, with all his energy and knowledge and with his heart deeply in his work. Syndicates, however, have their uses. One of the few managers who have unbosomed themselves to the public was Mr. JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD. He wrote:

I went into the Gaiety Theatre with £200, and in eighteen years I had £120,000 out of it. I soon parted with my initial syndicate by mutual consent and on friendly terms. During the eighteen years I received and paid away in and upon the dramatic profession about one million and a quarter sterling.

At the start, however, he was assisted by a "little friendly syndicate," who subscribed £5000, and called itself "The New Theatres Company, Limited." But HOLLINGSHEAD did not play at managing the Gaiety. He worked at it heart and soul.

Theatrical business is subject to the same laws as other businesses; and if there has been over-production in theatre-building—if, in short, there is not enough public money to "go round"—one of two results must follow: either a number of theatres will be closed pro. tem.; or the prices will have to come down to the pre-BANCROFT-ian scale—a resource so extreme that we cannot contemplate it seriously. But "lean years" have their advantages. The tendency of a lowered scale of profits is to drive out of a calling those who have followed it from mercenary motives only; and when the "Muswell Hill stockbroker" described by Mr. EDWARDES eventually becomes tired of the game, or finds it too expensive, his departure from the scene of action will not be an entire misfortune. The whole matter of theatrical finance is, however, "wropt in mist'ry"; and we should be glad to have the opinions of any experienced correspondents who may be able to add to our stock of information on the subject.

GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, May 14, the Drama, by George R. Sims, entitled
"FOR LIFE—AND AFTER."

The fame of Mr. George R. Sims as a dramatist drew a crowded audience to the Fulham Theatre on Monday, when a play from his pen founded on his lately-published novel of the same name was introduced to London. The piece, which was fully dealt with on its recent production at Reading, bears the stamp of the gifted dramatist's art on every act, and the situations and dialogue are such as lovers of real and hearty melodrama will welcome with delight. The story deals with the unjust conviction, on circumstantial evidence, of the heroine, who is sentenced to penal servitude for life. The lady obtains her release after fifteen years' imprisonment, and is able completely to prove her innocence. The play is entrusted to the worthy hands of Mr. Hardie and Miss Von Leer's company, and that every justice is done to it is assured. The tribulations of Marion Grey, the falsely-accused, are borne with fortitude by Miss Grace Heywood, whose gentleness and tender solicitude for her child render an object of general sympathy. It is a fine performance, and is thoroughly appreciated. Mr. Vernon Sansbury plays Richard Grey, the vacillating husband, skilfully, appearing to especial advantage in the scene in which he has to simulate an attack of delirium tremens. Dora, the heroine's daughter, is played with insinuating charm and agreeable innocence by Miss Muriel Dean, and the lover Gilbert O'Neill has a virile and earnest exponent in Mr. Arthur E. Melbourne. Mr. Henry Hare gives a vivid exposition of the part of the ruffianly Jim Huggett, and Rube Hexham, his coadjutor in crime, is capably impersonated by Mr. Frank Harrison. A Punch and Judy man, who is effective in the working-out of the plot, also supplies the bulk of the comic relief, and as Joe Grimper Mr. Chris Mason exacts a heavy tribute of laughter for his quaint assumption. Miss Evelyn Shaw also supplies comic material in the part of the showman's wife; and Mr. H. G. Wright as Zeke and Mr. Mayor Cooke as Pilcher render adequate aid. Miss Emil Leslie plays the unfortunate Loo Hexham with tact and discrimination, and a sound and well-considered rendering of Dr. Shand is given by Mr. H. F. Wright. The play is mounted with elaborate care, and elicited such cheers after every act that the curtain had to be lifted again and again.

MR. GEORGE R. SIMS, who has every right to speak, has made a profession of faith in melodrama. "I stand by melodrama," he is reported to have said; "and to talk of it as if it were dead is worse than absurd. That it has not been well treated by those who ought to know better I freely admit, but it only requires a little care, a kindly word now and then, some well-considered nursing, to bring it round to health again. The public really love it, and it will recover its position again. There is more bed-rock morality in one act of a sound English melodrama than there is in a half-dozen modern society comedies.

"A MELODRAMA," Mr. Sims went on, "must be moral. The public that wants this class of stage play does not believe in a gentleman who is a hero one hour and a villain the next. The primitive—not the complex—human emotions are what we must put into melodrama. If you make a success you do so by healthy methods. You never get a laugh in drama with a sneer, but you can always depend on pleasing your audience with honest sentiment. Its two essentials, apart from pathos, are human and animal spirits. No; that form of entertainment cannot die, despite the onslaughts made on it. After all," concluded "Dagonet," with a hearty laugh, "melodrama is the beefsteak of the entertainment world."

"THE TRAVELLER RETURNS."

A Melodrama, in One Act, by C. Hamilton, produced at the New Palace Theatre, Brighton, on Friday, May 11.

Johannes ..... MR. HENRY DOUGHTY
Martin ..... MR. W. A. DUNLOP
An Old Peasant Woman .. MISS A. LLOYD-DESMOND
Anna ..... MISS CICELY HAMILTON

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This short play was utilised as a "curtain-raiser" to The Barrister, performed during the week by Mr. Henry Doughty's company. The story is intensely weird and tragic, and the incidents take place in a wood-cutter's hut in the Black Forest. When the curtain rises Johannes and his wife, Anna, are deeply lamenting the loss of their baby child, whose death has resulted from want and hunger. The poverty-stricken parents are broken-hearted; but it is soon evident that another cloud hangs over them, and that they regard the death of their little one as a punishment inflicted upon them for a crime they have committed. From their remorseful utterances it is gathered that one stormy night a young woman, possessing a few pieces of gold, sought refuge in the hut. In their wretched distress, Johannes and Anna determined to murder the stranger, and while the wife kept watch the husband fatally stabbed the sleeping woman. Frenzy and despair seize the guilty pair; but they are aroused by the entrance of Martin, a young peasant, who, three years before, had left them to join the army. Martin, deeply moved, tells the story of his love for a village maiden, who had returned his affection, and had promised to leave her home and join him with her savings. He had anxiously and in vain awaited her arrival; and then, in a dream, he saw the form of his sweetheart with a knife plunged into her breast. He was confident she had been murdered, and he had traced her to the neighbourhood of his old home. He was determined to find out the murderers and revenge himself upon them. Again uttering threats of vengeance, Martin retires to his bedroom, and the curtain falls as Johannes exclaims, "It is his life or ours." The conclusion of the melodrama was not satisfactory, for a more striking situation might have been evolved from the intensely dramatic surroundings. Mr. W. A. Dunlop gave a forcible and impressive impersonation of the deeply-distressed Martin; and the frenzy and agony of the wood-cutter and his wife were powerfully portrayed by Mr. Henry Doughty and Miss Cicely Hamilton. The minor character of an old peasant woman was satisfactorily undertaken by Miss Amy Lloyd-Desmond.

MR. CHARLES FRY'S RECITAL.

The second of Mr. Charles Fry's present series of Shakespearean matinées, given in conjunction with Miss Olive Kennett, was equally well patronised as the first, the Court Theatre on Saturday being filled with an audience whose appreciation was very marked. The Merry Wives of Windsor was the piece chosen, and though naturally the lack of scenery impaired the continuity of the story, the fun of the piece proved irresistible. Nothing that might make for life and gaiety had been suppressed, and Falstaff's many misadventures were presented almost in full. Mr. Fry made no more pretentious selection than that of Dr. Caius, but the part was made to stand out conspicuously by the thorough manner in which every detail was presented. Mr. Fry assumed the airs and graces of the ferocious Frenchman with laughable effect, accent and gesture being throughout irresistibly comic. Mr. Patrick Munro was the Falstaff, and nobly bore the burden of the cumbersome knight. Mr. Munro's physical proportions lend themselves admirably to the making-up of the character, which he made quite a commanding figure, while his resonant voice, perhaps a little too deliberately employed, gave added distinction to the droll lines of the part. Miss Olive Kennett played Mrs. Ford with a lightness of touch that was very agreeable, and showed her to be a comedy actress of varied resource. She revelled in the gaiety of the part, and her vivacity and high spirits were very refreshing. Mistress Page was played by Mrs. Thouless, whose otherwise flexible voice was impaired by an evident cold. She acted nevertheless in light and agreeable style and a fitting appreciation of the character. A happy selection was made in that of Mr. Lewis Casson for Mr. Ford, whose refined and polished methods were invaluable in the difficult rôle. The stern visage of the jealous Ford gave an exact index to the character, and Mr. Casson's delivery of the passionate sentences and his well-defined action were quite successful in perfecting the part. Miss Pauline B. Isaacs made of Anne Page a sweet and engaging maiden, and Mr. Vincent Nello as Fenton not only looked the tender lover to the life, but delivered his lines with elocutionary grace. Mr. Arthur Durand played Sir Hugh Evans in a comically doleful way, though the Welsh accent was not always apparent; but the humour of the part was striking, and the song that falls to him was rendered in the same droll strain. Mr. Jack Dale's humour as the Host of the Garter Inn was robust and assertive; Mr. W. J. R. Cane made of Slender quite a modern "Johnny" in Elizabethan dress; and a clever portrayal of senile glee was furnished by Mr. Arthur Fayne in the part of Justice Shallow. Mr. J. K. Maclean, though none too vigorous in delivery, made a good appearance in the part of Page, and was earnest in his acting; and Miss Winifred Rae gave an admirable conception of Mistress Quickly. Falstaff's followers were picturesquely played by Mr. H. A. Rourke as Bardolph, Mr. Ernest Yorke as Pistol, and Mr. N. C. Wetherilt as Nym. Simple and Rugby were adequately enacted by Messrs. C. Francis and T. M. Cottam, and the minor parts were well sustained. The chorus in Windsor Park was tunefully rendered, and elegant and appropriate costumes enhanced the attractiveness of the performance.

"A JAPANESE DANCE."

At the Chiswick Town Hall on Tuesday evening Miss Davies Webster and Miss Rose Cazalet presented an interesting and enjoyable entertainment programme. The pretty Hogarth Hall was comfortably filled by an attentive audience, who gave evidence of their pleasure at the different items. A feature of the bill was the production of a New Sketch by W. G. Hyde Lees.

"A JAPANESE DANCE,"

O Toya San ..... MISS VIOLET CECIL
Dulcie ..... MISS DAVIES WEBSTER
Miss Mamie Drucker ..... MISS ROSE CAZALET
Donald Guthrie ..... MR. T. IREBY CAPE

The author has not much of a story to tell, but, such as it is, it was well interpreted by the representatives of the various characters. The scene is a room in a Japanese house, O Toya San's, whose friend, Donald Guthrie, has requested to be allowed to bring his wife and an American lady of his acquaintance. While Donald is temporarily absent, his wife begs O Toya San to perform a Japanese dance. O Toya San says that Japanese ladies give up dancing after marriage, but she breaks the custom at the pleading of her visitor. Dulcie admires the Japanese dress so much that her hostess suggests she should attire herself similarly just for the novelty of the thing. So in a few minutes Dulcie reappears in a handsome kimona. Miss Mamie Drucker, the American lady, who, by the way, is writing a book on Japanese customs, requests the transformed Dulcie to show her a Japanese dance, and Dulcie, in attempting to imitate what she has seen O Toya San do, makes a rather ridiculous exhibition of herself. Later, Donald Guthrie returns, and Dulcie, in a fit of jealousy, denounces him for what she alleges is his affection for O Toya San, but after he has explained how silly and unfounded are her beliefs, she asks to be forgiven, and all ends happily. Miss Violet Cecil charmed everybody with her delightful impersonation of O Toya San, and her exquisitely graceful dancing. Miss Rose Cazalet admirably enunciated the Yankee twang, and otherwise gave a pleasing performance of Mamie Drucker. Miss Davies Webster, in her acting of the part of Dulcie, showed spirit and good style; and Mr. T. Ireby Cape ably fulfilled the requirements of the rôle of Donald Guthrie.

As to the other artists, that finished elocutionist, Mr. Hermann Vezin, recited the poem, "A Spanish Mother," with tragic power and feeling, and, upon a recall, and by way of a contrast, he gave us a little joke about the mistaken notion some persons had as to the pronunciation of the word "ham." Miss Ulrikka Wiley enchanted her audience with her delightful rendering of several songs, including "The Kashmiri" and "The Temple Bells." Miss Constance Lindermann furnished unquestionable evidence of her skill with the violin in a Sonata from Handel; and Mrs. Paul Zeidler made a praiseworthy effort on the 'cello with Godard's "Berceuse Jocelyn." Miss Rose Cazalet again distinguished herself in an amusing character-sketch, Merrimee Jeanne, concerning a shrewd female who is endeavouring to bring about a match for a lady friend, who has promised her as the reward for success a new dress. In Edward Granville's dramatic sketch 'Enery Brown, Miss Davies Webster and Miss Edith Bottomley portrayed in commendable fashion the character-studies of 'Liza Jane and Amelia Amaryida respectively. Miss Violet Cecil came to the fore once more in a lightsome and dainty tambourine dance; and Mr. T. Ireby Cape won applause with a humorous monologue. The trio of instrumentalists, Miss Eugenie Caverhill Shiels (pianoforte), Mrs. Paul Zeidler, and Miss Constance Linderman, entertained, from time to time, with well-executed selections. The acting-manager for the evening was Miss Harriet Greet.

THE LATE MR. BARTON BAKER.

The remains of Mr. H. Barton Baker, in his early days an actor of note in the provinces, later an author and journalist, were on Monday cremated at Golder's Green, Finchley. He had died a few days prior at Tonbridge. Born at Bristol in 1836, Henry Baker was the only son of a tragedian, professionally known as Barton. The father migrated to America, where he coached Charlotte Cushman for her profession, and ruined himself by building a huge theatre at New Orleans. Returning to England he remained many years a professor of elocution in Bristol. Designed for the church, the son, soon after his father's death, attached himself to the stage, first appearing under the Chutes in his native city. There he acted with Macready, James Wallack, and Marie Wilton, when a child. Later, he attained great success as a juvenile tragedian under Beverley at Darlington; Charles Dillon, when lessee of the Sheffield Theatre; and with Belton at Exeter. Baker, from a boy, had been an omnivorous reader. It fostered literary taste and sympathy. While still engaged on the stage, in the early 'seventies, he sent an article on Mirabeau to Temple Bar. So pleased was Richard Bentley with the essay that he asked the writer for further contributions on the same lines. A series followed, and the graphic and readable articles were afterwards republished under the title of "French Society from the Fronde to the Great Revolution." So highly did Bentley esteem the literary talent of his fresh contributor that he earnestly advised Baker to abandon the stage, and devote himself to literature. Baker followed the counsel. From that time to within a month of his death he continued a clever and indefatigable author. Sympathy with his old profession, added to considerable historical knowledge, gave him the cue for an immense number of articles contributed to The Gentleman's Magazine, Temple Bar, and the Graphic newspaper. Many were gathered together as "Our Old Actors" (in two volumes), and much incorporated in "A History of the London Stage," of which a second and enlarged edition appeared three years since. The last-named work contains chronicles of all the metropolitan playhouses, those vanished, and every existing one up to the date of the book. The history, too, conserves the memories and achievements of all our great players, from Richard Burbage to Henry Irving. Barton Baker was likewise a prolific writer of short stories and novels, the most noticeable of the latter being "Margaret Grey," "Robert Miner, Anarchist," and "A Great State Secret." The deceased gentleman was a prominent and popular member of the Oasis Club, when its leading spirits were Christie Murray, Francillon, Gowing, and Eugene Barnett, and also of the Urban Club, where, in May, 1903, he delivered a scholarly and eloquent address on the genius of Bulwer Lytton, whose centenary the members commemorated. Mr. Barton Baker has left a widow, having in her possession a number of his unpublished tales and essays.

AT the Carl Weiss Theatre, Berlin, a play, entitled Aus altem Geschlecht, drawn from a novel of the same name, by A. Genke, was produced on Saturday with scarcely satisfactory results. The story ran in a daily paper, and presented good opportunities for dramatising, but Dr. Karl Wendt—who has adapted it for the stage—has managed to leave out the finest points for some reason best known to himself. Nevertheless, the audience proved grateful for the remnant offered them, and applauded with distinct cordiality. The interpretation was less good than is usually the case at this painstaking theatre.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

It should be of interest to our readers to note that the portrait of a lady on the variety stage is this year, for the first time on record, exhibited at the Royal Academy. The portrait in question is that of Miss Elsie Molloy, and hangs in No. 1 Room. It is the work of St. John Hare, and is a full-size picture.

Mr. Harry Lauder was to have been the chief attraction at a matinée at the Tivoli on Wednesday next; but his throat is still weak, and his medical adviser has forbidden him to add to his present work. The matinée has therefore been abandoned. Mr. Lauder appeared at the Alhambra on Tuesday, but was unable to answer to his number at the Tivoli on Thursday.

The three clever pen-and-ink drawings of Mr. Tom E. Murray—two as he appears in the Revue and one as himself—to be seen at the Coliseum, are the work of the popular comedian's only son, Mr. Frank Murray, who was formerly a student at Professor Hubert von Herkomer's art school at Bushey. Murray fils has exactly caught the characteristic smile of Murray compère.

Mr. Walter Slaughter, whilst walking along Upper-street, Islington, during the week, came across a hawker selling pirated copies of two of his compositions, namely, "The dear homeland" and "Gondola dreams," the latter of which is so great a "hit" in the Coliseum Revue. The justly incensed maestro instantly seized all the copies, and tore them to atoms, and then walked away, after first giving the fellow a piece of his mind. Other composers please copy.

The sketch Aunt Matilda, which lately concluded a most successful two weeks at the Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, is written by Alban Atwood and Russell Vaun, the authors of Oh, Susannah! and many other well-known plays.

Mr. Bransby Williams's new house at Selsey-on-Sea is finished, and the accomplished Dickens impersonator and his family find it a delightful experience to spend therein week-ends and holidays. The house has been christened "Elsinore," and it has splendid views of the sea. Mr. Williams goes to New York in August, and returns in time for pantomime under the Wyndham management at Glasgow.

La Milo, the beautifully-formed poseuse at the London Pavilion, will introduce a new series of statues at that house on Monday. They will include the following "gems from the galleries":—Andromeda, Sappho, the poetess, Diana, Canova's Venus, and Œnone, the Phrygian nymph of Mount Ida.

Mr. Sydney M. Hyman received a very gratifying cable from Johannesburg on Tuesday, that the opening ceremony of the magnificent New Empire in the capital of the Rand on Monday was an unprecedented success. The whole of the seats in the auditorium were booked before the doors were open. Miss Ada Reeve, who heads the bill of a very strong company, which also includes Mr. John E. Coyle, sang as many as six songs. The building, it is stated, has cost close upon £60,000, and is the finest ever erected in any part of Britain beyond the seas. There was a private view on the previous Saturday, which was attended by most of the Government officials at présent in Johannesburg.

An unauthorised turn not in the bill was given at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on Wednesday, when a party known by the name of Buller stood on the staircase leading to the circle, demanding contributions for the benefit of the Ealing Cottage Hospital. So well did he supplicate for help that many coins were dropped into his box by the Empire patrons. Since he started this form of collection Buller has added over £32 to the fund, and he will still go on collecting. Buller is a regular beggar of a dog belonging to a well-known Ealing tradesman, who during the time was enjoying himself inside the hall.

The third edition of that bright and brilliantly-mounted production the Revue will be presented at the Coliseum on Monday. With such excellent comedians and clowns as Mr. Tom E. Murray, Mr. R. H. Douglass, Mr. Arthur Conquest, and Mr. George Lupino, we need hardly say that new gags and business have been introduced night after night, and fun now is a constant quantity. New songs have also been introduced; and success is a certainty for another new number assigned to Mr. Harry Corner, who will give it for the first time on Monday. It is entitled "What has the moonlight to do with the girl?" and is a satire on love-sick youths in drawing-room ballads whose plaints of passion are garnished with both astronomical and meteorological commonplaces. They follow in the wake of that ideal lover Romeo, who swore by "the inconstant moon."

By the way, revues are not the very modern idea on the London stage that they are supposed to be; for was not that facile and graceful writer of fairy plays in verse, J. R. Planché, responsible for a "review" called The Drama's Levée; or, A Peep at the Past, produced at the Olympic on April 16, 1838?

In answer to several anxious correspondents, who are members both of the Variety Artists' Federation and the International Artists' Lodge, we desire to state that though the management of the Tivoli, Cape Town, at one time contemplated running that establishment on the two-houses-nightly principle, the idea has for the present, at any rate, been abandoned. In the report of the meeting of the I.A.L. on Sunday Paragraph 17 of Messrs. Hyman's contracts seems to have been misread. In that clause the management simply sets out that an artist shall perform as many times during the same performance as shall be desired. If the words in italics had been "during the same evening" they would have foreshadowed more than one house nightly.

"Short and musically sweet" is the happy catch phrase associated with a series of violin sketches, written by Edgar Dereve and specially composed by Clarence C. Corri, of the London Hippodrome. The first of these, aptly named "Heartstrings," has been successfully produced at the Richmond, and opens on the Moss and Stoll tour on June 18 next. Lovers of really good music—and they are many—will appreciate to the full these little episodes—particularly as they introduce one of our most talented violinists, Miss Gladys Hooley, a young lady whose abilities are most highly thought of in the very best musical circles.

"Rorke's Drift," Mr. Fred Ginnett's latest production, stirred the patriotic pulses of audiences last week at the Hastings Hippodrome. It is an exciting playlet, and is splendidly staged. A series of effective and patriotic incidents culminates in "Saving the Colours." Mr. Ginnett's splendidly-trained horse, "Shamrock," is a notable feature of the production.

"The Masked Lady" is a new sketch, written by Mr. Frank Dix, that will be produced at the Lyceum on Monday. Mr. Adeson will be supported by Mr. Bert Lloyd and Miss Clara Bernard. The music of the sketch has been composed by Jullien H. Wilson.

Mr. Charlie Jerome, comedian, was on Sunday initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers' Association, Terrier Spot being in the chair. Mr. G. P. R. Burgess has recently been elected honorary solicitor to the popular fraternity.

The directors of the Glasgow Pavilion, Ltd., have declared an interim dividend of 10 per cent., which must be as gratifying to them as it is creditable to their energetic general-manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.

An island site in that popular seaside resort Great Yarmouth is for sale. All four sides abut upon public roads, and the land is freehold, without any restrictions. This is an excellent opportunity for music hall entrepreneurs.

Mr. William Eastwood, acting-manager of the Colosseum Theatre, Oldham, for a number of years, has been appointed general-manager of the above. The position became vacant on the death of Mr. J. Ball. Mr. Eastwood has been at the theatre for upwards of eighteen years, having risen by sheer merit from the bottom of the ladder.

The members of the staff of the Edinburgh Empire Palace Theatre met in the Melville Hotel on Friday evening of last week, and presented Mr. Chas. J. Cawood with a case of pipes and Mrs. Cawood with a silver tea service on the retirement of Mr. Cawood from the post of acting-manager. Mr. Harry Stuart made the presentation in a felicitous speech, in which he alluded to the pleasant relationship that all along existed between Mr. Cawood and the staff. Mr. W. F. Frame, the Scotch comedian, who presided, proposed the health of Mr. and Mrs. Cawood in a humorous speech, to which Mr. Cawood feelingly replied.

As was stated in this column a short while back, considerable stir is taking place in Coventry in connection with the erection of variety theatres. One company has purchased a site for the erection of a permanent hippodrome, and the property which was standing upon the land has now been razed to the ground. In addition to this, the Coventry Corn Exchange is to be converted into a theatre of varieties. Plans providing for these alterations have already been submitted to the local authority, and the place will be capable of holding two thousand people. According to present arrangements, it will be open by August Bank Holiday. About £10,000 is being spent on the alterations and furnishing. The Corn Exchange was built fifty years ago, and the price paid for the building by the present owner, Mr. William Bennett, was £15,500.

Mr. H. Ford's magnificent new Palace Theatre and Gardens, Clacton-on-Sea, opens its doors on Whit Saturday, June 2, when an unusually attractive programme will be set before the public. One of the chief permanent turns engaged for the season will be The Scarlet Pompoms, in an entirely new and original pierrot entertainment, written, composed, and produced by Mr. Jack McLaren, who, together with Miss Marjory Lytton, Miss Maud Willey, and Mr. Ethelbert Edwards, will appear daily. The Scarlet Pompoms' best item is a twenty minutes' travesty of the now fashionable revue, which is a positive scream from start to finish, and which is certain to be heard of in London in the autumn. Mr. Edgar Curtis has charge of the front of the house.

Miss Lelia Roze, who, in answer to the request of the committee, travelled specially from London to be present at the recent Charity Carnival at Bristol, was delighted with her courteous reception at the station on her arrival in that town. Mr. Fred Leighton, the genial manager of the Empire, was waiting with a huge bouquet of beautifully-arranged flowers, of which he begged Miss Roze's acceptance on behalf of the Licensed Trades Committee.

After this pretty ceremony Miss Roze was escorted by Mr. Leighton and gentlemen of the committee to an open carriage drawn by four handsome greys. While driving through the crowded streets to the Charity Sports Miss Roze was immediately recognised, notwithstanding her long absence from Bristol, and was compelled to bow her acknowledgments again and again in answer to the cheers which greeted her everywhere.

Mr. James P. Moore, of the Theatre Royal, West Bromwich, has fallen into line with the De Frece Circuit, and is transforming his theatre into the Alcazar Hippodrome, opening in July next with a powerful combination on the two-shows-nightly system. This will be the only permanent hippodrome in the town.

Mr. Herbert Shelley, the actor vocalist, on Monday will produce at the Palace Theatre, Bordesley, an interesting dramatic song-scena of the period of 1787, with all the dresses of that date. The story is well worked out and powerfully constructed.

Mr. Charles Urban has extended the enterprise of his Trading Company to the North of England. He has just established a branch office at Manchester-chambers, 46, Market-street, Manchester, where under the direction of Mr. John G. Avery there is a complete equipment of projectors, cameras, and all accessories, and also the very latest films on the market.

Dr. Walford Bodie is rapidly recovering from his recent severe indisposition, and will resume work on the 28th, opening at the Hippodrome, Liverpool, for two weeks. This will make his fourteenth visit to the Mersey city, and his fourth visit within twelve months. He also holds another date this year for Liverpool, and two other dates for the Argyle, Birkenhead. The doctor has been carefully nursed at his beautiful Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff, N.B., by Princess Rubie (Mrs. Bodie), who has been untiring in her devotion. During his three weeks' illness the doctor has given his company and staff a holiday, paying full salaries. He wishes to thank his many friends through The Era for hundreds of letters and telegrams of sympathy.

Mr. E. Leslie Conroy, resident-manager of the Empire Theatre, Newcastle, has received the following letter:—"I am in receipt of a letter this morning from Captain Ijichi, of His Imperial Japanese battleship Kashima, stating how delighted the members of his crew and officers were with the entertainment you so kindly provided for them, and asking me to particularly thank you for the same.—Yours very truly, J. Baxter Ellis."

An interesting item in the programme at the Central Hall, Sheffield, last week was a new and original comedy by Miss Maud Randford, entitled Husbands Beware, which was cleverly sustained by Miss Frances Ferina and Mr. John Hitchins. The sketch, which abounds in mirthful situations and witty dialogue, was well received and highly appreciated. The authoress is the wife of Mr. J. Lacy Lyne, of the Palace, Attercliffe.

The Belgravia Society Entertainers—an excellent musical organisation composed of artists recently serving under the banner of Mr. Geo. Dance—have appeared at the Pier Pavilion, Worthing, this week, submitting a really high-class programme, under the musical direction of Mr. Sydney Shaw, the well-known conductor. Mr. Walter Champney, principal comedian, has scored heavily, and Mr. J. H. Goldsworthy's vocal contributions have proved an enjoyable feature nightly. Sons of the Sea, a nautical operatic scena, introducing the National Glee Singers in the persons of Messrs. E. Batting, R. Connolly, W. Coltman, and L. Wilson, has been rapturously received. Miss Adela Rane as Nancy Lee has made a most bewitching belle of the Fox and Goose hostelries; and the screaming absurdity, Tit-for-Tat, in which Mr. Walter Champney and Mr. J. H. Goldsworthy appeared, has fairly brought down the house.

Mr. Jesse Sparrow announces an excellent list of attractions at his complimentary benefit on Tuesday at the Camberwell Palace, which will also mark his retirement from the management there. His photograph will be presented to every member of the audience in all parts of the house.

At the moment of going to press the Alhambra is entertaining the German oberburgermeisters, burgermeisters, and councillors, who, after their reception at Buckingham Palace by His Majesty the King, are being regaled with a grand gala performance at the variety house which has played so conspicuous a part in international hospitality.

Mr. Arthur J. Barclay, the indefatigable manager of the Walthamstow Palace, is, we regret to learn, suffering from indisposition, brought on by a too assiduous attention to his duties. He has been ordered away for a short rest, which he is taking among the invigorating breezes of Herne Bay. Sea-baths, "to be taken every few hours," are already having a beneficial effect, and Mr. Barclay hopes to be back at the post of duty some time during the ensuing week. In the meantime the arduous responsibilities of management are being ably and agreeably filled by his "second in command," Mr. Geo. F. Slatter.

In the Companies Winding-up Court on Tuesday Mr. Justice Buckley dismissed a petition by the Sturtevant Engineering Company, Limited, for the compulsory winding-up of the London Coliseum, Limited. The petition, it appeared, was filed before the voluntary winding-up decided upon on the 10th inst., and counsel said a large number of creditors appeared to oppose. In the circumstances he thought it better not to press for an order if the company would pay the costs. This course was agreed to, and the petition dismissed accordingly.

Herr Sacco concludes at 6 p.m. to-day (Saturday) the thirty-second and last day of his "Sacco im Hungerhaus" at the Regent, Salford. On the twenty-ninth day of his fast he had lost 38lb. weight, and the bulletin said he was well, though feeling tired. After an interval of ten days for the purpose of recovering and feeding up, Sacco starts another fast at the Tower, New Brighton. Chester's Agency, Limited, Manchester, who are Sacco's sole agents, have succeeded in obtaining another Continental fasting man, "Beauté," who will commence fasting for a period in Blackpool in competition with Sacco in New Brighton.

Miss Margaret Ashton, whose charming song scena Winter has been one of the features of the Oxford programme, has this week been singing, among others, the stirring march song, "The Bugler of the Dragoons." The charming American cantatrice has in preparation another new military song, entitled "Marjorie," published by the Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd.

"Smart" is the word that best describes the dresses to be seen in the present programme at the Alhambra. The second edition of Parisiana can truly be called an edition de luxe; the Scenes in Holland are just as effective in a different style—like moving pictures from the brush of Mr. Tom Brown, R.I. The Yiullians Family, whose eccentric Risley act is equally daring and original, appear in up-to-date morning clothes, after the fashion of the Pantzer Brothers. Tumbling and acrobatic tricks, however, seem hardly in keeping with frock coats and silk hats. The lady of the party looks very pretty in a silk frock of brightest cerise, trimmed with silver bands, and full sleeves of a paler shade of chiffon. Mlle. Talma, of Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, appears in black, with a big rosette in her hair of Malmaison pink. The simplicity of her dress is an excellent contrast to the scarlet costumes of her assistants on the stage.

The question of the appointment of a Receiver of the Lyceum (1903), Limited, was mentioned before Mr. Justice Joyce on the 11th inst. on the application of a debenture holder for £100. Mr. Ward Coldridge, for the applicant, stated that Mr. Gatey, who appeared for the trustee for the debenture holders, and for £34,900 out of the issue of £35,000 debentures, agreed that Mr. Law, a gentleman appointed receiver out of court, should be continued in that position by his lordship. His lordship thereupon appointed Mr. Law to be receiver.

On Friday, the 11th inst., the owner of the public house at the corner of the pit entrance to the Lyceum, asked Mr. Justice Buckley for an interim injunction to restrain the management of that theatre from causing a nuisance and obstructing the passage which leads both to the public house and the pit. The passage is part of the Lyceum Tavern property, and three stalwart commissionaires stood at the entrance of the passage and shouted out: "This way to the pit! Ninepence to the pit stalls! Just going to begin!" The defendant said he would see that nothing was done to prejudice the plaintiff if the matter stood over.

Miss Louisa Peach, who is at Hammersmith this week with her sketch Taming a Husband, was the recipient last Saturday night, at the Britannia, of a large floral horseshoe and bouquet. Miss Peach is at the Hippodrome, Coventry, next week, and is booked at the Cambridge with her other sketch, Peggy and the Curate, on May 28.

Mlle. Roza, with her canine hippodrome, has returned to town for five weeks, after a most successful four months' provincial run, opening at the Ealing Hippodrome on Monday.—Mr. Jack Binns and Miss Rosie Lewin have returned to town from a successful provincial tour, and are at present rehearsing their comedy sketch, entitled The Specialist.—The Brewster Troupe, now performing at the Circo de Casino, Buenos Aires, have been re-engaged for two months longer, and expect to be back in England at the latter end of August.

The latest quotations of music-hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1⅞; Canterbury, 1; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅛; Empire (10s. paid), 1⅛; London Pavilion Ord., 4⅛; ditto Pref., 4⅞; London Coliseum, ⅛; Metropolitan, ⅞; Moss Empire, 4⅛; ditto, Pref, 3⅞; Oxford, 6⅞; Palace, 9s.; Tivoli, 5⅞; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 14s.

Mr. Henry Herne and Miss Ida Millais, whose tabloid drama, Blackmail, is such a popular production, have followed that startling water sketch with another, entitled Mavourneen, which has met with such a flattering reception at the Bedford this week that it will be presented for the first week of their fortnight's stay at the Queen's, Poplar, commencing Monday next.

Out of the fund publicly subscribed last year for the late Walter Howard, for many years the chief comedian and banjoist of the Moore and Burgess Minstrels, it is proposed to erect a memorial stone on his grave at East Ham Churchyard. The Rev. Reginald Morrow, of North Woolwich, has the matter in hand.

Mr. Arthur Elvy has been specially engaged for the opening week at the New Empire at Woolwich to produce his sporting scena, The Up-to-Date Tipster.—Mr. Billy Tucker will shortly produce in town a sketch entitled The Boxing Lady, written by J. F. Lambe.—Mr. Tom Carney and Mr. Chas. West, both names to conjure with at Yarmouth, open on June 9 at the Pavilion, Gorleston, for the season with a specially-selected troupe of entertainers.—Mr. Henry Carlton, the popular young comedian, is going to his native village in Lincolnshire for three weeks' rest by his doctor's orders. He will resume business on Monday, June 11.

The new agency established by Messrs. Melvin and Taylor at 434, Strand, has already gained the confidence of the best proprietors. Mr. Charles Melvin's experience with Lord George Sanger and Mr. T. G. Transfield has stood him in good stead in the circus variety world, and at the Marlborough Theatre, where he was lately in office, exceptional opportunities offered of finding talented artists.

The dog has been a familiar figure in drama on the regular boards for many a day, and various actors playing Bill Sikes have introduced intelligent canines of various breeds into adaptations of "Oliver Twist"; but no animal, we venture to say, has given such a complete exhibition of histrionic aptitude as Mr. Michael Braham's Royal York, one of the finest and largest bred bull terriers in England. We recently noticed his wonderful performance in the clever sketch The Burglar's Dog, produced by his master at the Cambridge, and such a distinct novelty should prove a most powerful drawing card. It is attracting big audiences at the Hippodrome, Boscombe, this week.

Walton and Lester, "the world's worst wizards," who have set all London laughing at their latest "Magic Muddle," leave town for a nine weeks' tour, opening on Monday next at the Hippodrome, Huddersfield.

The name of Miss Ethel Dove was accidentally omitted last week from our notice of the entertainment given at the Brighton Alhambra. The omission was the more regrettable as Miss Dove was one of the most popular artists on the bill.

Our readers will remember the sad fatality a few months since at Basle, Switzerland, which ended the life of William Bloomfield, professionally known as the Great Hermann and also as Herr Bosco, while he was performing the bullet trick. The deceased conjurer has left a widow and three young children, and for these a benefit concert is being organised at the new Town Hall, High Wycombe, on Wednesday, May 30. Contributions will be thankfully received by Mme. Bloomfield, 31, Queen's-road, High Wycombe.

The Palace Theatre programme for next week will include, among the principal turns, Toledo and Price, a couple of refined contortionists, whom Mr. Butt discovered recently in America. On Monday, the 28th, Rosario Guerrero will return to the Palace with a new and elaborately-mounted pantomime sketch, and, needless to say, a wardrobe replete with new "creations."

Miss Mollie Seymour's pretty number, "I want my little Golliwog," by Nat Clifford and Medley Barrett, has been purchased by Mr. David Day.—Miss Daisy Dormer, the new coon impersonator, scored a big success last week at the Paragon, where she deputised for Miss Fanny Fields, making her reappearance there after only one week's absence.—Miss Elsie Earle, chorus comedienne, returns to town on May 28, after a successful provincial tour.

Messrs. O'Malley and Brown, who are meeting with great success in the provinces with their original comedy sketch, are both married to the daughters of well-known artists, whose names were household words in the last generation. Mr. Fred O'Malley is the husband of Miss Agnes Feeney (daughter of the late Patrick Feeney) and Mr. Billy Brown is married to Miss Dulcie Lloyd, daughter of the late Arthur Lloyd, and at present a member of the Arthur Lloyd Trio. A coincidence worth recording is that Mr. Fred O'Malley, as a youth of 15, had the pleasure of teaching the late Katty King (Mrs. Arthur Lloyd) a step dance, which Mrs. Lloyd and Mr. O'Malley performed with great success in pantomime at the Shakespeare Theatre, Glasgow.

"The Fish and the Net" is the name of a sketch that will shortly be produced by Mr. Fred Eustace and Co.—Mount and Corelli, in their new musical duologue, have successfully deputised for Miss Victoria Monks at the Canterbury.—Great Scott, after a successful engagement at the Palais d'Eté, Brussels, returns to town on Monday, opening at the Queen's, Poplar.

Messrs. Stanley Damerell and Cecil Rutland produced on Monday, at the Bedford Palace, a very laughable and entertaining musical farce in one scene, entitled Mixed Bathing, written by the gentlemen named. The different parts were essayed by a capable company, including Mr. Geo. Warriner, Mr. Cecil Rutland, Miss Violet Walter, Miss Florence Radcliffe, Miss Marion Storey, Miss Maud Hope, Miss Ethel Clifford, and Miss Eva Dagmar.

"Dr. Harley's Experiment" is the name of the new and original farce that Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant will produce at St. George's Hall on Monday.

An exciting scene at the Empress, Brixton, had a sequel at Lambeth Police-court on Tuesday, when Nicholas Macdonald, 24, costermonger; Herbert Higgins, 22, carman; and James Costello, 19, costermonger, were charged with assault. It is alleged that the defendant and others created a great disturbance in the gallery. One of the attendants who endeavoured to restore order was bitten on the hand, while another is in the hospital with his jaw broken in four places. The magistrate remanded the prisoners.

The members of the Stockwell Angling Society (the club which numbers amongst its members many prominent professionals) on Tuesday evening assembled in force, at their headquarters at Brixton, to listen to a paper on "Fly-fishing for Coarse Fish," by Mr. Willie Warde, of Daly's Theatre.

The magnificent sign on Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter's window in Charing Cross-road advertising The Belle of Mayfair is the work of Mr. Robert Coan, the celebrated worker in aluminium, whose foundry in Clerkenwell is ever an orderly jumble of parts of airships, torpedoes, and submarines. Mr. Coan, who is no mean song-writer, divides his time between London and Clacton.

The 463rd meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held at the offices in Wellington-street on Tuesday. There were present Messrs. Fred Herbert (in the chair), Harry Blake, A. Borrelli, Chas. Coborn, Wal Pink, Arthur Rigby, George Preston, Harry Tate, Albert Voyce, Douglas White (hon. treasurer), and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed, and matters arising out of them dealt with. It was decided in the case of two members who had ignored the committee's repeated applications that Rule 15 should be put into operation.

The resignations from the committee of Mr. Pat Rafferty and Mr. Wm. Lee were accepted with regret. In respect to another member of the executive who had announced his intention of resigning owing to his engagements in the country precluding his attendance at the meetings, it was decided that the resignation, having been tendered under a misapprehension, be not accepted. Cases of refunds and insurance were considered, and instructions given. The secretary's financial statement for the week ending May 12 showed that thirty-nine new members had been added to the list, the receipts for the period alluded to amounting to £36 19s. 6d. and the expenditure £15 8s. 10d. The hon. treasurer's statement was also received and passed. The appointment of Mr. Robert Abel and Mr. Pat Carey, the two members next in order, to fill the vacancies on the committee, was approved.

Miss Alice Corisa, the latest recruit from musical comedy, made her début on Monday at the Metropolitan, and at the conclusion of her musical scena, The Toy Shopgirl, was immediately secured for a series of dates for both the Metropolitan and Chelsea.

Admiral Togo, the "Nelson of Japan," has sent an autographed letter of thanks to Mr. Frank Honey for a copy of his "Togo Barn Dance," which Mr. David Day has just issued.

Miss Millie Legarde's quaintly humorous number, "Nurseryettes," with which this charming artist is scoring such a signal success at the Tivoli nightly, has been accepted for publication by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., and forms No. 27 of their "Sixpenny Successes" series. It has been specially written and composed for Miss Legarde by two members of the firm, Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate.

Miss Annie Purcell has in active rehearsal, and will next week produce, on the Stoll tour, Messrs. George Arthur's and Kenneth Lyle's tuneful song "Good-bye, my little Flo," published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Company, which song she will also specially "feature" during her forthcoming Tivoli engagement.

A specially fine number from the pen of Mr. Joseph Tabrar, author and composer of many hundreds of successful songs, with the quaint title "I must trouble you to pack your trunk to-night," has just been acquired by the Monte Carlo Publishing Company for publication, and that "pushful" firm has already made arrangements with one of our foremost lady coon singers to exploit this taking number at all her engagements

Miss Florrie Gallimore, who has just produced with unqualified success Messrs. Harrington and Tate's new chorus song, "Old Calabar," which is one of the Monte Carlo Publishing Company's "Sixpenny Successes," has this week accepted from the same author and composer yet another new song, entitled "It isn't the money that makes the man," which will in the near future also be published by the same firm.

George Lashwood, who appears at the Hackney Empire next week, was not always the prosperous well-groomed star comedian he is to-day. In the early days of his career two other well-known music-hall celebrities and himself constituted themselves a "concert party" in the market place at Kidderminster. There every market-day they took it in turn to sing songs from 11 a.m. till 8.30 p.m. As during that time each was called upon to render eighteen or nineteen songs, it naturally followed that sometimes one particular number would be repeated. One day an old farmer, asked to contribute something, declined, saying: "They fellers be frauds. Whoi, yon with the curly hair he can sing only one tune. When Oi comes here this forenoon he be a-singin' 'Tommy, mak room for ee ooncle,' when Oi cooms back arter dinner he be a-singin' 'Tommy, mak room for ee ooncle' agen, and, dang me, if he doan't sing 'Tommy, mak room for ee ooncle' just now for a third go! When 'ee can sing more nor one song, laad, I'll gi' a penny, not before—no, no. I likes value for my money, I do, an' I sees that I get it."

Chirgwin is a prominent figure in the programme at Holloway Empire next week. The first appearance of this popular favourite was at the age of six, his father being at that time a famous circus clown. Twenty-seven years ago Chirgwin blossomed forth as the "White-eyed Kaffir" at the old Oxford. He was engaged for a fortnight, and stayed on for fourteen consecutive months. Chirgwin recently worked a splendid "gag" in connection with his favourite number, "My fiddle is my sweetheart." The chorus was amended as follows:

"My fiddle was my sweetheart,
But she's a broken toy;
Instead of her I far prefer
My little baby boy."

As the White-Eyed Kaffir sang the last line his little son Jim, aged one year and ten months, walked on to him, and the delight of the audience was expressed in enthusiastic applause.

At the Tivoli, Manchester, on Monday, was produced a grand military fantasia, by Frank J. Smith, on the famous song, "Let me like a soldier fall." The piece is respectfully dedicated (by permission) to Lieut.-General Sir H. M. Leslie Rundle, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., D.S.O., Commander-in-Chief, Northern Command. It is a very vigorous and graphic piece of work, quite clear in outline, and combining the sentimental and the martial with pleasing and impressive effect. The transitions are so smooth and natural that the whole fantasia hangs together like one piece, and the arrangement is done with musicianly skill and judgment. This piece is, in fact, rather ambitious, and is well worthy of being widely heard.

Mr. Edgar Le Brun (Brown) of Le Brun and Irene, has received, through the kind offices of the New York Clipper, most satisfactory news concerning his sister, Miss Adèle Purvis Onri, who was at San Francisco at the time of the catastrophe. The New York Clipper writes, under date May 5: "We have just received word from Miss Adèle Purvis Onri from Chicago to the effect that herself and associates escaped from the San Francisco fire, and saved all their property." Miss Onri is also sister to Mr. Frank Brown, of Buenos Aires.

The old-established theatrical and variety agency of George Sinclair and Co., hitherto carried on at Walcot-gardens, has been removed to more convenient premises at 118, Kennington-road, S.E.

At the meeting of the members of the I.A.L., on Sunday, at the Hotel Provence, there was a long discussion on internal affairs of great interest to the members. The secretary read announcements with reference to the new and better system of keeping the accounts of the death assessments due from members. Attention was also drawn to the fact that the Lodge prints normal contracts in three languages—German, French, and English—and that the same can be had at the rate of about 4d. each at the offices of the I.A.L.

Bro. 1377 opened a discussion on the conditions of contracts for South Africa, which till now had been for one show a night only. Next year, he said, they were to be altered to two shows a night. Performers were being written to this effect, and Paragraph 17 in the contracts was being referred to in support of this. The paragraph says that "the performer shall appear as often as the management shall desire." The chairman was of the opinion that this referred to one evening only. Bro. 382 said the alteration to two shows a night only referred to Cape Town. Bro. 1377 had had a letter, with a blank slip for signature attached, which said: "I agree to take Paragraph 17 as meaning that there will be two shows a night." Bro. 1356 maintained that asking for an affirmation of willingness to work two shows a night constituted another contract. Under the old contract, as it stands, performers could not be forced to work the two shows.

A brother related a curious experience of his. He had left some large photographs with an agent, and at the same time had taken a receipt for them which explained that they had only been lent. Upon the performer applying to the agent for the return of the photographs, he only received a bill for storage. The meeting decided that this matter might be laid before the Legal Committee.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

Grant and Grant, the American Octoroons, have an exceedingly smart and lively act in A Georgia Flirtation. Two black people, a man and a maid, make love to one another in their own characteristic way, and their duologue and duets are very delightful. The lady is vivacity itself, and both she and her partner dance in a sprightly manner, and the singing of "A Yankee-doodle Boy" provides an agreeable item in the turn. Miss Lily Gaston distinguishes herself as a male impersonator, her studies being all extremely well conceived, added to which she is a capable top-boot dancer. George and Edwards furnish plenty of merriment of the rollicking order with their knockabout comedy. There is plenty, too, to provoke mirth in the sketch Binks' Blunder, presented by Mr. Harry Russell and company. The story mainly concerns a squabble between husband and wife. The former brandishes a revolver and says he will commit suicide. So he and the servant Binks repair to the garden, where the terrible tragedy is to be enacted. A shot is heard, and immediately afterwards Binks returns to the lady of the house and says his master has scattered his brains on the cabbages. But the loving wife says that "her devoted spouse never had sufficient brains to scatter even on one cabbage." However, apparently she is assured that the deed is done. But the "dead" man returns and drinks what is supposed to be rat poison. Of course, he has been shrewd enough to change the glass containing the poison for another holding milk, and after causing temporary mental anguish to his better half, he confesses all, and the little act ends pleasantly. Mr. Harry Russell gives us an absurd character as Binks, whom he contrives to present in his most farcical manner.

Mr. Victor Travers is excruciatingly funny in his witty patter, his laughable solos and his quaint antics. His burlesque, coon, and other styles of business are exceedingly entertaining. Mr. Nat Watkins, too, is a successful merry-maker, whose whimsicalities cannot fail to arouse one's risible faculties. Miss Hulo Hodgson, Mr. Harry Lowther and company appear in their extremely amusing episode Barmaids, and there is not a dull moment while they occupy the stage. Mr. Harry Freeman gives us of his latest, and that, be it said, finds great favour with the audience. His songs, "Keep on doing it" and "Share it among the lot," are crowded with humorous points, which are made the most of in Mr. Freeman's skilful way. A gymnastic pot-pourri act is what the Arleys have to offer. These artists are assisted by some remarkably clever performing dogs who, along with their trainers, execute somersaults, leaps, and other athletic feats. For smartness and agility the Arleys and their terriers are to be highly commended, and the whole performance is one which excites a good deal of admiration if not wonderment. Nowadays the cinematograph must not be left out of reckoning, and in this respect Raymond's Bio-Tableaux holds an important position in the world of animated pictures. This week at Sadler's Wells we are being shown, among other novelties, a fine series of pictures bearing the title of "The Jealous Husband," which provide an interesting story in themselves.

Hearts of Oak is a latest sensational episode presented by Mr. Arthur St. John and his Britannia Sketch company. Sensational it is, and it fails not to excite the feelings of the galleryites. There is a brutal Moorish slave-owner who finds pleasure in ill-treating a slave-girl of English parentage. There is also a German Secret Service agent, who is conspiring with Muhamed Elsisis, the slave-owner, to destroy a British man-o'-war stranded on the coast of Morocco. In command of the vessel is Lieutenant Reginald Ferneaux, who, along with Midshipman Jack Bowler, comes on shore and intervenes between Muhamed and the slave-girl, and succeeds in bringing about a temporary cessation of the tortures to which the girl is subjected. Muhamed, of course, resents this interference, and later on seizes the opportunity of carrying out part of the German's evil designs by taking the Lieutenant prisoner and treating him to the bastinade as a gentle prelude to other atrocities, including a lingering death, which are prepared for the officer. However, the bluejackets from the ship are called up in time to prevent the worst happening. Mr. Arthur St. John acts with dramatic forcefulness in the rôle of the manly and gallant lieutenant, and Miss Ida St. John displays tragic intensity in the pathetic part of Stella, the slave-girl. As the scheming German Secret Service agent, Mr. Powell James furnishes a capital characterisation, his broken English being well sustained. Mr. Archie Grant portrays in vivid style the villainous propensities of the slave-owner; Miss Kitty Bennett is alert and lively as the midshipman, and Mr. Walter Clarke ably represents a Moorish donkey boy.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

Quite the biggest novelty in the current programme at the Holloway Empire is the performance of "the thought-reading dog," Pilu. This intelligent little animal was recently one of the principal attractions at the Empire in Leicester-square, and is now, with his owner and trainer, M. Ancillotti, on the Moss and Stoll tour. According to his master, it has taken no less than twelve years to educate Pilu; and it is a sad fact that the canine thought-reader has reached advanced years. He is seventeen; and that, alas! is old age for a dog. Senility is indicated by his slow walk and gravity of demeanour; but advancing years have not robbed Pilu of his intelligence. A row of cards bearing numbers are placed on the stage facing the footlights. The dog's owner, having made his way from the stage to the stalls, asks a young lady seated in the front row the number of her residence, and Pilu, with quaint deliberation, picks out the two cards which give the correct number. In similar fashion the little dog, after gazing intently at a gentleman, reveals his age; but when one of the fair sex inquires how many years will pass before she is married Pilu solemnly indicates a card bearing a nought. A more serious question is—"How long is the lady likely to live?" But Pilu knows, and the figures, a three and an eight, are shown. A gentleman is informed how much money he has in his pocket, and other questions of a similar kind are accurately answered by the canine wonder, who seems quite delighted when his task is over, and his master bids the audience good-night.

A Bachelor's Dream is quite a model music hall sketch. It is just the right thing for a bright variety programme. The bachelor dreams that he is married to some half-dozen ladies who represent different nationalities, and cause him no end of worry as they appear in quick succession and produce their certificates of marriage, the Spanish lady with a pretty little dagger in her right hand being by far the most formidable of the lot. The awakening is of course a happy experience. The playlet owes much of its popularity to the admirable manner in which it is played by Miss May Edouin and Mr. Edwards. The first-mentioned cleverly represents the several wives; and also gives her laughing song with much vivacity and artistic effect. Mr. Edwards submits a decidedly humorous embodiment of the bachelor who has a bad dream.

The Cole de Losse Duo are applauded for an exceedingly clever performance on the wire, one of them balancing the other upon his shoulders in a marvellous manner. The same artist also mounts and rides a bicycle placed on the wire; while his companion enlivens the proceedings with some comic business. Mr. Charles Austin as a comedian comes under the description of eccentric, and he manages to score all the time. The Stella Troupe of Vocalists and Dancers open with a pretty swing song. All of them are seated in swings, and melody and motion go together. They also distinguish themselves as acrobatic dancers, and their performance evokes much applause. The lady and gentleman known as Baker and Balfe win distinction as remarkably expert xylophone players, with some well-chosen selections. The gentleman also scores as a smart dancer. Mr. Josh Dixon, comedian, appears to have founded his style and methods on the model of the late Mr. Dan Leno; and sings a ditty in the character of the keeper of an asylum. He also appears as a smartly dressed dame with a ditty entitled "Archie," and concludes with a brisk dance. Flem and Brok, aerial pugilists, and Johnny Gilmore, comedian, are also in the bill, and a clever little girl with a song and dance has also appeared as an extra turn. Under the careful direction of Mr. C. W. Adams, the management of affairs in front of the house is quite satisfactory, and Mr. Henry W. May is still in charge of the orchestra at this hall.

THE LYCEUM.

A happy return to London has been made this week by Miss Gipsy Woolf, who at the fine variety house in Wellington-street is nightly evoking manifestations of applause, which are the guerdon of real ability and smartness. As her front name would suggest, Gipsy is a handsome brunette. She possesses a voice of good quality, a chic style, and any amount of enthusiasm for her work. With six little maids, she animates with her brightness and charm a pretty woodland glade, and appears as the queen of a caravan to be seen in the foreground. It is an ideal camping ground for the dark-skinned Romany boys and girls, who are regaled with a most exhilarating vocal description on the part of Miss Woolf of "My bungalow in Borneo." This is followed by a dance that is absolutely infectious in its exhilaration. Miss Woolf is called and recalled, and must be very gratified at the success of one of the most tastefully-mounted scenas that we have seen for many a day. The singing honours of the excellent programme fall very properly to Miss Ghita Corri, the famous operatic prima donna, whose fine and well-cultivated voice fills the magnificent house. Miss Corri calls her scena Waiting, and as an English girl costumed in the fashion of 1770 she sings Millard's song of that name, and sings it with wonderful verve and entrain. Her second number, "Carmena," is given in the dress of a Spanish cigarette-maker of to-day, and the difficulties of the song are easily surmounted by this well-endowed and cultured vocalist.

Mr. Charles Coborn, who is one of the most finished comedians to be seen on the variety halls, submits some excellent character-studies in his first number. He delineates with many an artistic touch the peculiarities of the soldier, the sailor, the policeman, and the coster, and does so without a red rose, baggy trousers, or an exaggerated make-up. He accentuates his success by his rendering of "Four fingers and a thumb," a well-written number, which should be capable of indefinite extension. It is a refreshing experience to find a comedian who does not stoop to blatant methods scoring so gratifying a success.

The Prince of Monte Carlo, a merry musical comedietta by Paul Knox and Harry Roxbury, has just sufficient plot to justify the introduction of some catchy musical numbers and a very droll duel scene. Mr. Harry Roxbury, who has played Sergeant Lightning for nearly a thousand times with Mr. Fred Karno's Dandy Thieves company, appears as Archibald Longfellow, who comes from Scotland Yard in answer to a telegram from Lady Carr—very desirous of unmasking a couple of adventurers who are her guests. On his arrival the detective is taken for the Prince of Monte Carlo, and that nobleman, nothing loth, assumes the rôle of criminal investigator. Archie accuses a fire-eating Count of cheating at cards, and that shady frequenter of Continental gambling saloons, being a most successful duellist, insists on a meeting. This is an exceedingly funny farcical scene, which puts the success of the sketch beyond any possible shadow of doubt. Mr. Roxbury is a genuine comedian, and his best credentials are the shrieks of laughter that are to be heard all over the house at his droll sword-play and still droller remarks. Miss Ethel Bryant makes a graceful and fascinating Lady Carr; Miss Vashti Wynne puts real dramatic force into her rendering of Denise; and the other members of the company give excellent support, especially the actor who plays the Count. The sketch is in three scenes, and the gardens at Monte Carlo and the illuminated grounds at the Casino are excellent sets for which Mr. Fred Boden is responsible. The lyrics and music, written and composed by Mr. Paul Knox, are bright and inspiriting.

The dramatic attraction of the bill is Right's Right, a combination of mirth and sentiment that in its day has done excellent service at the provincial theatres. It is presented in tabloid form by Mr. Adderley Howard and company, and its principal importance is derived from the fact that Miss Dolly Elsworthy, a young actress with a decided bent for low comedy, is seen in the part of Venus—a girl who has been kidnapped in her childhood and brought up among thieves. She is a strange mixture of good and evil. Indulging in paroxysms of anger and amusing bits of irritability, she is yet open to the influences of affection, and her heart melts under the influence of sisterly devotion The various facets of the character give Miss Elsworthy great opportunities, of which she makes the very most, and the house is at once delighted by her clever humorous touches and impressed by her softer shading of the character. The support is good, Mr. Adderley Howard being responsible for a characteristic rendering of the good-hearted farmer, John Mayne.

An eccentric acrobatic and contortionist act is contributed by Abel and Welsh, whose knockabout business and table tricks are heartily laughed at. Miss Gladys Whitton, in the early portion of the programme, sings with expression "In the dear homeland"; Miss Stafford, from North America, is responsible for some well-executed buck-dancing; and Raymond's bio-tableaux include some excellent films; and Miss Ada Parker entertains with success as a comedienne and dancer. Mr. Tom Barrasford, jun., is a most courteous acting-manager, and his urbanity is reflected in the attendants.

A SITTING for public examination was held last week at the Bankruptcy Court in the case of Humphrey Ellis Brammall, described as of Piccadilly-circus-mansions, W. The accounts showed liabilities £2,611, of which £2,101 was returned as unsecured, and no available assets. Debtor said since 1900 he had been engaged at the Crystal Palace and elsewhere in the production of pantomimes, theatrical and circus performances, and variety entertainments.

AT the date of the receiving order he was producing a pantomime and a circus at the Crystal Palace, and was also under agreement to provide entertainments at the Kursaal, Southend, but that agreement had been determined. He had also been connected with a music-hall and dramatic agency in Shaftesbury-avenue, for the purpose of which he provided about £200. His present position was chiefly due to the costs of various actions, executions, and bankruptcy petitions, estimated at £1,000; to loss on the production of pantomimes at Sheffield and Sunderland at Christmas, 1904-5, also about £1,000; and to his expenses during the past year having exceeded his receipts. The sitting was adjourned.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

CHAT WITH MR. G. DE GRACIA.

The clever elephant act, presided over by Mr. G. de Gracia, now to be seen at the Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, has created a good deal of admiration from visitors to that house. One wonders how much patience and ingenuity have to be expended before these animals reach that degree in their education which permits of their performing on the stage.

We question Mr. de Gracia. "One of the most difficult things to teach an elephant," he says, "is to get them to stand on their hind legs and on their heads. But the cylinder trick performed by my three elephants entailed an enormous amount of hard work on my part before it could be called by any means perfect. It was teaching, teaching, teaching and practising twice daily for six months. They like their work now, and seem to put their heart and soul into it. Now, the cricketing business also took a long time to teach. I could not at first get the the animals to grip the bat. They are extremely nervous animals, and very sensitive about their trunks. Trouble? I am constantly having trouble with them. For instance, I am compelled to keep a man in their stable every night, or the animals would get frightened and make a noise. In fact, the elephants have now become so accustomed to seeing a man in their stable, whom they regard as a certain preventative agent against rats, that they would scream out if the keeper were absent."

Mr. de Gracia says that it is difficult to say what is the life of a performing elephant. "It might be alive to-day and dead to-morrow. One trouble we have with them is that we cannot give them medicine when they require it. If you put it into their food they detect it and will avoid it. Put sugar around it and they will eat the sugar and leave the medicine."

Mr. de Gracia, whose elephants were seen at the Palace last year in a successful two months' engagement, is remaining at the Shaftesbury-avenue place of entertainment for three or four weeks longer. His wife, by the way, was the one-time celebrated lady equestrienne, Mlle. le Blonde. The subject of this interview started in the profession as a circus rider at the age of six, doing, in addition, acrobatics. He continued in that line until 1902, when a severe accident, which occurred in Bombay, made it impossible for him to continue the equestrian performances. He was years ago considered one of England's cleverest bareback somersault riders, and he tells us that he found no one to compete with him as an all-round equestrian. He went over to America and Australia, and challenged performers in those countries, but no one appeared inclined to enter into a contest. During the time he was laid up at the hospital recovering from his accident referred to, the house-surgeon, Colonel Boyd, and a personal friend of Mr. de Gracia, advised him to enter another profession, because the following of an acrobatic career was now out of the question.

"Having been so many years in the circus, and having trained ponies, horses, and elephants, I again took to the latter animal. The first elephants I got were a couple from Rangoon. One died, and the other is still with the circus in India that my mother-in-law has charge of. I then purchased three more and started training them, for you must remember that they were quite wild. It was a long and tedious job. However, after some travelling about, we reached Poona. Then there was a wait of three months for reliable weather, which finally came, and we had a most delightful trip to England. I have been in this country now three years this summer."

It is a rare and a lengthy number of notabilities that Mr. de Gracia has performed before. In India he was quite a popular personality, and his show received high favour from all classes. His father, William Batty Harmston, had a circus in the North of England for a great many years, and older members of the profession will doubtless easily call him to mind.

A MOVEMENT is afoot among the prominent song-writers of London to present Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sansum, of the Royal George, Charing Cross-road, with a tangible recognition of regard and regret on the occasion of their forthcoming retirement from the management of the famous hostelry, which is known throughout the profession as The Song-writers' Arms. The popular couple, who succeeded Mr. James Kirk—the purchaser of a short lease of the Oxford in October, 1890, for £27,100—are proceeding to another sphere of usefulness.

JACQUES INAUDI, who gave a séance of phenomenal calculation at the Hotel Cecil on Thursday afternoon, was giving on one occasion a demonstration of his powers before M. Bourgeois, the Minister of Public Instruction in France, when M. Poincarré, a well-known mathematician, thought to disconcert him by setting him a problem which was incapable of solution, but Inaudi detected it at once, and in solving a problem from an advanced text-book he gave a result which did not tally with that set out in the text-book. The triumph of having given him a poser was short-lived, for on a careful examination the man of figures was found to be correct. M. Inaudi is one of the principal attractions at the London Hippodrome.

"COPPELIA."

A Romantic Ballet in Two Scenes,
by Ch. Nuitter and A. Saint Leon,
Music by Léo Délibes, with additional numbers
by C. J. M. Glaser.
Produced, and Dances arranged, by Alexander Genée, at the Empire,
on Monday, May 14.

Swanilda	MLLE. ADELINE GENEE
Franz	MISS D. CRASKE
Coppélius	MR. FRED FARREN
Coppélia	MISS E. COLLIER
Laszlo	MR. P. SUNDBERG
Irma	MISS ELISE CLERC
The Burgomaster	MR. A. YOUNG
His Wife	MISS M. PASTON
Innkeeper	MISS SHEPHERD

Coppélia, the most charming production of Délibes, has taken thirty-six years to reach London, having been produced on May 25, 1870, at the Paris Opéra, where the composer held the position of accompanist and second chorus master (under Victor Massé). Having been commissioned to compose the ballet of La Source (Nov. 12, 1866) in collaboration with the Polish musician Minkous, he displayed such a wealth of melody as a composer of ballet music, and so completely eclipsed the composer with whom he had as a favour been associated, that he was at once asked to write a divertissement called Le Pas de Fleurs, to be introduced into the ballet of his old master, Adolph Adam, Le Corsaire, for its revival in October, 1867. Previous to his success in writing ballet music Délibes had been responsible for the scores for several short comic operas for the Théâtre Lyrique, and a number of operettas for the Folies Nouvelles, the Bouffes-Parisiens, and the Variétés. He gave up his position at the Opéra in 1872 on his marriage with the daughter of Mlle. Denain, a former actress at the Comédie Française; but he returned to it, and produced there a grand mythological ballet Sylvia, which confirmed his superiority in dance music.

The work, as now produced with that lavishness and beauty which have made the name of George Edwardes world-famous, is in two scenes, both painted by Joseph Harker, who realises the picturesque beauty and warmth of atmosphere in a village on the borders of Galicia. Herein we are introduced to the heroine of the pretty story—Swanilda, a Slav maiden. Her jealousy is excited by the manifest attentions paid by her lover Franz to a flaxen-haired beauty to be seen seated in the window of Coppélius, a doll-maker, whose ingenuity and inventive power have apparently excited some uncanny suspicions among the ignorant Galician folk. Swanilda has her suspicions as to the identity of her rival, and with a number of her girl friends follows her sweetheart—who climbs through the window—into the workshop of the doll-maker. There she discovers, to her delight, that Coppélia is a manufactured beauty, dependent for movement upon wires and springs and clockwork. Her innate love of mischief prompts her to take the place of the elaborate piece of mechanism. The old doll-maker is at first extremely puzzled, but his mystification gives way to transports of delight as he watches what he thinks is his masterpiece execute the most elaborate dancing. He soon discovers his mistake, however, but his disappointment and rage are appeased by the gift of a purse of money by the burgomaster and his wife, the curtain falling on the reconciliation of Franz and Swanilda.

A striking number in the first scene is the waltz, and another that reflects the true Slav spirit is the melody entitled, we believe, "The Ear of Corn," which is the basis of a mazurka. In the second scene is a quaintly original theme that accompanies the movements of the automata manufactured by the eccentric Coppélius. The score was written in no haste, and bears the signs of very careful polish, the result being a sweet and melodious work.

It was in Coppélia that Mlle. Genée made her début as a première danseuse at the Opera House, Munich, and more recently danced in it at Copenhagen before the late King of Denmark and our Queen Alexandra. It was perhaps partly due to Her Majesty's expressed wish on this occasion that led Mr. George Edwardes to produce it; but a more probable reason is the presence at the Empire of the prima donna assoluta who is absolutely an ideal representative of the heroine. Mlle. Genée's personal success on Monday evening was secured ere a note of Délibes' score was played, for she is one of the most popular artists in London; but great as have been her artistic triumphs hitherto, she far surpasses any of them by her delightful performance of Swanilda. She has the stage to herself in the Galician heroine's opening waltz, in which her energy and grace are unsurpassable. The Slav theme and variations, in which the incomparable Adeline leads the ballet in a series of slow movements, enable her to show the perfection of her grace and rhythmic movement. Into the automaton dance in the second scene she imparts a touch of sly humour which proves that had not Terpsichore claimed her for her own Thalia would have welcomed her as one of her votaries. At the conclusion of the ballet she came to the footlights carrying a basket of lovely flowers that had been presented to her behind the scenes, and later she dragged on Mr. George Edwardes, who may here be congratulated on an unmistakable success. Mr. Fred Farren has no solo dance, and his part of the doll-maker, though significant, is small. He shows himself, however, to be a clever comedian by the "business" he introduces. Mr. P. Sundberg, whom we have but recently seen as a courtly dancing master of the Fragonard period, is now a Slovak pedlar, with an agility in the national csárdás that is positively amazing. He receives the very best aid possible from Miss Elise Clerc. Nor should we forget the clever work of Miss D. Craske as Franz, nor that of Miss E. Collier as Coppélia. Misses E. Badham, B. Hill, L. Osmond, E. Shaw, and Bosetti are also brilliant examples of the rare efficiency of the Empire corps de ballet. The dresses by Wilhelm have all the brilliancy of colouring that one looks for in Czech and Tsigane costumes; but the colour scheme is never garish or obtrusive, but always a delight to the eye. During the entr'acte Délibes' celebrated march "Les Cloches," with its pretty bell effects, was played by the orchestra under Mr. Sydney Jones, who conducted the ballet with his cusomary effectiveness.

One of the most artistic contributions to what may be termed the strictly variety portion of the programme is Mme. Miette, who is responsible for three pretty chansons, to which she plays her own accompaniment on the guitar. Miette appears as La Cigale, and sings with charm, point, and rare expression. Another artist who receives much deserved encouragement is Ludwig Amann, who realises by facial expression and various wiggings some of Europe's leading statesmen, past and present. Bismarck, Gladstone, and Beaconsfield represent European politics of the past, and the Count de Witte, M. Delcassé, the Kaiser, and Edward VII. are world-famous celebrities of the present. M. Amann is not always quite clear in his announcements, but to his likenesses the adjective "striking" can be most appropriately applied. Simms and Simms are clever humourists as well as musicians. The Great Lumars finish up a clever and eccentric acrobatic show of ground tumbling and a table performance by a brilliant electric display, the incandescence being mostly in evidence on the dress of the lady—a very attractive performer, who is rapidly whirled round a bar held aloft by her two male partners. Morris Cronin and troupe, who have a special scene, perform some wonderful club juggling; and other turns include Bert Earle and the Bros. Martine.
